BOOTLE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual F.F. show held July 6, in St. Matthew's Parochial Hall. Judge, Mr. A. Wellings (Prescot) who gave every satisfaction. The Sec., Mr. Hamilton, had everything in business-like order, and was ably supported by a good chairman in Mr. Rimmer and a good hard-working committee in Messrs. McNulty, Young, Lobb, Rawsthorne, Skilling, and Foster. Mr. McNulty won special for best bird with a cl. yell. Yorks., to which Mr. J. Young ran close with a clear buff, and with a good moult both will be heard of later. Principal winners of specials were Messrs. Algie, McNulty, Holden, Lobb Young, Tulloch and Bracken. The novices showed some very nice birds, which promise keen competition for annual old show. Winners of specials: Messrs. Skilling, Rawsthorne, Stewart, Eaton and Evans. Mr. Rawsthorne won sp. for best novice bird with a self yellow green.

CHAMP., CL. YELL. (8): 1, sp, McNulty, gem for shape, type and quality, good colour; 2, Lobb, also very typical; 3, Algie. BUFF (10): 1, Young, true Yorkie, good head, well braced wings, plenty of leg; 2, McNulty; 3, Algie. UNMKD. YELL. (6): 1, Rawsthorne, ticked head, nice type; 2, Young, more heavily mkd., very good birds; 3, Bracken. BUFF (7): 1, S. Lobb, very nice hair, good feather; 2, Holden, excellent type and quality. GREEN SELF YELL. (9): 1, Algie, good all-round bird; 2, McNulty; 3, Rimmer. BUFF (8): 1, McNulty, good colour and markings; 2, Lobb, good length, nice type and quality; 3, Young. FOUL YELL. (6): 1, Holden, good colour, type and quality; 2, Algie, very similar; 3, Tulloch, bit down in condition. BUFF (5): 1, Algie, very nice throughout; 2, Foster; 3, Bracken. CLASS 17: 1, Holden; 2, Rawsthorne. NOVICE; YORK. CL. YELL. (4): 1, 2, Skilling, pair very nice birds; 3, Eaton. NORTH-WEST LONDON F.A.

A small show of first feather at the Stag's Head, Camden Town, July 20th. The association is only recently formed, but is rapidly increasing in membership. Cage birds were not numerous, but some nice specimens were staged. Mr. J. R. Young, the hon. secretary, made every arrangement for the comfort of the birds.

CANARY: 1, spl best in show, Trafford, a very nice, good positioned cinn. Yorks., in rattling feather; 2, Smith, yell. Nor., good body; 3, Boytt, varieg. Nor., rather thin. MULES: 1, 2, Smith, a nice dark jonque Linnet-Can. leading, followed by a flush-faced dark buff Goldie-Can. BRIT.: 1, 3, Foster, the leader a rich coloured Linnet, well shown; 2, S. Smith, Goldie, deep coloured face; res, Blake, promising young Blackbird, that needed a larger cage, and should do well.

HIGHGATE HAMPSTEAD, C.B.S.,

F.F. show held July 13, Judge Mr. Oldaker, whose awards met with general approval. The quality of the birds deserved that there should have been a better attendance. The show arrangements were in the capable hands of Messrs. Milsom, Knight, Bonnis and Wing, under whose management everything worked smoothly. From the catalogue sent by the hon. sec. it appears that the principal winners were:—

CHAMP. NOR.: Messrs. Sparke, Lovegrove and Lovegrove, and Dann. YORKS.: Armstrong, Shakespeare. AMAT. NOR.: Byne, Hyde. YORKS.: Bush, Knight. CRESTS, BORD. and MULES: Jones. NOV. SCUNTHORPE F.S.

Tenth members' show, held Victoria Rooms, Furnace Arms Hotel, July 20th, writes Mr. S. C. Lings. The entries were not up to the average. Mr. H. Harding (Grimsby) judged. The cup for best Canary was won by Mr. C. Brown, and Mr. S. Lings was the winner of cup for best cage bird, and Mr. Ward of cup for second best. From the catalogue sent we note the chief winners were Messrs. Lings, Moore, Brown, Hulton, Frith, Stainton, Ward, and Milner and Meanwell.

TONG AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The June issue of "British Birds" (Messrs. Witherby and Co., High Holborn, one shilling monthly) opens a new vol., No. 6. From this number onwards the nomenclature used will correspond with that of the "Hand-list of British Birds" which will be reviewed later. The principal article is on the Lesser Black-backed Gull, by Mr. P. R. Lowe, and in this is pointed out the difference between the British bird, here classified for the first time as a sub-species (Larus fuscus britannica) of the L fuscus of Linnaeus, now styled, in accordance with the new system of nomenclature, L fuscus fuscus. Mr. J. L. Charlton contributes an interesting account of the keeping in captivity of a Tengmalm's Owl, which had been "winged" by a gunner while out shooting. The bird, of which there are only about twenty recorded appearances in England, soon recovered from the fortunately slight injury inflicted by the shot, and developed into an intelligent pet bird. (Another instance of Tengmalm's Owl having been taken alive is recorded in the same issue). The value of the organised system of ringing wild birds as a means of adding to our knowledge of their movements is well shown in an account of the ringing of a Starling in Berkshire at the end of January of this year. In April, the bird was found dead on the snow in Finland, some twelve hundred miles in an E.N.E. direction from the locality in which it had been marked. A Swallow rung in 1911 returned this spring to the same place after its winter migration, affording another instance of the undoubted fact that individual birds nest in the same place year after year, so long as they escape the dangers of migration. In this case, the hen Swallow, which had also been marked, was missing, her place being taken by another hen. The Magazine is full of notes of great value to all who are interested in British birds.

A Comprehensive Manual on Fancy Mice.

Many cage-bird lovers are interested also in the fancy mice cult. To these we can recommend "Fancy Mice," by C. J. Davies (L. Upcott Gill, Bazaar Buildings, London, one shilling). The work, of which this is the fifth edition, deals with their housing, feeding and general management, breeding and hybridisation, colour, and other varieties, and their exhibiting. Sound advice is given to the beginner, and the possessor of this manual should have little difficulty in mounting to the top rung of the mouse fancy.

A 24-Year-old Goldfinch-Canary Mule.

Sir,—Is twenty-four years a record for a Canary-Goldfinch Mule to live? It was hatched at the Maid's Head Hotel, Norwich, in June, 1888. My brother gave it to me the following September. It died this morning, July 18th.

Does Supplying Egg-shells Make Birds Egg-eaters?

Sir,—I beg to thank Messrs. Oates, Kemp, Dowling, and Miss Yaldon for their information, and will mention my reason for my letter. A friend of mine has twelve Norwich Plainheads, all six pairs laid about the middle of May, but as each clutch was completed, all the eggs disappeared. This happened all through the season, except in one case, when two young were reared. There is no possibility of mice or rats getting to the nests, so I thought that the use of egg-shell was the cause.

The Breeding of Greenfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids.

Sir,—Being a keen reader of Cage Birds from the first number, I thought I would try hybrid breeding this season. I have had one fertile egg from a house-moulted cock Greenie and field moulted hen Bullie, but unfortunately the chick died during rearing, as there were four Goldie Mules under the same hen, which were three days older, therefore, it had a poor chance. I hope to have better luck next time. I am also trying for the Redpoll-Bullie cross. I wish your valuable paper, Cage Birds, every success.

How Can We Legally Combat the Cat?

Sir,—We have proved that we can keep birds in an outdoor aviary, but the question now is, how about the night-prowling, thieving, glaring-eyed cats? They can climb anywhere, and if they can force their head through, their body follows. You cannot even hang a cage outside your house. What can we do? How far can we go in combating the trespassing cats and not break the law? To sue a neighbour for damage done by his cat when trespassing may be legal, but it is not at all inviting.

A Visit to a Well-known Scottish British Bird Fancier.

Sir,—A visit to that well-known British bird keeper, Mr. Crossley Sykes, of Musselhurgh, convinced me as to the truth of the adage: "What a tyke does he does well." I found him busy attending to his pets, and as his stock is well over a hundred, I at once asked why he kept so many. Surely not all for exhibition? "No, I am not an enthusiast," he replied. I ventured to hint at Hybrids. "No; I don't breed birds." Knowing too well that Mr. S. is not a dealer, I am forced to the conclusion that he keeps them because he simply can't help it, and that is the proper spirit. Before going over the stock, his aviaries merit a description. They are in a garden, and consist of two compartments—one fitted with bushes forming a large fly, wherein the various occupants were fairly enjoying themselves—a contrast with their more fortunate (?) brethren outside who have had to endure rain, rain, without cessation, for the past month. The other compartment is a combination of large flights and stock cages. The first to be inspected were the Brambles, nine of them, headed by the National and Palace winner, looking very fit. The rest, though very promising, are overshadowed by comparison, though one, excelling in spangle, depth, expanse and flank spotting, should make a "double event" quite possible. The Chaffies and seven in number; another Eclipse here, the Bathgate winner, but his laurels are not quite so safe, for a youngster of the right boxy feather and colour just wants that embonpoint which will come with age, and "Greek will meet Greek." The Buntings are represented by five species, my fancy being divided between a grand Reed and a Snow. The latter excelled in colour, and was steady to the verge of impudence. The Hawfinches muster five, all British, two of them possessing that colour which is rarely found in the big alien, and free from that frontal pallor which is fatal to many Continentals. I venture to propose an alliance with the smallest and a fine hen Greenfinch, whose actions are suggestive of a desire to multiply, and indicate a large flight as being a suitable site for the experiment. But "No," replies Mr. Sykes (though he has bred Hybrids here in spite of himself). However, fine Yellow and Cinnamon hens paired to a good Siberian Goldie and Linnet respectively, give promise of a stimulation to his enthusiasm in that direction. Twenty-four Linnets, and I fail to spot a mediocre specimen in the lot. Two or three have the proper type, lacing, tone, and freedom from openness which should attract a judge's pencil. I am beaten in my efforts to count Lesser and Mealy Redpolls, but the quality of the latter may be judged by the fact that I was offered a score here as a present during the great influx of two years ago, and I know Mr. S. had choice of hundreds. Seven Siskins, all Jonques, and equally amorous; fourteen Twites (aw winnut say nowt) and eleven Greenfinches. Why, oh why, do the best coloured Greenies have the smallest heads? We come to the softbills: A nice 'Gale, but in the rough yet. Very few 'Gales are kept north of the Tweed; Grey and Yellow Wagtails, all looking very fit; Common and Glossy Starlings, the former a great pet, and unbeaten as yet; the latter splendidly iridescent; a Golden-fronted Fruit-sucker, immature yet, but very fine in promise and power of song; and a truly superb Tanager completes the list. The commissariat takes some providing. I fail to make my arms meet round a sheaf of "whiteheads"; Mr. S. supplies these unlimited. Shepherd's purse—he must have a wheelbarrow for that lot. A long crack about various birdy problems terminated one of the most enjoyable and instructive visits I have ever paid.

The Bramblefinch-Canary Cross.

A Fertile Egg Obtained.

Sir,—Seeing in your last issue of Cage Birds a Mr. F. J. Poole is asking for information from your Mr. Weston, re Bramblefinch-Canary hybrids, I might say I have a pair, and the hen is now sitting on one fertile egg, and I am hoping for a nice young one (but I must not count my chicks before they are hatched!). I should be extremely pleased to hear from any of your readers if they have ever heard of a Bramblefinch-Canary Hybrid being bred?

A Hardy Annual.

The Novice Question Once Again.

Sir,—I see our "hardy annual" has cropped up again! Mr. Long asks why shows do not pay; and answers himself by saying that "Money is at the bottom of it." In the words of the poet, "Who ever would have thought it?" Next he instances an amateur who was not showing because there was no one he could beat; this amateur shows great intelligence. By the way, how did he know he could not beat anybody? Another said there were no sportsmen amongst the novices. What a pity our friend the amateur just mentioned got promoted. How does Mr. Long know that the amateur and professional gets more wages than the novice; and how can he be sure that the bird which wins in the open will win again among the novices? As regards the man who is a professional in one society and novice in the other, there is nothing very strange about that, although I do not know a case myself, and doubt whether Mr. Long does, unless he belongs to the society of which Mr. Long and myself are members. Then he may be both professional and novice at once, and in the same society! The professional who wanted three shows at the price of two ought to be suited with the new State Insurance scheme! However, putting all jokes aside, what is it Mr. Long wants? More classes in the novice section? Certainly; more classes by all means. More classes in the novice section means fewer entries in each class and a better chance of the novice getting three firsts and taking on the higher stage. But can Mr. Long guarantee to replace the novices as fast as they will be promoted under his scheme?

E. H. Fulcher.

Sir,—I agree with Mr. Long that if you want a good bird you must pay for it; they are not to be found in the street—neither is a man's time, study and experience, to say nothing of expense. If it is so easy for a novice to get his three firsts so that he has to show amongst professionals, I should like to ask Mr. Long how long he has been a novice, and how long he will be in getting his one first in a full class? Allow me to tell this gentleman that there are not a better lot of sporting novices in the Fancy than the novices that belong to the club alluded to. What is Mr. Long going to do for the novice with "20 shillings a week?" Is he going to open a subscription for them, or give them advice through the Fancy Press? Those who have bought birds which can win in the open should be forced to show in the open, he says, but how can they be forced into the open when there is no open section? Mr. Long says the first year amateurs did not mean to fill the pockets of the professionals and older amateurs. Now it was a first year amateur who had best bird in the show, also two firsts, one second, one third, one fourth, and vhc. Let me tell Mr. Long it was a novice in the British section who opposed the "professional in Yorkshires who wanted to join in December, and let his subscription cover the next year." I challenge him to prove that "others have joined in the same manner." He says: Let secretaries understand that you will not fill the coffers of their societies, make them cater for you, make them put more classes on for you. Let me tell him these are not "one-man societies." It is the members who put the classes on, and not the secretaries. What classes have you, Mr. Long, proposed during the last year? None. We novices only see you occasionally. My advice is, if you want to pick a grudge against a fellow member, come to the meetings, where you will get a fair hearing, and tell him to his face, not run to the Fancy Press.

Experiments in the Rearing of Hybrids & Other Young Birds.

Interesting notes by Miss Janette Reeves, the breeder of last season's sensational Chaffinch-Greenfinch and many other remarkable Hybrids.

Sir,—At the last meeting of the National British Bird and Mule Club the following letter was read from Miss Reeves, of Wateringbury, who received a hearty vote of thanks from those present for her kindness in supplying the interesting and novel information contained in it. Miss Reeves wrote: "I have always understood that Goldfinches, Bullfinches and Greenfinches for the first few days feed their young very largely on insects, and to prove this I have put young Bullfinches in the nest of the Greater Tit. You should have seen them grow. I have also put Bullfinches' eggs in Chaffinches' nests, and they grew fast, and made fine large birds. I have put a Canary's egg in a Great Tit nest, and it also grew into a fine fat bird, but I can never let these insect-feeding birds entirely rear the young, as I find they cannot feed them through the bars of cages, as the insects drop into the cage instead of the bird's mouths. I have caged up Robins, Hedge Sparrows, and Chaffinches, but found in each instance that their parents could not give them enough food. We all know the Tree Sparrow feeds for the first four days on insects, and then on grain, and to prove this I put two fertile eggs from the Bramblefinch-Chaffinch mating into a nest of this bird. The hybrids grew beautifully for the first three days, but died on the fifth day. As I thought she fed her young on insects for the first week, to quite prove the contrary, I have since put Robin's eggs into a Tree Sparrow's nest, and the same thing happened on the fifth day. Years ago I put eleven fertile eggs (Bramblefinch-Chaffinch) into Linnets' nests, and the young all died quickly. My first Bramblefinch-Chaffinch was hatched in a Greenfinch's nest, and for the first few days grew beautifully, but after that only just kept alive, and when it was two weeks' old, but had no feathers—they always can fly at two weeks—I had to take it and hand-rear it, it quickly got its feathers then. These birds when in a Tit's, Hedge Sparrow's, or Robin's nest are fledged at nine days old, so I have to take them at a week old. I forgot to say that why I took my first B.-C. at two weeks old was because the hen Greenfinch no longer sat on it, and it was a cold summer, and I found it nearly dead from the cold. Canaries love small, green caterpillars, greenfly from roses, and nettles, and the small wasp grubs (not the very large ones), and I have had mine even eat gentles, and as for fresh ants' eggs, they try and eat them all before my Finches have a look in: It is my firm belief that our young Canaries would grow far quicker if we could supply their parents with plenty of small green caterpillars and greenfly instead of green food, as I find green food does not suit young Canaries. I find if I put Bullfinches' eggs or Goldfinches' eggs under Canaries, the young do not grow half as quickly as they do when taken a week old and put under Canaries. This seems to show that they are fed with insects the first few days. I have too many Chaffinches' eggs to put into my wild Tit's nests just now, so cannot spare them to experiment on them. I have already had over one hundred eggs from my hen Chaffinches, and hope now, from what I see every day, to get some fertile eggs. I have to try and arrange the wild Greater Tits to have nests the middle of June, so as to take my Chaffinches' eggs, as they are by far the best foster-parents, as they feed their young entirely on green caterpillars, and their nests are always safe from all enemies. I am now hand-rearing five young Greenfinches, and two young Yellow Buntings, all on the same food, which is biscuit grated up and moistened with new milk, and half a teacup of greenfly per day. I quickly get the greenfly by carrying a cup half-full of water and shaking nettles into it—the water becomes a green solid mass with the greenfly. The young Greenfinches grow very fast on this food, and do not want nearly so much feeding, as they are always sleeping, and are happy and contented. I do not have to feed them before 7 a.m., and this makes hand-rearing a pleasant and easy task, as they can easily go three hours. I can always tell from their droppings if the food suits young birds. I am trying my hardest to get young Hawfinches to hand-rear. I hand-reared one years ago, and found it so easy. Just now is a very busy time with me, and I am busy this year trying different things, amongst the wild birds."

The Type of the Present-day Norwich Plainhead.

Sir,—If "Novice" obtains Cage Birds of October 21, 1911, and reads the report of the last Norwich Alliance show, I think he will find that I am not hit so very hard. I don't know if "Novice" and "Sub Rosa" are one and the same person, neither do I know if "Sub Rosa" is trying to make himself appear ridiculous. He says he don't see what British and Foreign birds have to do with the above subject. Neither do I; but, sir, these remarks were addressed to "Novice," because "Novice" said that he attended the Norwich show last October, and that the highest honours left Norwich both in the Canary and British and Foreign bird classes. Now, out of these forty first prizes, etc., which were won by the Norwich breeders, 37 were won in the Canary classes, and only three in the British and Foreign. "Sub Rosa" says some of these classes were for amateurs, so can't be counted. Well, whether they can be counted or not, they were there, and I think if "Sub Rosa" could breed a few like the birds in them, he would think they "counted." "Novice" says that in the Open Non-Flighted classes, which were four in number, three of the chief prizes left Norwich, but he doesn't say that in the other class, which was Norwich Yel. Hen Any Variety, every card went to the Norwich breeders who show in the open champion classes, and the reason is this: The amateurs of Norwich have a society of their own, which is called the Norwich Amateur Cage Bird Association, and they hold a show themselves annually, which comes just after the Norwich Alliance (if "Sub Rosa" and "Novice" were to visit one of these shows I think they would see something good for weak eyes), and should an amateur exhibit in these open champion classes and happen to win a special prize, I believe they would be debarred from belonging to this association. At the same time, most of their birds are sold to the dealers, very few of which are exhibited by the same, but are supplied to people away. I think even "Novice" and "Sub Rosa" will know that dealing is a business, and therefore they cannot supply others with them and exhibit themselves at the same time. I hope, sir, I am not intruding too much on your valuable space, but I would like to give you a few out of the many Norwich winners, as reported in Cage Birds of October 21: Nor. Yel. Hen, Unflighted, 1st, fine big, shapely hen, capital col., close silky feather; 2nd real gem, short and cobby, lovely shade of col. and feathered like a Java, we liked much. Amateur, Nor. Yel.: 1st and 2nd, two wonderfully fine feathered birds, beautifully fed, as rich and level as possible, very neat wings and tail, rare style. Buff: 1st, topper, lovely quality, rich undercolour, nicely mealed, capital wings and tail; 3rd good as any in class for type and quality, but does not carry so much col. Tkd. Yel.: 1st grand shape, rich even col., wing tkd., of nice quality; 2nd, wing tkd., gem, rare shape, grand col. and feather, very smart wings and tail, we liked very much. Buff: 1st, thigh tkd., splendid shape, col. and mealing, grandly feathered, shows well; 2nd head tkd, full of col. and quality, stands well over perch, nice wings and tail; 3rd, grizzle cap, gem, we liked as well as any, not so much col. as some, but grand type. Now, sir, I think the above sufficient to prove that Norwich birds are not such duffers as "Novice" and "Sub Rosa" would like to make them.

A. Woollard.

[So far as the birds belonging to the breeders in Norwich are concerned, this correspondence must now close. If readers wish to discuss the type of Norwich generally, however, our columns, of course, are still open.—Ed.]

Two Ideas which Readers May Find Useful.

Sir,—I was very glad to see my contribution on Budgerigars so nicely arranged and given such prominence, and I hope your readers will benefit by it. I now send one or two other ideas which might be helpful. I have seen many different styles of fixing perches, but I do not think any are quite as simple and as easy to fix and take out as those I use myself. First I cut the perch the required length, measuring from the back of the cage to the wire front. Then I cut two inches of ordinary cage wire and hammer one inch into the end of the perch, and bend it at right angles to same. I then screw two small eyelets into the back of the cage, one under the other (these can be bought at twelve a penny), drop the wire into the holes, and let the other end of the perch just rest against the wire of the cage front. When the perch requires cleaning, simply lift it up out of the sockets, and replace it afterwards. It can be made in five minutes and taken in and out in a few seconds. I always make all my own cages, and before I fix them together I cut a square out of the top board in the left hand corner about five inches square. It can be cut with an ordinary saw. Then nail a thin strip of wood on the under side of the large board for the cut-out piece to rest on, so that it will not drop into the cage. The advantage is this: When birds are nesting they usually get excited and rush about the cage when one puts a hand in the cage door either to take out an egg or do anything with the young whereas by just inserting the hand through the top of the cage they do not seem to mind. In fact, many times when they are off the nest they never see the hand at all. Of course, I am presuming that the nest is at the side of the cage and not in the centre between the perches.

The Wingless Canary.

How About a New Variety?

Sir,—I noticed in last week's Cage Birds that Mr. Boundy has a Yorkshire Canary with one wing. I may say that I have one also. It is a month old, and going on all right. Strange to say, this bird is also a Yorkshire, and it is the left wing that is missing. There is no sign of a "stump."

One Wing Between Two Birds.

Sir,— I am requested by a customer who gets Cage Birds every week, to write you to see if you have heard of anything like the following: Out of a brood of four Canaries, one had no wings, and another only had the left wing. He killed the one with no wings and the other is in splendid condition. The one with no wings was going on well, but could not get from the bottom of the cage.

Does Rain Kill Nestling Birds?

Our Correspondent Answers "Yes."

Sir,—Mr. W. E. Teschemaker's letter makes me marvel how, with an experience of wild birds such as he has, the fact that rain does kill nestlings has not been demonstrated to him by many instances. I have always a horror of heavy rain during the nesting season, and a round of my nests after such never fails to reveal a few young birds which have perished. Last July constituted a record, and though the storm was remarkable by reason of its duration, I don't think it was so phenomenal as that which Mr. T. describes. Yet I found no less than fourteen broods of various kinds had perished. The peculiarity of these fatalities happening to many of our hardier species, while broods of the more delicate had survived, led me to make a study of the cause. The fact that the delicate broods of such species as Sedge, Willow, Whitethroat and other Warblers surviving a storm which had been fatal to Larks, Buntings, Greenfinches, Chaffinches, etc., was beyond my understanding, but happening to get caught in a severe shower, I took shelter under a thick holly bush, and was fairly sheltered for a while, but the rain continuing, it began to percolate through the foliage in a series of streams, and on looking up I found that one of these streams emanated from the bottom of a Greenfinch's nest containing four eggs, well advanced in inoubation. The inundation was due to the foliage immediately over the nest collecting a lot of rain, and then forming a sort of conduit which discharged itself right on to the nest below, in a manner which nothing but an aquatic bird could withstand. I made it a point to visit the next brood I found drowned (while it was raining). It was a Blackcap Warbler's, and there I verified my suspicions as to this being the general cause. The nest was situated in a bramble bush, overhung by an oak branch, and was right under a heavy drip from the branch, which, during the storm, must have driven the parent off the nest. A nest of Hedge Sparrows in close proximity, and much more exposed, had suffered no evil effects from the same storm. I append a cutting from the nature notes column of to-day's "Scotsman," showing that I am not alone in thinking that rain kills nestlings.

J. Steel.

Extract from the "Scotsman":—"A pair of Corn Buntings, presumably from the flock which arrived late in May, made two nests in the garden, and in one deposited three eggs, but deserted it, probably 'drowned out,' as were other nests containing young birds, by the heavy rains in the end of June."

The Cage Bird Fancy in South Africa.

Sir,—I am sending you, on behalf of our club, a photo of a few members of the South African C.B.C., which I trust you will be able to reproduce. The object of this club is to push on the Fancy in South Africa, being the first of its kind out here, and we desire the support of all bird fanciers in South Africa. Although the headquarters will be in Johannesburg, we are going to provide specials for cage birds at all the leading shows in the Eastern and Western provinces for members who cannot send their birds such a long distance to compete at our own big shows here. Our aim is also to get the South African Poultry Association to give cage birds better facilities and equality of specials at their shows; the last-named have been sadly neglected in the past. Your paper is widely read, and I trust that the foregoing will catch the eyes of bird fanciers in remote parts of South Africa. Our Secretary, Mr. W. Fair, P.O. Box, 1901, Johannesburg, will be pleased to forward any information regarding the above Club that may be desired by intended members. The chairman, Mr. J. R. Cox, in the centre of the photo, is a well-known fancier from the North of England, and what the Fancy is to-day in Johannesburg, we have to thank him for, though Cage Birds, for its timely hints and instruction must not be forgotten. His every effort is for the furthering of the Fancy, and he is always willing to give the novice a helping hand. He is the best all-round judge we have ever had, and judged our last record South African show to the satisfaction of all concerned. The Fancy has made rapid strides since his arrival in our midst, and if the fanciers have the good fortune to retain him here for a few more years, then I am sure we will be blessed with some real good birds, and a strong cage bird club. Wishing the best of luck to your popular paper, Cage Birds.

The Clashing of Shows in Ireland.

Sir,—Re "Old Fancier's' letter as to clashing of shows in Ireland, I quite agree that there should be no clashing. Lurgan, for instance, has a show say every three or four years, or whenever it so pleases. They grab a young society's date, and when the young society stands firm to its date, someone starts grumbling and crying. As far as Holywood is concerned, it is immaterial when Lurgan holds its show for all the good any of the fanciers of Lurgan has done them. If they had had to depend on Lurgan or the so-called old fanciers for support, they would have been to the wall long ago. Now, any fancier who has shown at Holywood for the past two years will, I am sure, agree with me when I say that their show was carried out with every care; prizes paid promptly, birds returned by rail as arranged, and everything done for the fanciers' welfare. I personally do not think their supporters will desert them this year just to accommodate a show that had a name in the past. If I know anything of the Holywood fanciers, they will stand firm to their date, and do their level best to make their show a success. Even if they do not get the support of the principal fanciers (I hope they will), everyone can depend on their show being run without prejudice, bias, or vindictiveness. Further, it seems to me that instead of some old fanciers doing what they can for a young society, they do all they can to retard its progress.

The White Canary.

A New Zealand Lady Claims to Have First Established a True Strain.

Sir,—I have just received my copy of "Our Canaries," which, needless to say, I consider a grand book. I should like to call attention to the fact (referring to page 22, "The White Canary") that I have already entirely established the new breed of White Canaries, having last year bred over fifty, reared over forty, and having sent to England over thirty, all of which, without exception, have arrived, not one death occurring. As many of these were bred from white hens mated to white cocks (and in such cases not a single coloured bird appearing in the nests), I think I can claim to being the first to establish a type of White Canary breeding true to colour. I may also state that before Mr. Kiesel's White Canary was exhibited, I wrote home to Mr. Ramsden, manager of the Crystal Palace Show, asking him what would be the value of my then only White Canary, a hen, a sport from Buff parents. I exhibited it that year in Wellington, New Zealand, so I think I really was the first in the field. You may be interested to hear that I experimented with my original White hen on Mendel's lines, which I felt sure were the true ones to go upon, having only the one bird to breed from as the parents of the white bird got away, so there was no chance of repeated white sports. That Mendel's theory has proved correct in this instance is testified by the fact that from the one white bird I have succeeded in breeding fifty in the third generation, the second generation having bred true to colour. You mention that grey or grizzled markings are at present formed on the white Canaries; more than half of mine are clear. My birds are very strong and healthy, which is proved by the fact that all which I sent home have arrived, in spite of them all being young birds, actually in their first moult while taking their winter voyage round the Horn, an ordeal to which many Canaries would have succumbed.

Improving the Sand Tray.
Sent by V. Hodgetts, Two Gates, Cradley, Staffs.

Every bird-keeper knows how a sand-tray will often "refuse to budge." No matter how easily it slips in and out when no bird is in the cage, when grit, etc., gets down the side the process of removing the tray is often a difficult one. To get rid of this nuisance, bend two pieces of cage wire as shown in A B, and then knock the ends into the bottom of the sand-tray, as shown in C D. The result is a smoothly working tray. This is a consideration when dealing with nervous sitting hens.—V. Hodgetts.

A Convenient Hinge.
Sent by J. Wright, 10, Fort Street, Northampton.

A very useful form of hinge for travelling cases or cages, seed-boxes, shutter-fronted cages, etc., can be readily made out of a small piece of tin shaped as shown in the sketch, with three holes bored in it, through which suitable wire nails (or screws) are driven, one of which is left slightly loose, when it acts as a pivot for the hinge to work on. In the sketch Nos. 1 and 2 are the nails driven fast into the lid, and No. 3 is the pivot nail. This is a very useful hinge.—J. Wright.

LOCHGELLY AND DIST. C.B.S.

The following is the result of the season's breeding, so far as I can ascertain up to now. I may say that it is far from good, and the only way this can be accounted for is the very unsatisfactory weather experienced during most of the breeding season. The whole of April and May it was very cold, after the bright, clear weather we got in March which brought on the hens at a great pace, and with the sudden severe cold, damp weather which prevailed after that, the hens never seemed to properly get back their vigour, to carry them through the breeding season. CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of Cage Birds have written to say that they would like to join Cage Birds' League, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the League, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of Cage Birds' League, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the League. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same.

Club Reports.

CHOPWELL C.B.S.

Meeting held July 20th, in Club Hall, Mr. Simpson in the chair. Only a moderate attendance. Correspondence was read through, and a few handsome donations announced. Messrs. W. Short and J. Clark were elected vice-presidents, and W. Christer enrolled a member. Next meeting Club Hall August 3rd, when all members and intending members are requested to attend.—W. Tomlinson, Hon. Sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Maskell Hotel, Queen-street, Mr. H. C. Smith presided. The secretary gave report of the Y.B. show, which showed a profit of 18s. Prize money was paid to all members present. The Welsh C.B.C. patronage was accepted; they are giving 30s. cash specials, also cup competition at our open show. Resolved not to join the South Wales Federation. Will all members attend next monthly meeting to fix up classification for open show. Mr. W. Stocking (Cardiff) was elected a member.—E. Thomas, Sec.

LOCHGELLY C.B.S.

Members and friends held a most successful social in the Bay Horse Tavern, July 13th, the president, Mr. T. Wildridge, in the chair. After full justice had been done to a special repast the chairman proposed the welfare of the society, and hoped that all the members would do their utmost to maintain the society in the proud position which it has gained as holding the largest show in Fife. A lengthy programme was gone through, contributed by the following gentlemen: Messrs. Smith, Cairns, Taylor, Wildridge, Muir, G. Harvey, R. Harvey, Raeburn, Anderson, Taylor, Arnott, Currie, Douglas, Hynd, Kippen, McMurray, Harris, Spence, and Smith. A vote of thanks was carried to the subcommittee responsible for the arrangements, and a most pleasant evening was brought to a close by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."—W. Grewar, Sec.

WEST STANLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held Commercial Hotel, July 13th, Mr. Butler in the chair; a very large turnout of members. Our late vice-chairman, Dr. Pretsell was accidentally killed by being thrown from his cycle a month ago, and the secretary was instructed to send a letter of sympathy to Mrs. Pretsell and family in their sad bereavement. Schedule for open show was adopted; we have given a good classification, both in open and members. We have 33 open classes and 24 members, with a 5s. special for most points in each class, and two cups for members' classes. We have booked the Hibernian Hall, Nov. 8 and 9, a place well adapted for a show, with staging room for 1,000 birds. It is well lighted, and free from draughts. The usual prize draw for 10 cock Canaries will take place on show day. Next meeting, Sept. 7th, in Ante-room, Co-op Hall; the rest of our meetings for the year will be held there.—W. Elliott, Sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Committee meeting at headquarters, "Featbers" Hotel, Gt. Chapel Street, Westminster, June 27th. Present, Messrs. J. Dewhurst (in the chair), T. A. Trower, J. Montgomery, A. A. Newling, S. Grahame, A. C. Askew, C. T. Maxwell, A. J. A. Marley, C. Cooper, and J. P. Carr. Minutes signed as read. Letters were read from Messrs. J. Dixon, W. Lowne, and A. Plumbridge, which Secretary was instructed to answer. It was the painful duty of the secretary to announce the sad death of an esteemed provincial committeeman, Mr. W. T. Plumbridge, who had been elected to that office for over twelve years. The committee passed a vote of condolence to the family. Mr. Otto Puck was elected a member of the London committee to fill the vacancy caused through the death of Mr. W. Page. Mr. W. C. Duncan (Newcastle) was elected a member of the Club. A very an interesting letter was read from Miss Reeves on various methods and experiments in the rearing of young Hybrids, etc. (see correspondence columns.—Editor). A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Miss Reeves for the most interesting letter.—J. P. Carr, Jt. Hon. Sec.

CINNAMON-MARKED Y.C.C.

Committee meeting held July 20th, at Market Tavern, Bradford, Mr. Brown (president) in the chair. Messrs. Grayshon and Allen resigned their positions as hon. sec. and treasurer, R. Garnett being appointed in their place. The best thanks of the members were given to the retiring officials for their services. The business was for allotting patronage and making the prizes for our competitions. Open, £3 3s., £1 10s., case of silver dessert cutlery given by T. Sandiford, costume length given by Mr. Brown. Amateur: 1st, given by Mr. Brown, £1 1s.; 2nd, 10s. 6d.; 3rd, 7s. 6d., along with Mr. Carl's Cage Birds prizes for amateurs. Novice: 1st, given by Mr. A. Cooper, £1 10s.; 2nd, given by Mr. Towers, 15s.; 3rd, 7s. 6d.; 4th, given by Mr. Towers, 5s. Patronage was granted Manchester, Nov. 25th and 26th; Gt. Horton, Oct. 19th; Sheffield, Nov. 1st and 2nd; Bradford National, Dec. 6th, 7th and 9th; Shipley, Jan. 11th, and Crystal Palace. We still want four shows to have our patronage. Will secs. please note and make early application? Fanciers, please note our subs are only 1s. 6d. per year. We want your help, so come along.—R. Garnett, Sec., 102, Leeds-road, Windhill.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

Members and friends are specially invited by the trustees of Park Chapel, the headquarters of the society, to attend next Sunday evening's service to hear the farewell sermon of the Rev. G. Hall Wallis, who is leaving Bradford, having accepted a call to Bournemouth. Mr. Wallis has always taken the keenest and liveliest interest in the welfare of our society, with the result that we have been enabled to hold the meetings in a very cosy, comfortable room, and have received every possible consideration. It was through his own personal invitation and suggestion that the society inaugurated what has been termed the Bird Fanciers' Services, with very happy results. The bird fanciers have liberally responded to the appeal for a testimonial from the congregation, and I have no hesitation in saying that Mr. and Mrs. Wallis will value very highly in after life this token of loyal friendship from the Bradford East Society. The officials of the society desire a good turn-up of bird fanciers to this service on Sunday evening next, and would be delighted to meet anyone outside the chapel at 5.45; service to commence at 6 o'clock; members' wives and lady friends are heartily invited. We sincerely regret Mr. Wallis' departure, but trust he will be very happy in the field of labour to which he has been called, and I advise any of the fanciers in Bournemouth to look him up, and see to it that his capable services are not lost sight of. Bradford's loss is Bournemouth's gain.—H. Hill, Sec.

DUNDALK C.B.A.

Annual meeting, held July 10th. Report and balance sheet passed, and committee elected same as last year. Decided to hold annual show on the 13th and 14th November, 1912.—W. Keating, Hon. Treas.

ILFORD AND COUNTY F. AND F.S.

General meeting, headquarters, July 9th, Mr. F. Holliday in the chair. Decided to abandon rambles in list of fixtures for August. Finally agreed to hire the skating rink for annual show, November 28th and 29th. Several first-class judges were put forward, and the sec. instructed to write for terms, etc. Open classes to be put on in all sections where guaranteed. It was agreed that young stock show, Sept. 24th, be held in Recreation Hall, Manor Park, providing same can be hired.—J. H. Priestman, Hon. Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held headquarters, Horse and Jockey Hotel, July 11. Once again we had a welcome visit from Mr. Browning, this time to give us a lecture on colour-feeding. This was delivered in Mr. Browning's usual masterful manner, and was greatly enjoyed by the good muster assembled. Afterwards many questions were asked and ably answered, and keen discussion followed. Mr. Browning's lectures are always the more interesting, as they are based on practical experience. He gave us a hint to always buy the best peppers procurable; to buy the cheapest was to buy the dearest in the end. He put 1oz. of hot to 2lb. cold, and 1oz. carbonate of iron well mixed together, and found this answered admirably. His egg-food consists of the usual hard-boiled egg and home-made bread. He took 1lb. of brown sugar, 1lb. ground rice, and one tablespoonful of salt, mixed the three together, and put into a jar. When making egg-food he used one tablespoonful to this to one gill of egg-food, and added the pepper to it. Begin, said Mr. Browning, by only adding a small quantity of pepper, and increase amount gradually, until you get the food to a salmon colour. If mixed at night you will find that it will be much darker colour by next morning. From this you should get best possible colour for your birds. One tablespoonful will be the amount required for two birds per day. Mr. Browning is a great believer in plenty of baths, and considers nasturtium and marigold flowers are of great assistance, but he does not agree with mixing seed with colour-food, as this causes the birds to waste much colour-food in foraging out the seeds. As a final hint, Mr. Browning advised those present never to give any kind of green-food during colour-feeding.—W. Halliday, Secretary.

NORTHERN COUNTIES NORWICH AND CINNAMON C.C.

Adjourned general meeting, held July 17, in Lockhart's Cocoa Rooms, 65, Grainger St. The chairman, Mr. R. W. Smith, presided. The balance sheet showed an income of £2 12s. 6d., and an expenditure of the same amount. The following members gave donations to cup fund, Mr. J. Mackenzie, vice-president, 5s.; Mr. Holden, 10s.; Mr. Butler, 5s.; Messrs. Smith, Curry, Birkett, Willisbury, Topping, Davison, Hermiston, Hope, McKay, 2s. each, which leaves a balance of £1 3s. yet to be made good. I would be glad to have subscriptions from members who have not as yet paid and from other members who would like to help to clear the deficit up, as I have had to pay this myself. Officials for the ensuing year:—It was decided that we ask Mr. Crawhall to be our president, and several prominent fanciers as vice-presidents; chairman, Mr. R. Topping; vice- Mr. Lawson; sec., W. Curry; committee, Messrs. Geo. Dobinson, E. Cowling, Thos. Fletcher, F. Laidlow, A. Holden, R. W. Smith, A. Hermiston, H. Wellsbury, J. Cockburn, Chas. McKay, W. Coxon, and W. McGinn; auditors, Messrs. Topping and Laidlow. Decided that we give our patronage to six shows. The following applications are to hand for same:—Chopwell, Morpeth, Newcastle, Border City (Carlisle), Hartlepool, Blaydon, Haltwhistle, Gateshead. Societies who would like same must apply by August 17th. Decided to have our next meeting on a Saturday night, so as to give country members a chance to attend, and have a say in the allotting of our patronage; the date will appear in the Fancy papers. Messrs. Cockburn, Thos. Fletcher, Forbes, McGinn, Reeves, Richardson, Cucknell, and Newton, were elected members. Subscriptions now due. Fanciers in Northumberland, Durham, Cumberland, and Westmoreland, are eligible to join. Annual sub. 2/6. For further particulars apply to W. Curry, Sec., 60, Grosvenor Gardens, Newcastle.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE OUT AROUND GLOSSOP.

A glorious day and a splendid outing was the unanimous verdict of all present, and undoubtedly we had a good time. We arrived at Glossop to be met by Mr. Dewsnap, of "Lizard" fame, who had kindly consented to act as guide. Having on our last visit wandered amongst the surrounding hills, it was decided to vary the programme. First a visit was paid to Glossop Old Church, a monument of days gone by; next we viewed the Old Cross, another relic, saw the old Market Square, and worked our way round to Lord Howard's estate, rambled on through the district of Mossey Lea, and the time passed swiftly, as we were entertained to one after another of birdy stories by our guide. Photographs of the beauty spots were taken by one of the party who had brought his camera, and selecting a suitable grassy slope the party was "taken." After a most enjoyable tea, a visit was paid to Mr. Sam Wood's residence and grounds, which were much admired. We finished by visiting our guide's house on an invitation from his amiable wife. Our chairman, Mr. Foxall, voiced the feelings of the party when proposing a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Dewsnap.—J. R. Colvills.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S. MEMBERS SEE BIRD LIFE AMONG ROMANTIC SCENERY.

The weather conditions about the 20th looked anything but promising, but we were favoured once more on the third ramble of the season in having a fine day for walking, if somewhat dull. Our destination was Bradfield, a beautiful village situate amidst charming and romantic scenery, the various hills, whose tops were covered with mist, and the numerous reservoirs that fill the valleys, give the scene a charm that is quite foreign to low-lying country. Meeting at the appointed place we journey on the left of Loxley, keeping to the river and woods. We traverse Little Matlock wood, and come to the Robin Hood Inn, famous on account of its connection with the historic outlaw. Here it was we had a new experience, the party leading the way taking us on a path that led to nowhere. Consequently we had to retrace our steps, the time spent in this wood was rather considerable; many things of interest were found, the lane leading to the Robin Hood Rifle Range is one feast of beauty, the rocks on one side rising high above, and on the other the slope to the river below being studded with the hawthorn and elderberry, which trees are preparing their harvest for the feathered tribe during the winter months, being laden with berries. The view from this part is grand. After getting on the right track we follow the course of the river until we reach Dam Flask. Here a halt is made while the party in the rear catch us up. We, of course, say they are poor walkers; they affirm we are missing all the fun, and then enumerate the number and kinds of nests they have found. Leaving the valley we climb the hill and reach the Bradfield road, where a magnificent view presents itself as we come in sight of the Dam Flask reservoir. This is a grand stretch of water some 1½ miles long, and, being full with the recent heavy rains, it looked like a miniature sea; a few followers of the rod and line were trying their luck on its banks. About this time some of the party were enquiring in a round-about way how far we were from tea. We take the less frequented road on the right of the reservoir and try to push on to oblige the hungry ones; but what hindrances we encountered! The golden banks of heather claimed attention; then the nest of a Robin, numerous Buntings and Wagtails, and as we come to a newly mown field of hay a beautiful sight presented itself, for here we saw a good number of young Chaffinches; one member who got there first said there were shoals of them, some were being fed by their parents, and an endeavour to catch a few created some fun, caps and coats flying in all directions, reminding us of earlier days when we tried to catch the butterfly. Hereabouts the British men were interested—thistles, hardheads, berries, and many kinds of weeds grew in profusion. Some were securing these for their pets at home, others took some young trees to set in their gardens to remind them of the event. Reaching the village, we pass right through and make our way to Small Field Farm, which is situate on high ground directly facing the Agden reservoir. Here our host had prepared for us a grand tea, to which we all did justice, as we were ready and fit for it. Tea over, the enthusiastic ones did a round of the stackyards and surrounding hedges, where several nests were found. Bidding good-bye to our host, we commence our return, and this is taken up in a similar way to our outward journey; the birds seen were almost too numerous to mention, but although we kept a sharp look out we did not see a Hawfinch. By the time we reached Loxley the shades of night have fallen, but from thence to our starting-point it is all down hill, for which some were thankful. We reached Malin Bridge about 10 o'clock, feeling tired, but nevertheless glad to have had another day with nature.—J. Woodhouse, Assist. Sec.

EASTERN COUNTIES C.B.S.

Annual F.F. show held July 20, at Ipswich. The entries were about twenty in advance of last year, totalling 118. Some very good Nor. were on view, and a very fair number of people took advantage of the opportunity to see them. The quality all round was well up to the average, the novice section being remarked upon by the judge (Mr. C. Simpson) as the best he had judged for a long time. Winner of challenge cup, for best bird, Mr. S. Barham; best in novice section, Mr. A. E. Tydeham; best foreign, Andrews Bros.; second best Canary in show, Mr. J. Bevan. CL. YELL. HARROGATE C.B.S.

Annual F.F. show, July 13th. There was only a moderate entry, owing no doubt to so many birds being on the point of moulting. Some fine youngsters were staged in the novice class, which certainly was the pick. The winning yellow, the property of W. H. Hamlyn, was a very fine specimen, voted the best bird in the show. Mr. W. Mundell judged. CL. OR TKD. YELL. YORKS.: 1, 2, 3, Lealman; 4, Brown. BUFF: 1, Walker; 2, 4, Fergusson; 3, Ireland. MKD., ETC.: 1, 2, Walker; 3, Fergusson. NOV. A.V.: 1, 2, 4, Hamlyn; 3, Cottam.—G. BEDFORD AND BEDS. C.B.S.

Second N.F. show held headquarters, 16, Hassett Street, July 17. A splendid lot of Canaries and Mules were staged. Mr. H. C. Gould judged, and gave every satisfaction to all exhibitors. CL. YELL.: I, Keech, beautiful in quality and type; 2, 2, Smith, second bird almost equal to the first, failing slightly in colour. BUFF: 1, 2, Osborn, grand quality and type, equal to each other; 3, Keech, good quality; res, Notley. TKD. YELL.: 1, Keech, grand bird; 2, Corrie, good Norwich, not quite so good in colour; 3, Notley, good quality and type; res, Osborn. BUFF: 1, 3, Keech, two good specimens; 2, Corrie, good bird, close up; res, Smith. NOV.: About a dozen birds, which wanted some judging: 1, 3, Armitage, grand quality, type, and colour; 2, 4, res, Oliver, leader almost as good as the first winner. MULES: 1, 2, Notley, grand Goldfinch and Greenfinch Mules; 3, res, Armitage, two grand birds, but smaller, we hope to see these fine specimens at our annual show in October.—E. T. F. Wiggins, Sec.

HALTWHISTLE AND DIST. C.B.S.

F. F. show held July 20 in Mechanics' Hall. Entries came up very well, Borders being the strongest section and some excellent specimens were staged. Special for best and young bird was won by Mr. J. Nicholson with a Cinnamon Marked Yellow Border; 2nd best by Messrs. Bowerbank and Yeomans with a Variegated Goldfinch Can. Mule. Mr. Jas. Johns, Wallsend, judged, and gave every satisfaction. BORD. METROPOLITAN C.B.S.

F.F. Show, July 20th, at the Parochial Hall, Battersea. All sections were very well represented, and in each were to be found specimens of high merit. Mr. S. Ward's ticked Norwich secured the special for the section, also for best bird in show. He is a very typical specimen, which good head and front, capital feather and size. The runner-up was a very lengthly yell. Yorks., of grand size and type, staged by Mr. W. D. Hall. Borders as usual were good, and Mrs. L. M. Thynne provided the winners in both classes, Mr. Gollop and Mrs. McGregor also staging neat birds. The novice sections hardly filled so well as usual. Mr. Denham won sp. for best Nor., Mr. Walker for best Yorks., and Mrs. Denham for best Bord. The show was quite a success, and ably managed by Mr. F. J. Martin, who acted as sec. in the absence of Mr. Burgess, who was unfortunately unable to attend. Messrs. Denham, Tebbs, and Mrs. McGregor assisted in staging, etc. Mr. H. Norman judged.

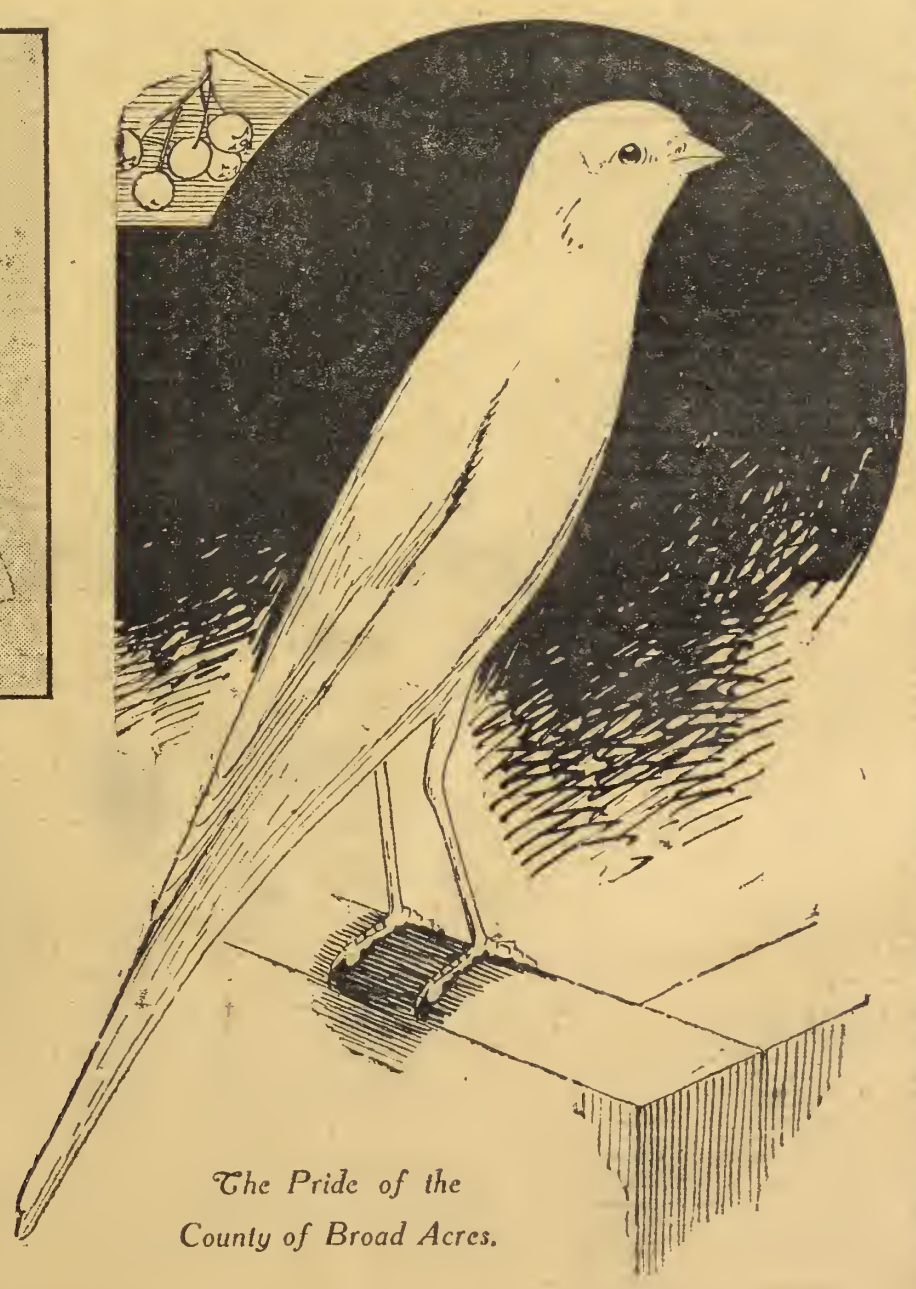
A HUMAN CANARY.

This ingenious "fancy" of Mr. G. H. Peck (Bexley Heath) secured first prize for him at the great cyclists' costume carnival held at Woodford, and another first at Bexley, the only occasions upon which he has competed.

WHENCE WINNERS COME.

This is a bird which a celebrated Yorkshire fancier tells us he saw in the stock class at his local show, and which he considers the ideal sire for the production of exhibition Yorkshire Canaries. It is a clear buff.



The Pride of the County of Broad Acres.

F. CARL, Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Owing to the number of announcements received we cannot guarantee to repeat advertisements unless the previous Issue, Page, and Column are stated by the advertiser.

Advt. Manager, "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstancee will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders muet be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we haud the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fall within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD. If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION. In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT. Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE. The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

Rare quality; cwt. 3/6, half-cwt. 2/-; carriage paid 50 miles: Menzies Grit Works, Bearsden, Glasgow.

"STANLEY" BIRD FOODS (Note gilt Match-box). Bird foods, as supplied by Nature, are composed entirely of living tissue. Whether it is fruit, herbage insect, or seed, birds live entirely upon living tissue. To keep birds as healthy as they are in a natural state we must supply them with this living tissue. "Stanley" Bird Food supplies the want, and all birds like it. When sending birds to shows, put in the show cage a little of this food; it revives and strengthens birds after the journey, and they are soon seen at their best. The best birds always win if supplied with this food, because they so quickly recover from the upset of travelling, and before judging time. Remember! this food does not turn sour, and is the acme of perfection in bird foods. Good alike in the breeding and show seasons, and as cheap as a good food can be, it beats egg food at every point. To bring this food to the notice of all fanciers I will give (for a short time only) to every purchaser of 1½ lbs. a free present of a silver plated match box and stamp case (combined). Send early to avoid disappointment. Sample tin 7d. post paid, ¼-lb 1/3, 1½-lb 2/6, 5lbs. 8/9; all post paid. Prepared by the winner of "Cage Birds" competition, May, 1912: Address, "Stanley" Bird Foods 212, Rookery-rd., Handsworth, Birmingham.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Please read what others say:—3, Tabernacle-row, Carmarthen.—Sir,—Received Linnet safe, and it gives every satisfaction. Any future orders I shall certainly deal with you.—Yours truly, Wm. Thomas to H. Allen. 3 in Court, 1, Porter-street, Sheffield.—Sir,—Received bird all right, and thank you for sending such a nice one.—Yours truly, A. Snape to H. Allen. Drum Cottage, By Lambert.—Dear Sir,—The Linnet I got from you is the best singer I ever heard; he is a real champion. He will sing indoors or out. I have had Linnets since I was a boy at school, but this is the best Linnet I ever had. Wishing you every success.—Yours truly, John Stewart to H. Allen. The above show that they are the finest singing Linnets in England. Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world. They make the gamest Linnets ever carried to a contest. For length, turns and form they stand alone, and for voice they have no equal. This class of bird has won the English Derby and all the English championships and the world's greatest contests. All the recognised judges say they are equal to the finest German Roller. They are at working-men's prices, 1/-, 1/6; real gems, 2/-. Linnets taught by the champion Linnet of the world, singing a treat, with new cage, 3/6; and a few extra specials, cannot be beaten, 4/6. Hundreds of British and foreign birds in stock. Postcard sent before birds. Only honest dealing done with me, so send to your old and tried friend: Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

A WONDERFUL COLLECTION

of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 and 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 2 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, R. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Notice! The breeding of mealworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., or from any of our agents. BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

THE R.S.P.B AND THE SCHOOL CHILDREN.

Our World-wide Membership.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, R.S., Ecclestechan; the Rev. C. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. Cushny, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; MAURICE AMSLER, Esq., M.B., Eton; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., M.A., Baron's Court; E. BAKER, Esq., Cowes; M. THOMSON, Esq., Dunedin, New Zealand.

Our Old Friend Mr. Peck, Wins as a Canary.

LEAGUE members will be familiar with the name of Mr. G. H. Peck in his character as an enthusiastic member of our LEAGUE, and as the winner of the £5 prize for the introduction of most recruits during the first year of our being. Mr. Peck is nothing if not thorough, and on our front page this week will be found an illustration of the decorated bicycle which won him first prize at the Woodford Cycle Derby, and first at Bexley carnival. The rather formidable looking bird which has thus won "first each time out" is Mr. Peck himself.

Cage Birds League in India.

I have already had the pleasure of announcing the fact that among the members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE are bird lovers in Canada, the United States, S. Africa, Australia, New Zealand, Newfoundland, and several European countries. By the welcome addition to our ranks of a member in India we can now say that we are represented in Asia as well as in the other Continents, and we have gone far indeed toward the fulfilment of the first of our objects—that of forming "a bond of good-fellowship and union between bird-keepers all over the world." In joining the League, Major Perreau, of Punjab, India, the well-known writer and aviculturist, writes "CAGE BIRDS is a paper I would not be without, and to which I look forward every mail. I wish your excellent paper and CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE luck."

School Children and Caged Pets.

Recently, Miss L. Gardiner, the Secretary of "The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds," has addressed the usual circular letter to provincial newspapers advertising the fact that the society in question offers prizes for essays by school children upon birds and trees, and asking for support in the way of additional prizes from the public. This is a very laudable proceeding, but it happens that the Education Committee for the borough of Taunton, Somerset, as a result of the good offices of Mr. W. H. Grant, local hon. sec. for Taunton to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, has decided to offer three valuable prizes for essays by the children on "Feathered Pets." This title has aroused the ire of Miss Gardiner, acting for the society which she represents, and that lady has sent a letter to the Editors of "The Somerset County Herald" and "The Somerset Gazette" protesting against what she calls "the retrograde step" of the Education Committee for Taunton "of supporting, in preference, the proposals of a LEAGUE which exists for the purpose of increasing trade in caged birds."

In replying to the letter of a lady, one is somewhat handicapped in the choice of terms, but I cannot do less than ask Miss Gardiner who it was who told her that CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE existed "for the purpose of increasing trade in caged birds." Nothing that I have said in my capacity of Secretary to the LEAGUE could possibly justify such a statement, but, presumably, she has some authority for making it, and it would be interesting to know what this authority is.

Quite a Different Matter.

In another paragraph of the letter to which I have referred, Miss Gardiner says: "CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE was started in order to promote the caging of birds and to fight those individuals and societies who are endeavouring to promote a better understanding of bird life and to check the business of bird catching and caging, which is answerable for such a shocking waste of British bird life, and so much misery and suffering to birds." Here is food for argument indeed, and I wish I could be afforded a couple of pages in which to fully expose the fallacies expressed in the paragraph. I must, perforce, content myself by telling Miss Gardiner that she has been wrongly informed as to the reason of the starting of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

This organisation was started not to promote the caging of birds, but to promote the proper keeping of birds in cages, which is a very different matter. That is has already done much in this direction is a source of great gratification. It was not started "to fight those individuals," etc., but to band together in defence of their hobby the thousands of bird keepers who happen to think differently to those individuals who support by their contributions the societies which have as one of their objects the entire abolition of the keeping of birds in captivity in any circumstances, and for any purposes whatever.

What the League is Accomplishing.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is as anxious "to promote a better understanding of bird life" as are the individuals and societies referred to by Miss Gardiner, and it does more to this end through its official organ, CAGE BIRDS, and through the individual efforts of its members, in one year, than all the "individuals and societies" would effect, or want to effect, in their whole existence. If Miss Gardiner, or any of "those individuals" on whose behalf she writes, could be with any party of Cage Bird Club members on their spring ramble among the birds, she or they would probably be astonished at the knowledge of wild bird life possessed by the people whose hobby of bird-keeping is so violently deprecated by the sentimentalists.

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

PATRONS.—A donation of not less than Ten Guineas in one amount, or an annual subscription of not less than Two Guineas, shall constitute the donor or subscriber a Patron.

LIFE MEMBERS.—A donation of not less than Five Guineas in one amount shall constitute the donor a Life Member.

VICE PRESIDENTS.—An annual subscription of not less than Half-a-Guinea shall constitute the subscriber a Vice President.

HONORARY LIFE MEMBERS.—The payment to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE of a legacy of £20 and upwards shall constitute the administrator or executor making the payment an Hon or ary Life Member. A form of bequest will be sent, post free, on application.

ORDINARY MEMBERS shall pay an annual subscription of Two Shillings and Sixpence.

JUNIOR MEMBERS.—Members under the age of fourteen years at the date of joining shall pay an annual subscription of One Shilling.

Secretary, CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE,

Curiously Named Bird.

"Killdeer" appears to be a curious name for a bird, but this is borne by a species of Plover, which is fairly common in America. It is about the size of a Snipe, and has a peculiar whistling cry. It is related to our Ringed Plovers, and nests in a slight hollow in the ground which is often surrounded by small pebbles and fragments of shells. The hen lays four pear shaped eggs, which are always placed with the pointed ends inwards.

A Thrush's Worm Sandwich.

Some of my friends laugh derisively at the following, but it is a fact, writes "J. A. P." (Altrincham), to the "Daily Sketch." A Thrush made its nest in my garden, and I have fed the birds with bread each morning. One morning the Thrush, which had been hopping about after worms, flew with a worm to near the window where the bread was placed. It then pecked at the bread, then at the wriggling worm—alternate pecks—just, as I told my wife (who also was watching), like a worm sandwich. This was repeated on two other mornings. It was the alternation that interested me, and the fact that a bird should find a "sandwich" in this way.

The Rival of the Nightingale.

By A. A. GOODALL (West Dulwich).

IN the matter of food the Blackcap is by no means a difficult bird to cater for. Being essentially a fruit-eater, it almost goes without saying that this form of nutriment should enter into the diet of the caged specimen, but, of course, insect food in some form or other is also necessary. Most of the specially-prepared foods at the present time on the market for small softbills are good and most valuable as the staple item in the diet. These insectile mixtures consist of ants' cocoons, dried flies, and other suitable ingredients, carefully compounded, with a view to saving the labour of adjusting a well-balanced diet. A supply of such a mixture should be supplemented by two or three mealworms or gentles a day, and ripe fruit at intervals. Of the latter, apples, pears, bananas, cherries, currants, raspberries and grapes are perhaps the most appreciated—indeed almost any kind of sweet fruit is acceptable. I have found, however, that when fed largely on fruit the Blackcap is more sparing of his song, which, however, increases as the supply is diminished.

A Fondness for Sponge Cake.

Sponge-cake the bird is especially fond of, and this may with advantage be given as an occasional change from the insectile mixture, providing the supply of mealworms or gentles be correspondingly increased. From four to six of these, and half a small ripe apple or pear with the peel removed, will constitute a sufficiency for one day, without other food; a small piece of sponge-cake may, however, be placed in the cage as a "side-dish," but in all probability it will not be partaken of until all the fruit is gone. In the summer-time, and when opportunity offers, fresh ants' cocoons, small caterpillars, green-fly, or other suitable items of this kind can be added to the menu, and will be eagerly welcomed.

Of the breeding of the Blackcap in captivity I am not able to speak authoritatively, never having attempted the experiment; hand-reared specimens, however, are by no means uncommon, and one at the present time in my possession has all the attributes of an ideal cage-bird, being exceedingly tame and steady, yet active and alert withal. In one respect, however, the hand-reared Blackcap falls short of his relative that has enjoyed the freedom of wild life; his song is less full in compass, and though exceedingly sweet and flute-like, it lacks something of the unrestrained spontaneity of the nature-taught bird's note, which, to my ear, no words can adequately describe.

A "Sweet, Loud, Wild Pipe."

In bringing these rambling jottings to a close I cannot do better than quote from that delightful writer, Mr. W. H. Hudson, who thus describes the Blackcap's song: "His is a song which has always been very highly esteemed, and it has often been described as scarcely inferior to that of the Nightingale. Gilbert White, of Selborne, described it as 'a full, deep, sweet, loud, and wild pipe; yet that strain is of short continuance, and his motions are desultory; but when the bird sits calmly and engages in song in earnest, he pours forth very sweet, but inward, melody, and expresses great variety of soft and gentle modulations, superior, perhaps, to those of any of our warblers, the Nightingale excepted.' The song is a clear warble composed of about a dozen notes, rapidly enunciated, loud, free, of that sweet, pure quality characteristic of the melody of our best Warblers. The strain is short, and repeated from time to time, the intervals often being filled by lower notes, sweet and varied—the 'inward melody' which White describes."

Timely Tips for Lovers of British Birds.

The various preserved foods utilised for the Softbill species should be augmented with all the live insects obtainable. If colour food is being used, err on the side of moderation. If a fruit-eating species, a variety of berries may be now procured, such as raspberries, black or red currants, strawberries (wild included) and blackberries. Those species which are entirely insectivorous will greatly enjoy and be equally benefited by a supply of large moths, or "daddy long legs," which are procurable in old pasturages, after sunset being the time for getting the former, and during the heat of noon the latter. The difficulty of placing each capture in a box without letting about half-a-dozen escape, may be overcome by cutting a small piece out of the upper edge of a round box or tin (8-oz. cocoa tin) and a corresponding piece from the edge of the lid; turning the lid slightly brings these cuts opposite and they form a small aperture easily controlled.

Those fanciers who may be trying their 'prentice hand on such semi-aquatic species as the Sandpiper or the Dipper, to say nothing of the Wagtail, and even Kingfisher, will find the "scoop" a very useful instrument in providing for them a supply of their favourite and natural food. This is made by stretching coarse muslin or very fine netting on a wire frame, in the form of a crumb shovel, or shrimp net, with a fairly long (detachable) handle. The method of application is to hold it with the mouth pointing towards the flow of a stream (up-stream) and the edge slightly into the gravel, while the stones and gravel in front of it are disturbed with a stick, when the insects which find a shelter therein are washed by the current into the scoop, and are transferred to a bait can containing a little water.

I don't know the scientific names of the creatures, but they are the larvæ of various flies, the most plentiful being a weird creature which swims sideways and, like the parson's horse, though neither beautiful to look at nor pleasant to handle, is the very devil to go. These when placed in a flower pot saucer containing a little water, provide such species as I have mentioned with a food which, judging by the zest evinced in hunting them out must be greatly appreciated; that the birds derive benefit by a supply during the moult is beyond question.

A Selection of Wild Plants.

The seedeaters should be supplied with an abundance of the various wild plants which find favour with the different species. No doubt many of the best kinds are hardly ready except in the more southern counties. Linnets will be best served with shepherd's purse, plantain, mouse-ear, white-heads, gold of pleasure and sorrel. Later, an abundance of hardheads (horse-nops) will be available. A supply of linseed, in moderation, should not be omitted at this period, its oily nature imparting a sheen to the plumage.

Goldfinches are very partial to all downy plants, such as the various thistles, but I have the opinion that shepherd's purse, especially if infested with aphides, is par excellence the conditioner for both Goldie and Siskin. Greenfinches are very gluttonous and if their tastes were consulted would ask for nothing better than a few ears of succulent wheat or oats. These may be supplied, and alternated with a rotation of goat's-beard (Jack-go-to-bed-at-noon—I have been in error in condemning this plant), fat hen, sorrel, groundsel, linseed, thistle and mouse-ear.

Assists the Colour-Feeding.

Apropos of succulent (semi-ripe) grain, this, when freed from husks and bruised, is a very convenient vehicle for giving colour food, such species as Greenfinches, Buntings and Larks eating it with avidity though dyed to redness with capsicum. Of course the fancier will begin with a very moderate addition of the pepper and gradually bring it up to the necessary strength. The addition of a little maw-seed is advisable for Larks, who will require a supply of wasp grubs, gentles, mealworms or other live food in addition, a remark which applies also to Buntings, the Chaffinch and the Brambling.

The Bullfinch may have a selection from the following seeds, meadow-sweet, shepherd's purse (blight infested for preference), dock, sorrel, plantain, nettle, and mouse ear, and all manner of berries, the more rich in colouring matter the better (the latter applies also to all members of the Thrush family). I intend dealing with the various wild plants and fruits at greater length on another occasion, but hope the above may be of some benefit to the fanciers of limited experience.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATIELS.

How they Live, Talk & Play.

By F. W. BULL.

The Aviary and Its Fittings.

The food in general required for the aviary is canary seed, white millet, white oats, and occasionally sunflower seed and hemp. Spray millet, cuttlefish, and green food should be supplied ad lib.

My aviary is divided into two divisions, a night compartment or shelter shed, and an open flight. Each division is 10ft. long, and 5ft. wide, 8ft. high at back, and 6ft. high in front. The communicating door is closed when the birds are in the shelter shed at night, which secures them against cats, and minimises night frights. The excitement is intense when the flight door is opened in the morning. The birds delight to besport themselves in the rain, or to bask in the sun. They seem to suffer no ill effect, whatever the weather. The shed can be snugly closed in during the cold nights. A movable glass frame covers about four feet of the open front, and a blind covers the remaining portion. The complete aviary is built in twelve sections bolted together, the whole being home made.

Seed hoppers I make myself, and are my own idea. They are of wood, self-supplying, and made so that the spent seed is collected, which helps to keep the floor of the aviary clean and tidy. All hoppers and seed utensils are suspended from the roof by wire, which prevents mice contaminating the food.

The nest boxes are also home made. Those for the Cockatiels are made as recommended by Mr. C. P. Arthur in CAGE BIRDS booklet—"Budgerigars and Cockatiels." They are sixteen inches long, eight inches wide, and eight inches high, with a four-inch round hole and a platform projecting six inches in front and a hinged lid. A layer of saw-dust on the bottom of the box is all the nesting material required. The nest boxes for the Budgerigars are ten inches long, six inches wide, and six inches high. An entrance hole (about two inches in diameter) is made in front and a protruding perch fitted in just below it. A hinged lid, and a layer of saw-dust completes the nesting arrangements. The nesting receptacles are cheap and simple to make, are easily cleaned, and last practically for ever. I have been very successful with them, and always use them in preference to the customary husks.

Pleasure and Profit.

Does Foreign bird-keeping pay? Well there is nothing certain in this world, and unlooked for things happen at times in bird-keeping that try the patience and the pocket. Given even a minimum of luck, however, with the classes I have dealt with, it should be possible to pay the seed bill, and in time, to cover all initial expenses and have a margin of profit. The many hours of pleasure obtained, I submit, is a profit in itself.

In conclusion, I beg to express a hope, that some struggling novice may read these few notes and be benefited by them. Only by following the best of all bird journals CAGE BIRDS, and by the help of its courteous experts (who are ever ready to assist) have I been successful, and able to gain the little experience which I very humbly impart.

*A Tale of a Rookery.

A farmer rented a farm in the county of Essex some years ago. He had not resided there long before a number of Rooks came and built there, and multiplied so much that in the course of a few years they had formed a considerable rookery, which he prized very much. About this time, however, he had to change his residence, and forsake his Rooks; but to his great surprise and pleasure the Rooks manifested such an attachment to him as led them to desert their former abode, and accompany him in his new abode, and they have continued to flourish ever since.—Sent by Harry Wood (age 14), 36a, Suargate Street, Dover.

A Song and Dance Turn.

My uncle showed me a Grey Parrot, which said to me, "Good morning, Joey." It was called Joey. That evening it said "Dance Cecil" (Cecil was its former owner). My uncle then started to dance up and down the room, with the Parrot doing the same on the perch in the cage, and at intervals whistling some comic song, and saying "Dance Cecil, dance Joey." Next morning I went down to the kitchen, and was very much surprised on hearing what I thought was my uncle speaking, but it was only the Parrot, who said "Good morning Joey," and went on muttering to himself. He used to mimic everyone and shout "Sweep," or "Sticks," etc., and add in an undertone, "Not to-day, Joey." Whenever it heard a baby cry it used to say "Poor baby."—Sent by Ed. McGurk (age 15), 88, Herbert Street, Gateshead.

*Why the Canary Wouldn't Sing.

I was out visiting one day, and called on a lady friend. The servant showed me into the room, and left me to wait a few minutes. I naturally looked round at the pictures, and noticing a beautiful Canary in a cage in front of the window, I went to it and tried to get it to sing, but failed. I whistled, chirruped, and talked to it, but it was no use, I couldn't get it to move even. I was walking round the side of the cage when the lady came in. "Oh," she said, with a smile, "are you trying to get my bird to sing?" "Yes; but I can't manage it," I said. "No, and you never will—it's stuffed," she replied! THE BIRD-LOVERS' LIBRARY.

"Aviaries and Aviary Life." by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. Medium 8vo. Art Linen. 12s. 6d. Ashbourne: J. H. Henstock, The Avian Press.

In this well-produced volume Mr. Page, who will be well-known to readers as our foreign bird expert, presents a book which is full of thoroughly practical information on birds and bird-keeping (both British and foreign species, the latter predominating). After an introductory chapter on the cult of bird-keeping, a long and very informative chapter is devoted to Aviaries and their Fitments, giving ground plans and illustrations of aviaries ranging from a humble "backyard" structure to the palatial homes provided for their birds by such distinguished aviculturists as Mr. Brook, of Hoddam Castle; Mr. Astley, of Newbury; and others. A comprehensive chapter treats of foods for birds in captivity; and in the body of the book, which treats individually upon the keeping of an enormous number of species, a mass of information is offered to the reader such as must have entailed an immensity of work in the gathering. Within the two hundred and odd pages of the volume are over two hundred illustrations, mostly photographs excellently produced by Messrs. E. O. Page, H. Willford, and W. E. Teschemaker, and some beautiful drawings by Mr. H. Goodchild. An exhaustive index adds much to the value of the volume as a book of handy reference, the birds being indexed separately under their popular names and their scientific ones. It seems a pity that a little more care was not exercised to exclude the printers' errors which are so numerous as to involve the addition of two pages of errata at the end of the volume. We can cordially recommend "Aviaries and Aviary Life" to bird-lovers interested in this side of our hobby; it is practical, informative, and helpful from cover to cover, as, indeed, could only be expected from Mr. Page, an author of established reputation as an aviculturist.

Pheasant Nests Amid Flowers.

A Pheasant's nest has been discovered in the middle of a frame full of flowers in a garden in Kippen, Stirlingshire.

Abundance of Young Sparrows.

Young Sparrows are just now almost as plentiful as leaves. One can see them everywhere; on the fences, on the hedges, in the roadway, in the path, fluttering wings, and old ones feeding, so intent upon their own affairs that they hardly move out of one's way. Meanwhile our neighbour's cat is putting on flesh rapidly.

JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS

The attention of Show Secretaries is directed to the following list of gentlemen willing to act as Judges. Terms for insertion on application.

At the meeting of the Mansfield and District C.B.S., held at headquarters (Horse and Groom Hotel) July 27, Mr. Hawksley (the secretary) resigned, and Mr. Gabbitass was elected in his place. Mr. G. Ward was elected treasurer. So writes Mr. Bernard Gabbitass, 57, Montague Street, Mansfield, Notts.

I am pleased to inform you, writes D. G. Jones, Llandudno, that I have sold my well-known dark Linnet Mule and Light Goldie Mule through an advertisement I saw in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. I have sold them to a well-known fancier in Manchester, Mr. R. J. Metcalfe, and I wish their new owner every luck.

Will fanciers and friends kindly notice, writes Mr. W. Gilbert, that I have again taken over the secretaryship of the London and Counties A.C.B. All correspondence to be addressed to me at 35, Wharf Road, City Road, N. Mr. H. Bell is giving a paper on the Norwich Plainhead on Aug. 10, at the Earl Catheart, Osnaburgh Street, at 8 o'clock, when all friends will receive a hearty welcome. Messrs. Kellan, Turley, and F. Rawling have been elected members.

Kindly accept my thanks for receipt of order for 2s. 6d. won by me in June 1st issue of CAGE BIRDS, as it came as a pleasant surprise. I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for nearly four years, and have not missed taking same for one week, writes Mr. J. Lloyd (Liverpool). At present I cannot give my birds much time, and have to keep them flying in an aviary. My favourite birds are Britishers, and I find that they keep far better outside than indoors.

One of the best-known breeders of Yorkshire Greens, Mr. John Gore, of the Walton Breck Hotel, Liverpool, has joined the Anfield, Everton and Dist. C.B.S., writes Mr. R. B. Wright, the Hon. Sec. He has had a grand breeding season. A well-known firm of seed merchants has presented us with £5 worth of specials and a magnificent silver cup has been presented for next year's competition by a gentleman who desires his name to remain anonymous for the present. Mr. John Smith, of Anfield Lodge, has had a remarkable season, having bred some fine Borders and Yorkshires.

Ramsden's Pure Peppers are undoubtedly the finest ever imported into this country. They are ground from garden cultivated pods, samples of which, also the plants in fruit, will be exhibited at the next Palace Show. Twenty hundredweight of pods, as grown, have to be picked over to find one hundredweight of pods good enough in colour to grind for Ramsden's Peppers. Proof can be had if wanted. Value can always be ascertained through the Custom House returns, so ex parte statements of "wonderful cost" can be ignored. Messrs. Clark's Syphon Stove Co., makers of the well-known Syphon Stove so much in favour with bird-keepers, particulars of which have from time to time been advertised in CAGE BIRDS, have now organised a special department for the domestic hearth—viz., in Cooking Apparatus. Their booklet concerning this, entitled "Cooking Leisure," is very well produced, with an exceptionally striking cover, and containing information on Cooking Stoves, Boiling Rings, Grillers, Hot-plates, Wash Boilers, Water Heaters, etc., all for use with gas. When our readers are buying this class of goods we heartily advise them to write for this little booklet, which will be sent post free anywhere, on application to Messrs. Clark's Syphon Stove Company, 132, Queen Victoria Street, London E.C.

Owing to lack of time, I am compelled to part with my whole stock of Mules and British, writes Mr. D. G. Jones (Llandudno).

I have been a reader of your splendid paper, CAGE BIRDS, for the last twelve months, writes Mr. B. Targett (Battersea), and have tried bird breeding with excellent results—fourteen young from two hens and one cock. I am becoming a member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, which I think a splendid idea.

I have done really well this breeding season, writes Miss L. A. Knight (Lincoln), after two years of indifferent luck, having reared forty-four birds from eight hens. CAGE BIRDS I find a great help to me, and always look forward to Friday morning, because it brings my favourite paper.

Give my sincere thanks to Mr. Jeffrey Jeffries for the advice I obtained from his article on Canary Breeding, writes Mr. J. H. Macey (Splott, Cardiff). Following his advice, though I am a beginner, I have only lost two young out of five nests from two hens, and have reared some grand birds (Norwich).

The following are a few of the breeding results taken at our last meeting of the Northern Border and S.F.C.C.:—Mr. W. Smith, 53, Mr. W. P. Smaith 25, Mr. A. Affleck 26, Mr. W. Affleck 30, Mr. M. Peel 45, Mr. Greenwell 69, Mr. Montgomery 40, Mr. J. Johnstone 90, Mr. J. W. Reid 20, Mr. Brown 11, Mr. Craig 25, Mr. T. Smith 61, Mr. C. Farrer 12.—M. C. Potts, Secretary.

Special Notice.—R. A. Newley, the well-known bird cage specialist, will be glad to receive additional names and addresses of breeders of various types of Canaries, etc. View, purchase of stock for the coming season. Transactions straightforward and for cash. All communications treated in strict confidence.—Write, giving particulars and prices, to R. A. Newley, 24, Stockwell Green, London, S.W.—(Advt.)

The July issue of "Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, is especially interesting as containing an account by Mr. W. E. Teschemaker of the nesting of the Mealy Redpoll, and the successful rearing of the young in his aviaries after seven years of partial success. Other articles comprise "The Green Fruit-suckers," by Mr. Wesley T. Page, with a coloured illustration by Mr. Goodchild; "Nesting Notes," by Mr. G. E. Rattigan; "My New Aviaries," Mrs. M. A. Sproston; "The Life Story of a Mealy Redpoll," "Birds of Gambia," Mr. E. Hopkinson; "The Aviaries at Hartwell House," Mr. E. D. Lee; and the continuation of the valuable list, by Mr. Page, of species which have reared young in captivity in Great Britain.

Those on a study whose colour feed to use, just read these absolute true facts. Everyone below had from 28 lbs. to 112 lbs. Royal Red, Crystal Palace, 1912. Ten Open Champion Norwich classes, nine 1st prize winners, special best bird in show, champion diploma, best in section, were moulted solely on Royal Red by Messrs. Thomas, Davies, Sneaton, Turner. The one first moulted on another was a Buff, four champion Cinnamon classes, every 1st, 2nd and 3rd were moulted solely on Royal Red by Messrs. Dormer, D. Godley, Deacon. In Yorkshires, Messrs. Binns, Thomas, Hirst, Ellis, Dykes, all big first winners, moulted on Royal Red. Sandiford's Royal Red costs £20 per ton more than any other in England. See advert. (Advert.)

Do Slugs Devour Birds?

A pair of Yellowhammers were seen fluttering over their nest on the hills near Llangollen. When the nest was discovered it was found to be partially occupied by a large slug, which was engaged in devouring the eggs and a young bird which had been hatched. These big molluscs will eat almost anything. Probably the slimy exudations of the slug protected it from the attacks of the parent birds, for few birds like to get their bills sticky. (The above is an extract from the "Western Mail.")

Tom-Tit Lights Street Lamp.

A correspondent to the "Times" writes:—"For several weeks past one of the public street lamps at Greenford, near Ealing, has been found alight every day, although the lamplighter extinguished the light each morning. Suspecting that some youthful imp with mischievous propensities was at work, the lamplighter set himself to capture the culprit who was giving him so much trouble. While waiting in hiding to pounce upon the offender, he was amazed to see the lamp apparently light itself. Investigation revealed the fact that a Tomtit had built a snug nest in a corner of the lamp, and was in the habit of hopping on to the ring of the incandescent by-pass, thus turning on the light."

The Parrot's Roast Pork.

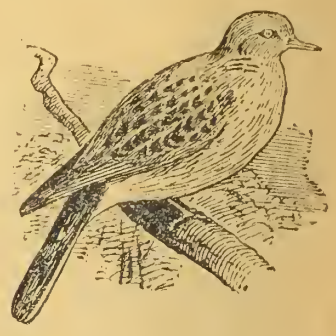
The annual report of Our Dumb Friends' League contains some interesting stories from the animals' hospital. An Amazon Parrot was brought in, dying, and the owner, questioned as to its diet, said: "It do so love hot roast pork, and my husband he ses on Sunday, let it enjoy itself and have as much as it likes, but I think it had too much, and it's been like this all night." An African Grey Parrot was one of the worst offenders at feather plucking. In spite of its state, it continued to cry: "Who cares? Kiss your master; bite your missus; three cheers for the King. Who cares?" One owner of a Jackdaw asked the surgeon to slit its tongue to make the bird talk. A promise to perform the operation was given on condition that the owner tried the effect on his own tongue first. The offer was not accepted!

Wild-Bird Life.

'Midst the Ripening Corn.

THE lovely summer weather is all that bird-lovers could desire. One needs a congenial atmosphere to enjoy the pleasures of bird watching. The weather must be such that it is no discomfort to sit upon the shady side of the hedgerow to watch the Whitethroats, or to lie prone upon the grass out in the open where the Chats amuse us by their sprightly ways, and the Peewits wheel and twist in the air, knowing well that our position is a strange one, and therefore calling for their careful attention. From our seat under the hedge we can see across acres of corn, now grown tall and strong, and bending gracefully to every gentle breeze.

The Turtle Doves are plentiful, and from time to time a pair wheel round and settle among the crop. Very useful birds are these



THE TURTLE DOVE.

Doves, daily eating quantities of noxious wild seeds; but few farmers appear to know their value, and frequently the younger members of the family amuse themselves by shooting the birds as they pass to their feeding grounds.

As the corn waves in the breeze, myriads of insects are disturbed, and it is this that causes the Swallows and Martins to forsake the village tenements and the farm buildings for the open fields. A strong young oak grows out of the hedgerow, and upon a short dead branch a family of young Swallows sit twittering in the sunshine, occasionally preening themselves, and shaking their baby feathers smooth.

When the old birds come with food, they do not settle on the branch, but hover in front of the young ones, and so feed them in what seems to be an unusual manner. One or two of the brood, I notice, appear to be stronger than the others, and these take wing, and follow the old ones. They are not able to fly as fast, but by keeping them in sight and cutting off corners, they manage fairly well. Then when enough food has been collected, these are fed in the air, both old and young hovering for a moment. After this pleasing performance, the young ones return to their perch upon the oak branch, twittering cheerfully. H. N.

Boroughs and Bird Protection.

A circular letter has according to a Bournemouth newspaper been addressed by the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds to the forty County Boroughs of England that are without Bird Protection Orders, drawing attention to the fact that the Order for an administrative county is not operative in a county borough, and urging that the absence of Borough Orders (1) causes confusion in the public mind; (2) allows bird-catchers and egg-robbers to destroy the bird-life of the suburbs, where its preservation is peculiarly desirable; (3) permits the possession and sale in the borough of species illegally taken in the county.

Dear Sirs,—

Please send me on another 1/- tin of "PHOSTO" for Canaries.

The other tin I had seemed to put new life into the feeding hens during the spell of hot weather, and seemed to enable the hens to feed the young without any trouble; and the young ones are growing splendidly.

P.O. enclosed herewith.

Yours faithfully

Advice that will assist bird-keepers and their birds over an anxious time.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR CANARY OWNERS.

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

THE beginning of August marks the commencement of one of the most anxious periods in the year for the Canary keeper and breeder. It is at this time that the moult begins to become general, and before the close of the month the birds that have not begun to shed their plumage should be more the exception than the rule. Many of the older birds and early hatched young ones will have started before the opening of August, and this is far more in the bird's favour than starting to moult unusually late. The bird that begins to cast its feathers towards the end of July will, as a rule, complete its moult whilst the normal temperature is well above the average, and before the chilly nights of autumn begin to give cause for anxiety, and will have a better change of getting quickly through a complete change of plumage without a check.

The Nature of the Moult.

It is a mistake to look upon moulting as a disease, as many are apt to do. On the contrary it is a perfectly natural and necessary process for maintaining the health of the bird, notwithstanding that ills and weaknesses are apt to show themselves during its progress. But this is merely the result of the system being brought a little below par by the drain occasioned by the growth of the new plumage, which makes the subject more susceptible to any unwholesome influences and also brings out any hitherto unsuspected weakness in the constitution, a state of things which may be provided against by a more liberal dietary generally, and keeping the birds under the best possible hygienic conditions.

The adult birds should make a complete change of plumage, including the flights and tail, but young birds of the year undergo only a partial moult, shedding the small body feathers—the contour feathers—and retaining the large quill feathers of wings and tail until the second moult.

The approach of the moult is marked by more or less dullness and loss of activity, and yet there is often a certain restlessness or alteration of habit. The bird begins to sit drowsily for a few minutes at a time on the perch; the plumage becomes apparently loose, and ill-fitting; then the bird rouses up quite brightly, gives itself a shake, and goes to food or water, though perhaps only to "pick about." Afterwards it quite likely visits the floor, and spends some time picking about as though searching for something it cannot find, or goes and sits on the perch and pecks away energetically at nothing in particular on the wires, or at some part of the cage.

In the case of the cock birds, the song almost invariably declines very considerably or ceases altogether, and the restless habits referred to appear to take its place more or less.

The Black-headed Siskin, a pretty American species; drawn from the bird 2nd prize at the Crystal Palace for Mr. L. J. Arrighi (Edinburgh).

They will be frequently pecking amongst their feathers and shaking themselves. After a few days of these symptoms the feathers should begin to drop, the large wing and tail feathers gradually coming away in the adults, and, of course, small feathers only from the young ones. In both cases the normal general progress of the moult is from tail to head, the head and neck being the last parts to moult out.

The Treatment of Normal Cases.

In all normal cases a nourishing and liberal diet is the best and only treatment really necessary, if proper care is taken to protect the birds from draughts and chills, and rapid fluctuations of temperature of an extreme kind. In addition to the staple diet of canary and rape seeds, the latter either mixed with the former in the proportion of one in three for Rollers and one in four for other breeds, or given separately in limited quantities, a morsel of soft-food—egg-food, bread and milk, crushed plain biscuit, or sponge, or Madeira cake—equivalent to a small teaspoonful per bird, should be given every second day from the time the symptoms of moult appear. Any or all of these items may be given, alternately, for variety. This, of course, is leaving out of consideration birds that are being colour fed.

On the alternate days a pinch of maw should be given, and twice a week a small teaspoonful per bird of a mixture of one part each white millet and black rape, half part each niger, linseed and teazle, and a quarter part each gold of pleasure, hemp and mustard. This is chiefly for the small, short-feathered breeds. For large and heavily feathered breeds, an extra part of crushed oats or broken groats, and a sprinkling of crushed sunflower seed should be added.

Nasturtium and marigold blooms may be offered all through the moult, and a variety of seedy green foods should be given four times a week—plantain stalks, shepherd's purse, chickweed, and flower buds of groundsel are all excellent and readily obtainable. Green fly, and occasional mealworms, thistle heads, broken open (which are often tenanted by maggots), are all good fare. A piece of cuttlefish kept in the wires is also serviceable. Twenty drops of whisky and a few shreds of meadow saffron in the water (about two tablespoonfuls) now and again, will provide a very useful stimulant, and help to keep the moult in progress. A bath should be offered daily in mild dry weather, but more good than harm will accrue from withholding it in wet, chilly weather. Birds that seem unduly affected by the strain of the moult or show any sign of wheeziness should only be given the bath on warm sunny days.

A Good Moult—and a Bad.

Much anxiety is often caused by a bird seeming to become almost bare in a very few days after starting to moult. This anxiety is generally misplaced, because such a state of things is almost certain to indicate that a very rapid moult is about to take place, and on general lines it is safe to say that the quickest moult is invariably the best from every point of view. It certainly puts an extra strain upon the bird temporarily, and lays it more open to risk from colds and chills. But the first point will be amply compensated by the system of feeding already given, and the addition of twenty drops of chemical food to the water about every third day for a time, and the risk of chill may be fully guarded against by covering the cage over until the new plumage has made a fair growth or is mature.

Far less desirable is the moult that drags on slowly for many weeks, the bird shedding but a very few feathers daily, or only at intervals of several days, or when feathers are shed freely for a few days and then cease for a week or two. A slow, gradual moult is not necessarily a bad one if it goes on regularly without a check, but, nevertheless, it is not desirable, inasmuch as it is apt to drag slowly on until the cold chilly weather arrives, and puts a stop to it until next spring.

Nothing is better to expedite matters in such a case than warmth. When the moult seems likely to drag in this way, place the bird at once where it will enjoy a warm, equable temperature; dust its soft food two or three times a week with flowers of sulphur, and add twenty drops of whisky and five of syrup of saffron to the drinking water every second day until moult proceeds more satisfactorily.

At the Start and at the Close.

Should a bird show the usual symptoms of approaching moult, and not commence to shed feathers in a reasonable time, and begin to grow dull and listless, more energetic measures may become necessary. Add first of all twelve drops of syrup of buckthorn to its drinking water for three consecutive days, and place it in a decidedly lower temperature for a few days, giving the sulphur in soft food and whisky, and saffron in water as first mentioned. If the bird drops into moult, as it should, then it may be kept going freely upon that treatment, and housing it in a moderately warm and equable temperature. But in case it does not start to moult under those circumstances, a vapour bath may have the desired effect.

One way of giving this is to put the bird in a wire cage on a table, place a mug of very hot water beside it, and cover over the cage and mug entirely with a woollen wrap or rug, and leave so for an hour or thereabouts. The cage for the purpose should be a fair size, or some support be placed underneath the cover to allow a fair amount of air space beneath it. A much more convenient method is to arrange a vapour cabinet like the one illustrated and described in "Our Canaries." When other methods fail, a hand-washing will not infrequently prove very effectual to set the moult going.

When the moult is coming to an end, which will be known by the quills (pen feathers) beginning to appear about the head, some form of iron tonic will be very useful to brace up the birds and tighten the plumage. A crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a large hemp seed added twice a week to the drinking water, in which six drops of glycerine have been mixed, will be most useful until the last few feathers that may remain have been dropped; or 20 drops of Parrish's Chemical food will serve a similar purpose.

Afterwards if the bird shows signs of lack of vitality and is an undue time in getting over the strain of the moult, six drops of tincture of gentian, and three each of tincture of steel and dilute sulphuric acid, will form one of the very best tonics for toning up the birds, and at the same time tightening up the plumage. But do not begin to give the last-named until the feathers cease to drop, or it may check the final stage of the moult.

Timely Tips For Lovers of British Birds.

By J. STEEL (Dalketh).

WITH the advent of August the British bird-keeper enters on a most portentous season. As the condition of his charges will for another year be reflexive of his treatment during this and next month, a few hints will, I feel, be appreciated by the novice. I find the majority are very liable to make the fatal error of delaying treatment, so I will begin with a few Don'ts.

Don't wait till your bird has started to shed feathers, as such shedding of the old is indicative that the new plumage has already so far advanced in formation as to be almost beyond benefiting by any treatment. This is particularly applicable to colour feeding, many good birds being spoiled by patchy feeding. Therefore if colour feeding is intended, start before the moult. This remark, however, applies to all my other hints, though a slight delay is not so fatal to appearance.

Your Early Attention Needed.

Don't coddle Britishers. A cool atmosphere, with plenty of light and pure air, is much more beneficial than the system of semi, and even total darkness, with its attendant vitiation, which I find is only too common with Canary keepers.

Don't omit removing any abnormal growth of claws or bill, or accumulation of scale on legs, before the bird has assumed its new plumage, as handling always involves a risk of the latter being damaged. A pair of sharp nail cutters and a piece of sandpaper will be found useful for trimming bills. In cutting claws always err on the safe side. If the birds foot is held up to a strong light, the vein, which must be cleared, is quite visible. If such should be cut into bleeding will result.

To remove the scales from the legs, they should be massaged gently with glycerine or vaseline daily for four or five days, immersing them in fairly warm water for a few minutes each time before rubbing in the unguent, when their removal will be easily accomplished with a letter opener or similar blunt instrument. If the horny sheath is so dense as to defy removal by this method, examination will show that such terminates in a horny ridge on front of the tarsus; this sometimes becomes partly detached and gives us the absurd "shin-bone shedding" theory. Carefully pare and scrape this ridge with a sharp instrument, till the point of partition is reached, when by inserting the letter opener, the horny sheath may be levered open and removed entire. No pain is involved, and though the legs are rather tender for about two days, the operation is really a kindness, and has a very rejuvenating effect on the bird's action and appearance.

The Order of the Bath.

Don't omit to hang a show cage, containing a few titbits, on front of the stock cage, so that the bird may become accustomed to it, and have no hesitation when being run out or handled. Don't confine the foods which are beneficial at this period to one item, as though some may be better than others, a variety is best of all. I find that the tendency to use one variety of seed, fruit or insect is prevalent, and the bird gets quite surfeited. Don't omit to supply the bath every day, such being essential to the production of "condition"; for those which persistently refuse to indulge, the spray or shower must be substituted. An exception may be made in the case of delicate Softbills and the operation confined to those days which are warm and sunny; or the bird may be removed to a warm room till thoroughly dry. Don't confine your bird in a cage too small to allow him plenty of exercise, apart from the certainty that he will fray his wings and tail. Don't omit to counteract any habit of jumping from perch to wires, such being very liable to cause fraying, and being objectionable on the show-bench. The remedy for this habit is to place a spray of boxwood, or other foliage too light for perching on, between the wires at the part he jumps to.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

A WHITE FILM (Border).—Unfortunately the bird is suffering from cataract, and nothing you can do will be of any avail to cure it. You must consider yourself fortunate if it does not attack the other eye. Feed rather generously, and give a fair supply of green food, but avoid over-feeding, to make it fat. It may delay the progress of the disease, but cure there is none.

YOUNG PLUCKING EACH OTHER (An Old Amateur).—The only practicable cure of this is to prevent it (to use an Irishism) by caging the birds separately or in couples until the plumage is grown. If only one or two birds do the plucking, cage these separately, also any which are plucked until bare and sore, and give all the birds a half ripe plantain stalk daily. The birds left in the flights may then relinquish the habit, but you must keep a watch over them, and if they do not, separate them also.

BARE NECKS AND SORE FOOT (S.J.F.).—(1) It is quite useless dusting sulphur on the skin. Slightly dust the egg food with it twice a week for a month, give a quarter teaspoonful of maw every second day, and treat birds on same general lines as advised to "Anxious," when they will probably regain perfect plumage during the moult. Watch them to see if they pluck each other, and if so, isolate culprits as advised to An Old Amateur. (2) Bathe the foot for a few minutes in a warm solution of boracic acid—a small teaspoonful of acid in a saucerful of warm water—dry gently, and slightly anoint with boracic ointment. Do not leave on any appreciable quantity to attract dirt. Repeat anointing once or twice at intervals of a few days.

GONE ALMOST BARE (Anxious).—The birds going almost bare as soon as the moult is well begun is nothing to be alarmed about. It is usually indicative of an excellent and quick moult. See that the birds are quite free from extreme fluctuations of temperature and draughts, and keep them rather on the warm side whilst very bare, and all will be well. The soreness at wing butts may possibly indicate red mites. Look well into this, and touch the ends of perches, joints of doors, etc., with insecticide, and also add a few drops of essence of quassia to the bathing water twice a week as a precaution. Also take notice whether there are any feather pluckers among them, and if so, isolate them.

LATE FEATHERING (Sam Hall).—Some birds are naturally later in feathering than others, and there may be a variety of external causes to delay the process, so that it is not possible to give a definite cause in any particular case with no data to go upon. The young may have been weakly when hatched, or the parents may have been poor feeders, so that the young did not get a fair start, or the hen might not have brooded them very well, all of which would tend to delay feathering. When they drop into moult, dust the soft food slightly twice a week with flowers of sulphur for a month, and keep the birds quite on the warm side when they should come through perfectly feathered.

TO CURE ASTHMA (A. E. Lewis).—First of all remove the causes—cold draughts, extreme and rapid fluctuations of temperature, and foul, impure and heated air, such as exists near the ceiling and near burning lights in the evenings. Give a plain, wholesome, and not fattening diet. For one week give plain canary only with a liberal allowance of green food daily, and add to the drinking water six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day. After this make diet a little more varied, and give half-a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of whisky and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw every second day for a month, and add 20 drops of the following mixture to the water on the alternate days during same time. Mixture. Two drams each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one dram each of chloroldyne and ipecac. wine, and eight grains of iodide of potassium. Any chemist will mix this for you.

CREST FEEDING (G. M. D.).—Glad to hear the birds have got on so nicely so far. Do not be too anxious to get them wholly on to a seed diet. About every third day omit the bread and milk, and gradually shorten the intervals of withholding it until you find the birds quite able to thrive upon seed. Ultimately omit it altogether, and substitute a little crushed plain biscuit or sponge cake now and again. Say omit bread and milk twice in one week, five times in the next fortnight, then three times in one week, and so on. At first when omitting soft food, give a half ripe plantain stalk.

SEXUAL DISTINCTIONS (W. N.).—These are all comparative, and often very slight, so that one can only hope to become expert at distinguishing sex by practical experience and close observation. The cocks are bolder, and have a more pushful and dominant carriage, the eye more bolting; the body shows a more filled-in and finer curve from under tail coverts on to abdomen, and the natural colour is more intense on the wing butts and throat. The voice is more full and liquid, even in the "tweeting" call-note, than the harsh rasping of the hen. The song is the only certain guide for the novice, that of the cock being full, free, and constant, with a very perceptible pulsation of the throat. A few hens make more or less successful attempts at singing, but rarely get beyond a twitter. See plate in Part VI. of "Our Canaries," where the external appearance of the sexes is admirably portrayed.

BIRDS DYING (Anxious).—You have certainly been overdoing things in the matter of feeding, and this is doubtless a contributory cause to the fatalities, which I imagine are directly due to apoplectic seizures brought on by excessive nervousness, and most likely constipation. You must make the birds a little more familiar with your work about the cages, but do all in a perfectly quiet, methodical manner, "tweeting" and "conversing" with them meanwhile. Avoid any sudden, jerky motions, and do not go near them wearing any alarming headdress or other apparel. Treat them for one week, as advised to "A. E. Lewis," but give only a moderate amount of green food to the young. You will find detailed particulars for future dietary in No. 10 Nutshell booklet, but I prefer a staple of two parts canary to one part rape.

A DISAPPOINTING NORWICH (Trooper, Stretford).—Examine the cage carefully by raking out any joints or crevices you can find with a pin to see if any red mites are present. Also take particular notice whether this bird's position is subject to occasional draughts. One or other is very probable. In addition to the staple diet, give a morsel of bread soaked in cold milk, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days just a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet and teazle. Add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the water four times a week during same period. After this treat as advised to "Melbourne" last week. It is quite too late to think of getting bird in breeding form this year.

MOULTING AND PANTING (L.E.F.).—I'm afraid this bird is beyond help. See that it is kept quite free from cold draughts, impure or heated air, and extreme rapid fluctuations. Add six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence to its drinking water for two days and give a morsel of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and dusted with soft sugar daily for three days. After this treat the same as advised to "A. E. Lewis," but omit the first week's treatment of plain diet and apericuts.

ROLLERS DYING (S. Green).—Judging from your remarks, the birds appear to be suffering from epilepsy, and are probably of weakly constitution, in addition to which I suspect there is something wrong with your management. See that they are kept under bright, healthy, and hygienic conditions, with plenty of pure fresh air, but no direct draughts. For one week give the rhubarb and soda mixture advised to "L. E. F.," and afterwards add 20 drops of Chemical Food in the water every second day for a month, and on the alternate days in the first fortnight give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and dilute sulphuric acid. Give a morsel of bread and milk, as advised to "L. E. F.," every second day for a fortnight, and a pinch of maw on the alternate days. Your feeding is probably faulty. Get the nutshell booklet No. 10, and feed as therein advised, but give a staple of two parts canary to one part summer rape.

CAUSE OF SEPTICŒMIA (B. J. S.).—If not imported with a fresh bird, or some kind of appliance or second hand cage, you may take it as invariably arising from some putrescent matter finding its way into the system by means of food or water. Stale egg food is the most fertile cause, and foul water or neglected water vessels are probably the next in order. The fact of the birds dying after being removed simply means that they had already become infected before leaving the flight. Every cage in which a death has occurred should be thoroughly disinfected and allowed to stand vacant, preferably in the open air, before being used again. The Nutshell booklet No. 9 will give you full information on this point, and you will do well to read Dr. Clarke's handbook on "Septic Fever," particularly that part dealing with the sporadic non virulent type, which is the same as the trouble among your birds. Once the birds are attacked you can do nothing to cure them. To prevent it, see that all food and water supplied is absolutely fresh and pure, keep cages scrupulously clean, and allow no droppings or scraps of food to accumulate in them, and isolate all doubtful birds. When a death occurs it is safest to cremate the body at once. Stop all egg food for a time, and substitute a little bread and milk, crushed plain biscuit, or sponge cake, given dry, or scalded rape. To tone up the bird and give them a better chance to resist infection, add four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid to the water about twice a week, and make the water for all suspected birds slightly pink with Condy's Fluid.

LEG TROUBLE (Novice).—Sorry, but I cannot quite grip your description. You say "the bird's leg is misplaced; its leg slips nearly to the back, especially when it grips the perch; and then slips along it." Are the feet in a normal condition, or the toes contracted and curled underneath, so that the toes do not, or cannot readily encircle the perch, but remain, like a clenched fist, on top of it? Please write again and describe the matter as clearly as you can, enclosing, if possible, a rough sketch showing shape of foot, and position of leg when it slips "nearly to the back," as you say. Meantime, try the bird with a thin perch, about the size of a lead pencil. Incidentally you would find particulars and helpful illustrations for treating deformed feet in Part VI. of "Our Canaries."

VARIOUS (D. O'Brien, San Francisco).—I take it you have been using cages in which the nest pan is dropped into a circular hole in a platform. Such cages are almost out of date now, the platform being dispensed with, and the nest-pan hung with a bracket on the back or end of the cage. This does away with the disagreeable sight you refer to which is quite objectionable to the health of the birds as the eye of their owner. You will almost certainly succeed better with single pairs in cages. The failure of the hens to rear their young may be due to some error in making the soft food, and I certainly do not approve of apple as a substitute for green food when young are being reared. Either lettuce, watercress, chickweed, groundsel, or chicory, assuming they are similar to our English plants, would be better in every way. To make your egg food, use one part egg to two of stale household bread crumbs, or an equal amount of Osborne biscuit. No sugar is necessary, but a very little may be added to try to tempt a flagging feeder. Ten minutes is sufficient to boil eggs—five minutes is very apt to leave the centre of the yolk sticky, and longer than ten is quite unnecessary. You could get cages sent out, cut, planed, and ready to put together, but it would come expensive. Postage alone for a single cage would be not less than 3s. 6d. You should get "Aviaries, Birdrooms, and Cages," which our Manager would send you for 2s. 3d., and make your own cages. It's simple enough. If the wiring proved any difficulty you could make the woodwork and get some wire fronts made on punched bars sent out.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.,

WHAT BULBUL? (W. H. Turner).—If you have given me all the colours of the bird, and it has no black face mask, it is a female Jerdon's Green Bulbul, or Fruitsucker. I feed all my Fruitsuckers on ripe fruit, as in season (very fond of orange, but do not overdo this), milk sop, soft food (not much taken), and a few live insects, ringing the changes with mealworms, gentles, smooth caterpillars, spiders, earwigs, etc., as obtainable. If as above, value about 50s. to 60s.

SEED MIXTURE FOR AMAZON (Anxious One).—One quart each canary and white millet seeds; one pint each oats, paddy rice and hemp seed; half-a-pint each dari, maize, wheat, shelled nuts, and sunflower seeds, one gill each chillies and parrot grit—well mix and store in dust-proof tins. If any item of the above is persistently refused, you can omit it, but you must not permit the bird to diet itself upon hemp and sunflower seed only. Ripe fruit, plain biscuit, greenfood and cuttlebone must also be regularly given. Any good gritty sand will do for cage tray, but it must be grit (not sand) you put with the seed mixture.

GREENFOOD FOR PARRAKEETS (A. S.).—Offer any flowering and seeding weeds they will eat or pick over, they get more out of the latter than is apparent by what they leave. So long as they last, shepherd's purse, chickweed, groundsel, daudelion heads, in fact any non-poisonous weeds obtainable, may be offered—all these with grasses will be more or less obtainable till frost appears, then their place can be taken by lettuce and sweet apple; also canary, rape and millet seedings, which can be grown indoors in any sunny window.

WHAT BIRD? (W. J. B.).—You give me no description of the size of the bird, simply the length of its tail. It is evidently a young bird, and may change materially in plumage later. Your description reads very much like that of a Quaker Parrakeet, but as a rule this species does not talk much, but makes itself objectionable by yapping like a small dog, more or less continually. If you can give me further particulars, I will try and be more definite—it might prove to be a female Ring-necked Parrakeet, but I think not—for instance compare the size of its body with that of some well-known bird. Is the tail square or rounded at the end, or are the central feathers much longer than the outer ones? I will keep your query by me pending further details.

PARROT MIXTURE (E. A. B.).—Parrot mixtures ought to be varied somewhat for the different groups, but the following would answer well as a general mixture, though there should be a larger proportion of canary and millet for the smaller Parrakeets, and the quantities of the larger seeds increased for Cockatoos, Macaws, and Amazons. Few of the Australian Parrakeets for instance will eat dry maize. One quart each canary and white millet seeds; one pint each wheat, oats, dari, paddy rice and hemp; half-a-pint each sunflower seeds, shelled nuts, small maize, pumpkin and chillies, one gill parrot grit; well mix and store in dust-proof tins.

BLUE SUGAR-BIRD (Sugar Bird).—The Blue Sugar-Bird I do not consider to be as robust as Yellow winged: however, the principal difficulty is getting them over the prostration following importation; once this is achieved they (or it) should do well under the condition you name. The temperature of your sitting room should be sufficient, providing they are kept free from draught. They will do all right with the Canaries providing they agree, you will have to prove this by experiment, but I certainly advise you to keep the bird in a separate cage for at least a month—till it is quite established. If the Red-rest mixture is one mixed to a recipe given by me, yes; but with advantage more crumbled sponge cake might be added for the Sugarbird. Any soft food mixture of repute should meet the case. Diet: Soft food, milk sop and ripe fruit ad lib, with an occasional mealworm, spider, etc., if it cares for them. It will live without a mate.

A FEATHER PLUCKER (H. Ayres).—The symptoms you describe point to severe skin irritation, and you cannot be sure there are no parasites, as some are microscopic, and not discernible with the naked eye. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food whatever. Get our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2d. post free, from our Manager, and diet the bird as given there, mixing your own seed mixture according to the recipe there given. Diet: Seed not fatty, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, greenfood, grit, cuttlebone, and water for drinking and bathing. Spray it twice weekly with quassia solution made as directed. Give one teaspoonful of bismuth Magnesite in the drinking water every fourth day, so long as the voidings are not watery loose; but at present the bowels must be kept moving quite freely. On other days put half-a-teaspoonful of Byno-phosphate in the drinking water. Give the bird all the air and light possible without draught. On warm days it can go out of doors with advantage for a time, but it must not be put in any exposed position, or be out of doors during the prevalence of chilly or gusty winds. Report progress a month hence. Do not attend to the dog in its presence.

SPARROWS, QUAIL, ETC. (C. H. S.).—(1) As you found the bird in the Mus. collection, it is a pity you did not get genera and species. I could have answered you at once. I have no note of the name by me, but I will ascertain. Senegal Sparrow would cover many species. Supply canary, white and spray millet, greenfood, grit and water; if necessary I will revise this next week. (2) The colour is variable, but yours is a somewhat abnormal specimen. (3)

The Japanese Bunting is not a night bird, but if there is a light and they were hungry, undoubtedly they would get a feed. It is a matter of birdy individuality, if they will agree with the Weavers, etc., you can keep them together. (4) In addition to those you name, plantain, all wild grasses, golden pleasure, dock, and any non-poisonous weeds: some of them, the foreign species, only pick over the flower heads and seed pods. Seeding and flowering mignonette, cornflower seed heads, marigold flowers and seed heads, may all be given, also their dried seeds.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

TWO WEEDS (L. A. Knight).—No. 1 I think, is wall lettuce, or a closely related species. I have never used it with birds: No. 2 is ribwort plantain. The seeds of the plantains are in common use amongst bird-keepers, and especially good as a change of diet during the moulting season. Dock seed is relished by some of the British seed-eaters, notably Greenfinches and Bullfinches. There are heaps of "old, tried friends" depicted on the coloured plate, and no real need to experiment with others.

NOT TOO LOUD (Singer).—Judging by your statement of the case I should think Mr. Goodall's article on the Blackcap in our last issue would show you the way out of the difficulty. All the larger birds with any pretentions to be termed songsters are "loud-voiced." The Blackcap Warbler is a most pleasing pet in addition to being a highly capable vocalist. And no neighbours are ever likely to complain about him. Failing this bird, I should think a Woodlark very suitable; you will find its treatment dealt with in "Nutshell" booklet No. 26.

THE CASE OF A BULLFINCH (J. D. C.).—Your bird is evidently a long way down "Queer Street"; I hope, however, it is not too late for him to take the "right turning" and recover his health. I should not give the seed mixture you mention. Substitute the following plainer mixture: Canary and teazle 3 parts each, summer rape 1 part (by measure). In addition, give every other day, alternately, a dessertspoonful of cracked white sunflower seed and a teaspoonful of maw seed. Give only the seed-pods of shepherd's purse, stopping the chickweed for the time being and substituting ripe plantain ("rats' tails"), thistle, and hard-heads. For one week dissolve daily in the drinking water (two tablespoonfuls) a pinch of cystals of citrate of iron and quinine—about as much as will just lie on a sixpence; then for another week change to tincture of gentian, a small half-teaspoonful in the same quantity of water.

FEATHER TROUBLES (Nature).—Don't you think it probable that the two hens which you say are together are indulging in feather plucking? Unmated hens are prone to go in for this kind of "amusement." On the other hand, the moulting season is now upon us, and the loss of feathers may be but a natural happening. The majority amongst cage birds are getting deep into moult. In any case, it is not worth while troubling about any of the birds just at the moment, for their raggedness is sure to be made good by Dame Nature in the course of a few week's time—she will provide new garments. See that the birds have opportunity to bathe regularly and that their cages are free from insect pests. If they decline the bath, they should certainly be sprayed fairly frequently. Loss of plumage, or a poor condition of the plumage, is said to be frequently the result of long-continued error in the feeding of the bird. Your method of giving hemp and niger seeds regularly to Bullfinches is tantamount to "asking for trouble" in this direction. Hemp should be an item of very occasional use only; and niger seed even more so. Consult the "Nutshell" booklet on the Bullfinch and amend your menu.

ONE LARGE; ONE SMALL (L. E. H.).—I dealt with the feeding of Magpies, etc., quite recently. Puppy cakes, or dog meal or food (such as "Melox") thoroughly soaked with hot water and reduced to a kind of pulpy consistency, will rear Magpies, Jays, etc., splendidly; very cheaply too. Minced hard-boiled egg can be added or given separately. As the birds grow, give some meat chopped into tiny pieces (beef or mutton), or rabbit flesh, which I prefer to anything. When adult, the "Melox," or similar dog food, answers admirably, though, of course, not made so "sloppy"; add table scraps of meat, vegetables, gravy, and the like; also give dead mice, sparrows, beetles, small snails, gentles, etc., frequently. They are very accommodating birds in the matter of their food. The cage needs to be very large to afford the bird any real exercise—quite a small aviary, in fact—and you should be as generous in the matter of space as possible. Length not less than 4ft. 6in. or 5ft., width 2ft. 6in., height 2ft. 9in. to 3ft.; in a smaller cage the tail is rarely kept perfect; further, such a cage needs to be very frequently cleaned out. Try peat moss litter for the cage floor (the small, granulated kind). During the moult be generous with the live food—trapped mice, for instance. A Siskin is one of the easiest of all birds to tame, though the Redpoll runs it closely. I have no doubt, however, that an advertisement in CAGE BIRDS would bring you a bird already tamed. You could get it on approval.

A TRIO (A. C. P.).—(1) It is quite true that Greypates (i.e., very young Goldfinches) are not the easiest of birds to get inured to cage life. The most certain method you could follow would be to wait a month or two and then purchase a housemoulted (white-legged) bird: they are often to be picked up in the autumn at a very moderate price. The method to which you refer is given in the "Nutshell" booklet. (2) There is very little in it: both are good, though may-be the Greenfinch is entitled to a shade of preference. (3) All things being equal, I should think a Goldfinch-Greenfinch of somewhat higher value than the other too, but merely because it seems to catch the judge's eye the most frequently in a mixed class. A real first-class, rich-coloured specimen of this cross is a fine, attractive bird, but the Siskin-Greenfinch is a lovely Hybrid and the Redpoll-Greenie very little behind it—in fact, neither should be beaten by the first-mentioned Hybrid if this be in anywise an inferior specimen of its kind.

A BIG BATCH (J. W. Anderson).—Your eight questions are rather a hot lot to answer all at once in the space at my disposal. (1) Your aviary will accommodate 50 small birds, or even more, but if you want to breed, over-crowding will be fatal to your chances, and I advise you to cut the number down. (2) I have often said that the most unsatisfactory method of trying to breed Hybrids is by means of a crowd of birds of different species confined in one aviary—yours is a fair-sized place, but not large enough for this plan to be likely to bring any great measure of success. The following hens would be the likeliest: Bullfinch, Greenfinch, Siskin, Chaffinch, and Yellowhammer. Cocks: Goldfinch (English and Siberian), Redpoll (Mealy and Lesser), Linnet, Twite, Bramblefinch, and Reed Bunting. Have not mentioned Canary hens, but these, of course, could be utilised. (3) Yes; fir branches are difficult to beat. (4) Half-inch mesh wire. Double-netting is necessary as a protection against cats. My own aviary has half-inch netting on the inner side of the uprights, five-eighths on the outer, the space between being from 1½ to 2 inches, thus preventing any bird which flies on the wire (or roosts there) from being struck. (5) Soft-bills can certainly be kept; but how about the breeding results? (6) Grass is the ideal flooring, but in your place it would soon be soiled up. Let one portion be earth (not hard, but left loose) and the other gritty sand. A few evergreen shrubs can be included; and you can sow grass seeds to form a "tangle" or "jungle" if you like. (7) Put the netting inside the glass. A glass roof, by-the-bye, is not good; results in place getting very hot if sun strikes on it. (8) CAGE BIRDS publishes a book dealing with aviaries, their construction, fitting, etc., and it is full of fine photographic and other illustrations. Just the book you want, I should fancy.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

T. Simpson.—Thanks for the cutting sent, which we will certainly utilise if space permits.

Old Sport. We advise you to write direct to the official in question of the Centre and Dist. Society. Maybe, like many other of the lucky ones of the earth, he is enjoying a long holiday. We could do with a week or two in Wales ourselves!

A. J. W.—The plumage you describe is not that of any English bird we can call to mind, and we think the stranger must be either an escaped or a released foreign bird. It may quite likely be the bird known as the American Robin (really a Thrush), a number of which have been turned loose in England. If it is really a young bird (as you suggest), then its correct identification becomes a matter of considerable interest. Is there no natural history museum near you to which you could take the bird? Or send a rough sketch with details of colouring and markings to our foreign bird specialist, Mr. W. T. Page. You are sure about the size you give?

G. Heneyfield.—The general principles of the Wild Birds Acts are clearly set out in the "Bird Dealers' and Cat hers' Guide," price 7d., post free, from Messrs. Trower and Company, 442, Caledonian-road, London, N. You should get a copy, and also send three penny stamps to Messrs. Wyman and Company, Ltd., printers, Fetter-lane, London, E.C., for copies of the latest bye-laws governing Somerset and Gloucestershire. You would then have all the available information at your finger tips. Messrs. Wyman are Government printers, and copies of the W.B.P. Acts for any district will be supplied by them at one penny each, plus postage. In Gloucestershire the close season is between March 1st and August 1st, but certain birds (the Goldfinch, Redpoll, and Siskin, for instance) are protected all the year round, and in some districts all birds are protected on Sundays all the year round. In Somerset it is March 1st to August 31st, and a number of birds are protected all the year round, but there is no restriction concerning catching on Sundays.

The Shows.

NEWBURGH (Fife).

Annual flower and cage bird show, held in East Shore Park, July 20th. Despite the poor breeding season experienced, there was a very nice show. Norwich were a fine lot, also Borders. Special for best young bird was won by J. Stewart with a fine Norwich; runner up, R. Campbell, with a nice yellow Border hen. There was a record attendance and this is very encouraging for the committee to open out a few of the classes at their next show. The show was a success both financially and as regards quality. The large number of fanciers present were surprised at the good condition of the old birds. Mr. D. Carstairs (Perth) judged, and his awards were well received.

CREST: 1, Campbell, wing mkd. D.C., grand substance of body, with a nice dense crest; 2, Blyth, nice bird, not quite the size of leader. CREST-BRED: 1, Blyth, buff var. heu, nice head and feather; 2, Pearson, cl. yell. cock, not at his best, will be heard of again: 3, 4, 5, Jackson, all good ones, a pretty even class. NORWICH: 1, Simpson, wing mkd. buff, topper, will be heard of again: 2, 3, spl, J. Stewart, good col. buff leading, latter fine young bird; 4, J. Pearson; 5, 6, Stewart. BORDERS: 1, Simpson, nice stylish yell. ck., tight as wax: 2, Brough, buff, even wing mkd. hen, pretty exhibit: 3, 4, 5, 6, spl, Campbell, nice team of youngsters, 2nd best in young birds amongst this lot. MULE: 1, Williamson, very large and good buff Linnet; 2, Wilkie, nice variegated Goldie. LINNET: 1, Wilkie, good steady bird, well pencilled; 2, Simpson, also good one, not quite so steady; 3, Douglas; 4, Panton; 5, 6, Brough. GOLDFINCH: 1, Simpson, Siberian, in grand order, wins easily; 2, W. Stewart, very nice stylish Britisher; 3, Johnston; 4, Wilkinson. BULLFINCH: 1, Johnston, very good cap, excellent breast col.; 2, Stewart, not far behind, not quite so steady. A.O.V. BRIT.: 1, Wilkie, very good Siskin, grand cap and bib; 2, Simpson. BOYS' CLASS: 1, W. Pearson; 2, P. Brough; 3, J. Snaddon. GIRLS' CLASS: 1, Nannie Kidd.

NANTLLE VALE.

Second annual fixture, held July 27, at Talysarn, in connection with other live stock, in a large room, well arranged, with plenty of light. Quality was good throughout. The weather was very favourable till late in the day, when the rain came down in torrents, and the exhibitors from a distance got drenched on their return. The exhibits might have been allowed from the ground earlier, or better travelling arrangements have been made; this we hope will be considered another year. Everything else ran very smoothly, and the room was well filled with spectators, as is always the case in the quarry districts. We were pleased to see a few more exhibitors to the fore, who shared in the coveted cards. Mr. Herbert Jones (Penygroes) took best bird in show spl. with a variegated Buff Yorks., in excellent condition. Entries numbered 82 in the 15 classes, with Yorks. still leading: Borders were a treat here, in their home centre of the district; also Norwich, notably Mr. E. D. Owen's youngster, a stormer, hard to find fault with. Chairman, Mr. Richard Jones; vice-chairman, Mr. E. P. Jones; treas., Mr. J. Williams, secretaries, Messrs. W. Jones, and M. Llewelyn Jones, who were very efficient officials, and had everything carried out in proper order. Mr. A. Wellings (Prescot) made the awards, and gave general satisfaction.

The Critique.

NOR., YELL. (3): 1, sp., 2, 3, L. D. Owen, 1st, grand size, clear yell., nice head and neck, wins on condition and size, 2nd, mkd. yell., very good colour, but not so tight in feather, 3rd, variег., rich colour. BUFF (3): 1, E. J. Jones, variег., grand size and quality, rich colour, good head and neck; 2, 3, E. D. Owen, both good clears, 2nd, beating the other in size and condition. YORKS., YELL., CL., OR TKD. (8): 1, sp., Nolan, Cinn., head tkd., lengthy, and stylish, nice quality, in fine condition; 2, H. Jones, cl., good position, lengthy, very stylish; 3, R. E. Griffiths, noted, thigh tkd. hen, very leggy and typical; he, Sergt. Evans. BUFF (4): 1, Sergt. Evans, cl., good length and position, very stylish, in faultless condition; 2, 3, Nolan, 2nd clear, fine length and position, nicely moulded; 3rd, eye tkd., good position and style, a very promising youngster; he, H. Jones. A.O.V. (5): 1, sp., 2, sp. best in show, H. Jones, 1st variег. buff, fine feather, rich colour, stands well on legs, slim, length and in faultless condition, 2nd, variег. yell., smaller, but very stylish, breaking into moult; 3, E. J. Jones, very stylish, stands well. BORD. YELL. (6): 1, R. H. Jones, 3 pointed, nice type and carriage, feather like silk, faultless condition; 2, R. H. Owen, self green, good type, jaunty carriage, nice feather; 3, he, H. Jones, 3rd, cap mkd., fine feather, shade bigger. BUFF (5): 1, R. H. Jones, typical cl., full of quality, in rare fettle, lovely feather; 2, sp., he, H. Jones, 2nd wing tkd., nicely shaped, grand carriage, rich colour, good bird; 3, J. and E. Williams, excellent type and quality, in nice form. CAN., NAT. COL. (5): 1, sp. D. M. Hughes, foul green Crest, fair headpiece, grand body, good size and substance; 2, R. E. Griffith, yell Yorks., already noted; 3, Sergt. Evans, slim yell. Yorks., nice length, plenty of leg, not yet filled out in neck; he, E. J. Jones. A.V., HATCHED 1912 (7): Good class of promising youngsters. 1, sp., 3, E. D. Owen, 1st, four-pointed Buff, rare size and substance, good head and neck, full of quality, the best we have seen for some time, 3rd, variег. yell., good type and quality, shade light; 2, Nolan, young buff Yorks., noted in open; he, P. C. Roberts. MULE (6): 1, Edgar Price, four-pointed buff Goldie, good size and quality, rich colour, grand blaze in faultless condition, well known; 2, sp., 3, he, R. E. Grillith, grand trio, Siskin Mule leading, rare type and quality, in great form. 3rd, light Goldie, good type, rich colour, well known; he, dark Goldie. BRIT GOLDFINCH (5): 1, sp., R. POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

KINGSWOOD (Bristol).

Held July 24th, and proved a success, the quality of the exhibits being excellent. They were nicely staged and had the best of attention from a committee of genuine fanciers. Yorks., Mules, and Hybrids were a good lot, several well-known winners being put down. Mr. O. E. Hodge makes a most capable and energetic secretary, and had everything in smooth running order. Mr. J. H. Payne made the awards, and seemed to give every satisfaction.

Absolutely Indispensable to Bird-keepers.

THE STOCK BOOK.

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

It simplifies the operations in the Birdroom and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Gives also valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

A noted fancier says of this book, "It makes bird-breeding easy."

The Type of the Present-day Norwich Plainhead.

Sir,—I would like to know whether the S.N.P.C. Scale of Points for judging are the correct points of the Norwich? It runs something like this: Head 15, neck 10, back 10, chest 15, wings 10, tail 5, legs and feet 5, quality 15, colour 15, total 100. If this is right or wrong, it represents the kind of bird for me. I don't want the Crest-bred tribe with their brow and long feather. I say the one with the bold, round head should be the bird. I heard one man say that colour was 50 per cent. of the points. But I say no; we can get colour in any common bird, whether it is true to type or not. If the birds were judged by the points we should not see so many different styles of birds with the first prize card. I hear men say this is the class of bird for Mr. P., and this one here for Mr. R., and this one here for Mr. H. If we have one standard rule, why not stick to it? Then we should know what to breed for and what to exhibit.

CORNISHMAN.

A Home-made Nest.

Reader Sends an Excellent Article for Use With British and Hybrid Pairs.

Sir,—I am sending you a sample of a nest for Britishers which I think some of your readers would find useful. To make it, take some grass stalks and twist them into nest shape, then thread a bodkin with some long lengths of bass (a lot of this can be bought for a penny), and weave it in and out of the grass to hold it together. To keep the nest firm, make a good edge with a roll of the bass, bound over with the threaded bass. When finished, fix the nest into a twiggy branch, and give the birds some moss and hair to line it with. I find my British birds like these nests, and I have a Greenfinch sitting on a clutch of eggs in one of them fixed in a corner of a cage. A pair of Yellow Buntings are busy lining another, but as there are six more birds in the cage I am doubtful of any good results.

Nesting Diarrhœa in Young British Birds.

Sir,—I don't think I have ever before heard of so many young British birds, Jackdaws, Jays and Magpies, etc., suffering from this complaint. Nest after nest of our large British birds which boys and young men in my district have tried to raise, have had this complaint. No doubt your more experienced readers will say at once it was the food which caused it. This is no doubt the fact, but other years they have brought up both Jackdaws, Magpies and Jays on the raw lights with great success, but this year those nestlings which have been tried with this food have many of them succumbed to this disease, whereas those which have been fed more on barley meal have lived. Very few boys can I get to use the dog biscuit as a staple food for these large British birds, with raw lights occasionally. One of the reasons is because getting the dog biscuits would take most of their pocket money. When diarrhœa sets in, cramp and leg weakness usually follows, especially where the birds have been kept in boxes, pails, or baskets on hay or straw, and not cleaned out every day. Some, which were taken in time and then fed on barley meal, soon recovered, and are now nice birds. It is amusing to see the boys, some with two and some with three, Jackdaws on their shoulders or arms marching about the streets, or taking their birds out on the village green or in the fields to let them peck about in the grass.

NIMROD.

Further Interesting Experiences of a Lady Enthusiast.

Sir,—I am troubling you with another letter, not about Cuckoos this time. Still, I am sure you will be pleased to know that my old Cuckoo has been quite well all the summer, and called his note incessantly from the middle of March till about the middle of June. I don't think, too, he was quite so restless at migration time. I have had five Cuckoos given me this season; two of them lads had tried to rear themselves, and they were brought to me on the point of death as a forlorn hope—needless to say, they were dead in the morning. The other three are progressing well. The old one is still awfully jealous of them. I am feeding on nothing but bread and milk, not scalded, raw beef, and hard-boiled eggs. I don't think the excretions are so offensive on this diet. I put brown paper under their favourite perch, and change it three or four times a day, it, of course, being burnt. A cock Greenfinch and hen Bullfinch have mated three times this season, and out of seven, six and five eggs she has laid, five have been full. I put them under the only Canaries I had at nest, and a hen Greenfinch. Unfortunately, the ones under the Greenfinch proved clear, she, the Greenfinch, being an excellent mother, who has reared six young of her own. Some of the full eggs were left under the Bullfinch herself, and the chicks proved dead in the shell. One was put under a Canary whose own eggs were clear; she was a young one, who had not reared any chicks, and I suppose she what you call "sweated" it. Another was put under a Canary that has had brown Linnet Mules. She had built in a most uncomfortable place in the room, and I suppose it caused her cramp; anyhow, I had to put her in a cage and treat her, so that I lost that egg and her own five profitable ones. She is now the only hen that is going to nest, and has started to build, whilst the Bullie has three more eggs. The last eggs I left to the Bullie, she hatched out one of two which were fertile, a strong bird, but it only lived four days. Last year the cock Greenfinch was the father of two Greenfinch Mules, but the Yorkshire hen he was with broke her leg. This year my Chaffinch put her to nest three times, and I thought the eggs must be full, but she is such a restless little lady that nothing came of it—she has now got one baby, a half-bred Roller, and the father of it is responsible for twenty-seven strong youngsters by different hens. Lots of them are filling the place with music, so next year I shall have a large stock at my command, and I shall get one or two more hen Bullfinches in the autumn. I have reared another cock Chaffinch, and have bred some pure Greenfinches. The brown Linnet Mules helped to feed the young! I have another Canary at nest on the kitchen mantelshelf who has reared a nest of young Canaries, and a cock bird hatched early this season must have been the father, for my old bird had never been near her. In the feeding she has been assisted by a last year's Linnet Mule, who after she went to nest the second time, fed the four young, and her too.

A Spell of Egg-laying.

The Present Score is Twelve!

Sir,—About four weeks ago a friend of mine went away for a holiday, and asked me to take charge of her bird. Now, I know very little about cage birds, but from observation would assume this particular one to be a cross between a Linnet and a Canary—a small, sleek bird with mottled-brown back, whitish wings, and yellow throat, etc. On the 4th inst. it was noticed to be endeavouring to prepare a nest, and on the following day an egg was found on the bottom of the cage. This egg-laying business has now been proceeding at intervals until the total number amounts to twelve, the last one being found this morning (26th). As to whether the little creature has finished I cannot say, and I am afraid I shall not be able to know, as I am myself leaving to-morrow on holiday, and the bird must be returned. I am sending these few particulars as I am given to understand that the number of eggs in question is quite unusual and thus may be of interest to some of your readers. I might add that the little bird has shown no inclination to sit, and I am doubtful whether she could have comfortably covered the lot! I am fairly conversant with the habits of wild birds, but I have never known a bird of the Linnet family to be so prolific.

L. H. L. SAUNDERS.

[We suspect that this bird is a green-marked hen Canary; birds so marked are often thought to be "Mules," or "Mule-Canaries." As the eggs were laid fairly continuously (without any considerable interval), the number is abnormal; but unmated hens not infrequently indulge in spells of egg-laying of this character. —Ed.]

Is it the Oldest Parrot Alive?

Paddy Bennett, Aged 115.

Sir.—I beg to enclose you a cutting which I thought might interest your numerous readers. I might say I get your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, sent out to me every week by a friend, and find some very useful information in it respecting my hobby of Canary breeding, and I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

P. K. ELKES.

Ipswich, Queensland.

The Sydney "Daily Telegraph" refers thus to a Parrot which has the reputation of being the oldest bird in Australia. The bird was trembling in every feather. Poor thing, the visitors think; he must feel the cold this wintry weather. But it is old age that makes him shaky; he is just the same in the middle of summer. Paddy Bennett lives in the hotel at Tom Ugly's Point, and if his age is not 115 years, as his owner believes, it must be going on that way. He looks his age, whatever it is, and Mrs. Bennett, the licensee of the hotel, reckons it thus. She first became acquainted with him 35 years ago, when he belonged to one Captain George Ellis. Captain Ellis died soon after at the age of 89, and he first met Paddy when an apprentice on a sailing ship in the South Seas. Paddy was then said to be nine years of age, and was a fine bird with beautiful white feathers and yellow crest. Let it be remarked parenthetically, though, that the oldest Sulphur-crested Cockatoo of which an authenticated record has been kept (Paddy Bennett excepted) died at the age of 75 (quite a chicken to Paddy). Visitors call in to see Paddy from far and wide. The old chap is very chatty when so inclined. He hops about, flaps his glossy pinions, and shouts: "One more feather and I'd fly." And he looks down from his perch and queries, "Will I chance it, boys?" He chanced it on Friday, but found that he had forgotten how to fly, and turned a couple of somersaults before colliding with the earth. Just as well for Paddy the perch was not at the top of a tree. The bird, alas! must have fallen into evil company at some time in his career, for he has been known to use unparliamentary language. Only the other day when he sailed to his owner "Good morning," and got no reply, he observed in raucous tone, "Why the devil don't you say good morning?" No wonder Mrs. Bennett loves him. She says she has been offered £1,000 for him and refused.

Does Rain Kill Young Birds?

A Wet Season Held to Favour Many Birds.

Sir,—I was interested in your correspondent, Mr. J. Steel's, letter, and thank him for it. It is evident, however, that he has not done me the honour of reading carefully my two letters on this subject. I headed my latter with the query: "Does Rain Kill Young ...?" and I gave the exact age of the young birds mentioned, showing that I referred to fledged young in aviaries. The only comment that I made was that "this confirms the views I expressed recently." If your correspondent will turn up my former letter he will find that I headed it "Is rain a friend to aviculturists?" and that I was endeavouring to controvert "one of the many curious ideas which prevail in this country with regard to breeding foreign birds—namely, that they and their young could not stand rain, though many tropical species reared their young in the midst of such rain as was never seen in this country." I also expressly said that "rain accompanied by cold winds will, of course, kill nestlings" (i.e., unfledged). He will thus see that I was talking about fledged young (British and foreign) and adult (foreign) birds in aviaries; whereas he is discussing unfledged young in a state of nature. Nevertheless, the two subjects are no doubt closely related, and I was interested to note that his evidence tends to support my own views, because he tells us that many species, including some delicate Warblers, reared their broods successfully in a very cold, wet season in his district, and that the cause of the failures was found to be that some nests were in such badly chosen positions that a stream of water fell on to them from overhanging foliage. I do not think that anyone has advanced the theory that nestlings will stand being held under a water tap—certainly not the writer. It is not by any means easy to estimate the effect of a wet breeding season upon our indigenous birds, because it is so difficult to obtain any definite statistics. There can be no doubt that a wet June will cause the death of immense numbers of young Partridges and Pheasants, but, speaking of the Passerine birds generally, I think that more young are reared to maturity in a wet than in an exceptionally dry season. It was pitiful to see the young Blackbirds, Robins and Thrushes last summer (1911) slowly starving after leaving the nest for want of insect food. Quite a dozen were picked up in my garden in a collapsed condition, and in several cases we tried to save their lives by caging them and feeding them well, but all in vain: the vital spark was almost extinguished—it flickered for a while, and then went out. This season, however, despite, or by reason of, the rainfall, the familiar birds of my garden—Blackbirds, Thrushes, Missel Thrushes, Robins, Flycatchers, Wagtails, Wrens, Greenfinches, and Accentors—have produced a crop of young quite up to the average, and Bullfinches, Chaffinches and Goldfinches have done better than usual. In the aviary, too, I always get better results in a warm, wet summer. The effect of rain upon young Passerine birds seems to depend chiefly upon the age of the latter. Fully fledged young in my experience will stand any amount of rain. Unfledged nestlings usually do quite well in wet weather, if well brooded, and if (as Mr. Steel's letter suggests) the position of the nest has been well chosen, though they cannot endure exposure to rain without brooding. Half-fledged nestlings will often stand considerable exposure to rain, if the weather is warm. For instance, a Diamond Dove, about five days old, in my aviary last June was deserted by its parents at about 10 a.m., and was exposed to continuous rain (though not heavy) until 6 p.m., when I removed it from the nest. It was then stiff with cold, and almost dead, but, upon being placed in the egg-drawer of an incubator, it at once revived, and was transferred successfully to another nest.

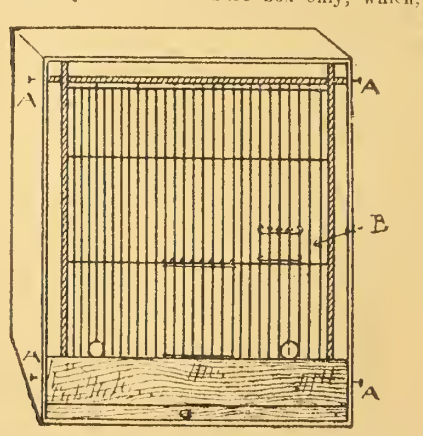
A Removable Cage Front.

Sir,—This sketch shows the best removable cage front that I can think of, and make. It is quite simple, and looks well either in polished oak or common wood, planed and stained and varnished. The front can be removed by just taking out the four nails at each corner (A), and then you have the bare box only, which,



A: The nails, or screws, through sides of cage into framework of the front. B: Sliding door for use with egg-food and tit-bits, or when young are in nursery cage.

when varnished or enamelled out, you can wipe out with a damp cloth, and will look as fresh as ever. It affords very little harbourage for redmite at sides and top.

H. PERCIVAL.

The Village Boys and their Blackbirds and Thrushes.

The Longing for a Living Pet.

Sir,—This season there have been more nests of Blackbirds and Thrushes about here than I ever remember, and the boys seem to have had a craze for hand-rearing the young. The old methods are still handed down from father to son as regards food. Some make the attempt on barley meal alone, but the majority go in for crushed hempseed and breadcrumbs, slightly moistened. The hempseed is crushed by a bottle being rolled on it, so husks and all are used up. Others, more ingenious, put the seed in a bag and pass them a few times through the family mangle when their parents are absent. Some of the boys have managed to raise a bird or two, but part have died. I don't quite think it would be solely the food's fault, as some could bring them up on it, but the long wait from say 7 or 8 in the evening to about 8 next morning. It is in the early morning, from 4 a.m., that all young birds badly want feeding. Several boys have come to me and asked if I could tell them of a better food, and how they could raise the birds. The surest way is to give hard-boiled egg and breadcrumbs mixed into a nice, smooth paste; with, in addition, a few maggots, cockroaches, mealworms, small garden worms, etc. They can be brought up without the live food, by the egg paste alone, but I like some insect food as well. Flies could be caught in fly-traps and mixed with the paste, and so could live ants' eggs. Some of the village boys make their own cages with a box from the grocer's, and a piece of wire netting, but others show some ingenuity by making a real good cage with a slanting roof. This is no doubt the outcome of the carpentry classes at the schools; it is a good thing for the boys to learn the rudiments of carpentry. These attempts of theirs with the commonest and hardiest of our British birds, cause many a one to take up the Fancy, and become keen fanciers. I generally tell the boys to at once stop the crushed hempseed, as I am quite sure this is one of the causes of their losses, for the hempseed we get in country places from the grocer is of the commonest kind, and often musty. I advise them to give hard-boiled egg and crushed dog-biscuit made into a paste with warm water or milk. When this advice has been followed (it has been in most cases) the birds have recovered, and have been successfully raised. I have often found that when lads have such failures in their hand-rearing, they lose heart, and "throw up the sponge," others who have been successful still continue to raise different birds, and now some have very nice small outdoor aviaries made by themselves, containing a Blackbird or Thrush, or Jay or Magpie, or even a Jackdaw. Then I have shown them a coloured plate or two from CAGE BIRDS, which soon causes them to want a paper of their own, besides causing them to frame their coloured plates.

Young Birds Dying in the Shell.

Has it Been a Bad Season?

Sir,—From news I have been able to gather, this season seems likely to turn out a bad one for breeding. From nearly all fanciers comes the same tale—bad losses from young dying in shell when ready to hatch out, being quite unable to break through the skin of the shell. This year the skin inside the egg-shells seem extra thick; some say it is the excessive dry season which has caused all the trouble. It is quite possible there is something in it, for I know of plenty of small poultry keepers who have only got two or three chicks out of sittings of hens' eggs; rest died in shell. No doubt what applied to poultry would apply to cage birds. These poultry keepers, after their first losses, have sprinkled their eggs with warm water, and they have had better results then, so it seems only natural the same would have resulted had the Canary eggs been treated in a like manner. Some fanciers suggested lack of stamina in the hens, but that argument cannot apply to the fowls which had been running loose about yards, etc. If some other fancier can give a better cause, it would, no doubt, interest your numerous readers. With the weather more showery, perhaps better results have followed the later nests. I always take an interest in all breeding reports published in CAGE BIRDS from different parts of the country, as it is very interesting to see what others have done.

OLD BREEDER.

How Can We Legally Combat the Cat?

Sir,—I see "Bird-keeper" is a little worried over the cats at night. Well. I may say that I have kept my Canaries and other birds in my outdoor aviary for years, and never had one taken by cats. Why? because my outdoor aviary is boarded up half way, and a few fence nails placed on top of the boards. Then I have ½-inch wire netting right up to the top of the aviary. A few weeks back I made an extra frame of ½-inch wire netting and put same in front of the other wire, leaving an inch or two's space between the two. The cats round about have a try, but when they find they cannot get at the birds, and they get hurt on the fence nails, they go away beaten.

H. MOORE (Lambeth).

Sir,—I am afraid that the writer of the letter signed "Bird-Keeper" can do very little by the aid of the law to protect his birds against the assaults of his neighbours' cats. He must first of all find out the owner of the troublesome cat, warn him of what is taking place, and state that on any repetition he will sue him for any damage done. Some judges have refused to award damages, because this warning had not been given; others, however, have not considered it essential; there is no hard and fast rule on the point, as in the case of the dog and its first bite. If the injured party takes the case into court, he must have clear evidence as to the identity of the offending cat and its ownership, to make certain of succeeding. In a recent issue of the "Daily Herald," there was an article entitled "The House-holder's Rights," and the following extract may interest bird-keepers:—

"More neighbourly quarrels and difficulties have probably arisen through pets than from any other reason. Most people, however, are under a large amount of misapprehension as to exactly what they may and may not do where their neighbours' pets are concerned. On no account whatever may they kill or injure in any way such pets—no matter how much damage they do. Any person who does kill or injure a neighbour's bird or animal, except in sheer self-defence, is guilty of a criminal offence. This applies to indirect as well as direct ways. For instance, a man who puts poisoned meat about his garden may be sued for damages by the owners of cats or other animals who suffer through eating it; so may a man who sets traps and lays a tempting bait to make trespassing dogs walk into them. In the case of damage or nuisance being caused by any pet of a neighbour, a complaint should be made. If however, this fails to make any difference, the bird or animal may be held until its owner makes good all the damage it has done. Whatever it be, it must be fed and properly attended to during that time, and not be ill-treated in any way. Anything produced by the pet so held, such as eggs from fowls or milk from a cow—belongs to the person who has suffered damage. No animal so kept may be used for working purposes though. In the case of a horse, for example, the animal must not be ridden or driven."

Thus "Bird-Keeper" will see that he can do little legally that is calculated to keep the cat or cats away from his birds. But I know many bird-keepers who from time to time employ effective methods, and I have done so myself; as they are not sanctioned by law, however, they must not be mentioned in the pages of a law-abiding journal. Surely "Bird-keeper" can solve the problem for himself; his brain ought to be more than equal to the planning of the discomfiture of a cat!

O. GEORGE EDWIN.

Sir,—All bird-lovers will sympathise with the wail of "Bird-keeper." Few can say they have never suffered from the depredation of cats. Only some months ago I lost a beautiful Goldfinch in such a manner. The bird was kept in a large, roomy cage on the pattern of a Blackbird cage. The wires were sufficiently close, of course. At night I was accustomed to take the cage into a studio. Alas! one night I omitted to fasten the door, and the following morning found the bird had disappeared, leaving not even one feather behind. How the cat managed the job so neatly I cannot make out. I have missed that Goldfinch as only one can miss a bird which would come and eat from one's mouth. The law, however, has nothing to do with sentiment. I remember, some months since reading in a newspaper the report of a case in which a pigeon-keeper sued the owner of a cat for damages. The animal had entered the pen (otherwise than by the door, understand), and was caught. The ownership of the cat was admitted. Now comes, to the lay mind, the extraordinary administration of the law. The judge, in non-suiting plaintiff, said it was a cat's nature to do such things, and the plaintiff must se make his pen and arrange matters that cats could not obtain access to the occupants! One wonders what passed through plaintiff's mind, in the form of regret for lost opportunities, when he heard the decision? Personally, I am "anarchist" enough to make my own laws in such matters. It is wonderful what may be accomplished under cover of darkness.

AT THE SEA-SIDE.

This Greenfinch-Canary Hybrid secured second prize at Southend-on-Sea Show, where it was exhibited by Mr. F. W. Potten (Manor Park).

The Even-marked Canary.

A Plea for a Specialist Club.

Sir,—Would not the present time be very suitable to form a club for the Even marked Norwich and Yorkshire, so these most beautiful birds could have classes provided for them at our great shows? Most other kinds of Canaries have clubs of their own, with their standards of points. I am sorry to say these birds have not made much headway of late years. In years gone by they were numerous. Surely, however, there are numerous breeders of these beautiful birds about, who would like to see them come to the front again. I believe Fanciers admire these birds as much as ever. I am quite aware from experience that a good even-marked one takes some breeding. Some years ago it was my hobby to breed a real good four-pointed exhibition Norwich. After many trials I at last bred one which I considered an ideal bird, and which I not only admired, but fairly worshipped. Many came to see this bird, and admire it. One fancier offered me £20 for it when it was only six weeks old. This happened 15 years ago. Of course, I refused to part with it, as I predicted a great future for it, but alas for my hopes, in a few days after that tempting offer he joined the great majority by getting hung in the wires of his cage. Perhaps a short account of how I bred this bird might interest your numerous readers. In the first place I procured a pair of birds unevenly-marked, but from a good four-pointed strain, from the late Mr. Blakston. This pair bred me one bird nearly four-pointed, which I sold three times as a cock, each party returning the bird, as they had put it up to breed, and it would not. On its coming back for the third time, I tried it myself with a good hen. After watching it for some time I saw it call to pair; then I was convinced it was a hen, and by running a cock with it, it paired at once, and produced this ideal of my fancy, besides three others very nearly as good. This hen used to sing quite as well as any of the cocks I had, and other old fanciers besides myself were as much deceived. Some have said, and I was told so at the time, that singing hens are never any good, but this one proved a good feeder and produced high-class birds. I only wish I had the strain now, or one as good. Then I should be happy once again. I hope these few lines will stimulate the breeders of this most beautiful production, and cause them to bring it in the front rank of choice Canaries.

OLD BREEDER.

Done With, But Useful Still.

Sir,—An old sweeping or hand brush of no more use for household purposes will be found very useful for sweeping up seeds and husks that have dropped from the seed hoppers on to the floor of the bird room. If you have a new brush, you will find the husks stick to the hairs of the brush, and it is necessary for you to go over the floor once or twice to be properly swept, whereas with the old brush you can sweep up with going over it once, as all the seeds and husks go before it, the bristles being short.

Getting Fresh-caught Birds on Seed.

[Winner of Half-crown Prize.]

Get a handful of groundsel, dock, or other wild seed, dip it in water, then rub it amongst the ordinary seed, which will stick to it. Then place it in a jar containing a little water, on the floor of the cage. The birds will start foraging amongst it, and I find they soon get on seed like this; further, it acts as food and water for the time being.—H. C. Ainge, 21, Thorpe Road, Melton Mowbray.

To Renovate a Brass Cage.

To renovate brasswork on a cage, which has lost its lacquer in parts and is all dull and faded-looking, I recommend the following plan: Get an oilman to dissolve one-eighth of an ounce of aniline yellow in the smallest amount of spirit possible for the purpose, and add this to one pint of clear spirit varnish. Allow to stand for several days, shaking well on each of the first three days, and it is ready for use. All work must be perfectly clean before it is applied, and it will look as good as new.—W. Bishop, Sheringham.

When Missis Isn't Looking.

Fanciers who have no mill for crushing seed will find this method works well. Procure a small linen or empty sand bag, and put the seed in it. Then pass it through the mangle. It does not grind the husk and the kernel together. I find that I can crush any seed from canary to sunflower by merely altering the press screw on the top of the mangle.—E. S. Cross (Everton).

A New Use for Carbolic Soap.

When making or renovating your moulting or breeding cages, get a cake of fresh carbolic soap and work it into a kind of putty. Then put an eighth of an inch into all joints, nail together, and enamel over. No insects will go into those joints. When breeding, give the inside of your nestpans a good coat of it; also fill up the shoulder that rests upon the holder.—W. J. Morgan (Cardiff).

To Get Soldier-like Yorkshires.

[Winner of Half-crown Prize.]

Fanciers wishing to improve the position of their Yorkshires will find this hint acts like magic. Get a small penny looking-glass, and fix it by means of a small screw at the back of the cage, in a line with the perch, at a suitable height for the birds to see themselves through the glass by stretching upwards. You will be delighted with the result after a few days when you run your birds out into their show cages, for they will stand erect like soldiers.—F. C. Sims, 15, Wright Terrace, Grace Street, Barnsley.

Inducing Bullie to Eat.

Fresh-caught Bullfinches are very sulky, and sometimes will not start to feed. I have found the following to save many a bird. Wait while Bullie is settled down in store cage, then get a thin stick or wire and place a blackberry or similar fruit on the end and push at the bird. He is sure to open his mouth. Repeat a few times, and once bird has got the taste he will be no more trouble, and soon be cracking seed.—J. H. Haynes (Raunds).

Young Birds Going Thick.

When young birds are about 6 or 8 weeks old they very often go "thick," as it is generally called. The only cure I have seen advocated is milk sop, but a much better way is to get some agrimony from a herbalist, and brew it with boiling water. When the liquid is cold, give it to the birds to drink instead of water. This will not only prevent, but cure, "thickness."—Harold Rigby (Wigan).

[Our correspondent should have stated the quantity of agrimony and amount of water.—Editor.]

Where "Monkey Brand" Scores.

I find that Brookes' "Monkey Brand" soap cleans any kind of cage, either brass or tinned wire. It is also excellent for cleaning the paint inside breeding cages, show cages, etc. It makes the wirework just like new, and a penny cake will last a long time. First wash the cage in plain soap and water; then thoroughly dry and rub the soap gently up and down the wires. To clean the paint, apply a little on a damp rag. It will remove all dirt and rust on the wires, etc.—Miss D. Price (Worthing).

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

The Premier Show of Australia.

Mr. D. J. GARDNER, late of Bathgate, N.B., who was a well-known Scottish judge, sends his impressions of the exhibition held by the New South Wales O.A.

The eighteenth exhibition of the New South Wales O.A. was held June 13, 14 and 15, in the Railway Institute, Sydney. The hall was all that could be desired for a show of the kind, and the staging, which, by the way, is the work of one of the members, Mr. J. Bunham, left nothing to be desired. Over 500 exhibits faced the judges, who got through their work in a very creditable manner, grumbling amongst the exhibitors being at a discount. Scotch Fancies opened the ball; some very typical birds. Yorkshire were also good in quality and number, though the Norwich Plainheads were, as usual, most numerous. Crests and Crest-breds were the pick of the section, especially the C.-B.'s, some extra good ones being staged. The Australian, British, and other foreign, though not so numerous as in former years, were quite the attraction of the event. The sprightly little Border was conspicuous by its absence, not a class being provided. We hope in another year to see the "wee gem" taking its place on the Australian show bench. The secretarial reins were in the competent hands of that enthusiastic fancier Mr. J. H. Saunders, who was ably assisted by Mr. S. T. Beattie, assistant secretary, and Mr. E. Selly treasurer, backed up by the following office bearers:—President, A. Hordern, Esq.; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. T. Clarkston, J. R. Trevail, and W. Abigail; committee, Messrs. W. J. Orr, G. Sutton, W. G. Barnsley, E. A. Pye, W. H. Perry, G. Evans, F. J. Bates, R. Comley, and J. H. Osborne. The following were the judges: Scotch and Yorks., Mr. Hugh Dunlop; Plainheads, Mr. T. C. Wrightson: Crest, C.B. and Lanes., Mr. W. Nash; Cinn. and Lizards, Mr. W. P. Mills, Remainder, Mr. C. Coles. The show was well patronised by the general public. Amongst other well-known fanciers we had the pleasure of meeting, were Mr. John Currah, and his son, late of Newcastle, England, also Mr. Luke Stone, from the same district. Champion Stakes: Scotch Fancy, won by Mr. W. J. Orr; Yorkshire, Mr. S. E. Miller, Challenge trophy: Young Yell. Plainhead, Mr. R. Dobell; Young Buff Plainhead, Mr. J. H. Saunders; Young Crest, Mr. A. Muston; Young Crest-bred, Mr. J. R. Trevail; Young Cinnamon, Mr. R. Dobell.

DUNFERMLINE AND DIS. C.B.S

Third annual Y.B. show, held in Co-operative Hall, July 27, but owing to the poor results of the present breeding season, a poor entry was brought togetber, and the management were forced to amalgamate in each section. The task of the judges was very light, but their awards gave geueral satisfaction. Mr. Harris, Lochgelly, took Plainheads, Mr. Veich, Kelty, Crests; Mr. Kilpatrick, Dunfermline, Borders, and Mr. J. Grewar, Lochgelly, British. Plainheads: 1, 2, Smith; 3, Prentice. CRESTS: 1, 2, 3, McCaven. BORD. COCK: 1, Rice; 2, Kennaway; 3, Campbell. HEN: 1, sp., Kennaway; 2, 3, Rice. NOTTINGHAM AND DISTRICT (Permanent) O.S.

Annual F.F. show, held Grapes Inn, Platt Street, July 20th. Entries turned up very well; not quite so many as last year, but quality very good, some promising youngsters being staged; also some very good British. Mr. J. Bowers, our old Crest fancier, won special for best bird, with a fine young Crestbred, which will be heard of again. Mr. W. Harris judged, and his awards gave satisfaction to all. YELL. LARKHALL C.B.A.

Y.B. show, held in Mr. Clelland's Hall, July 27. 34 birds were staged, being an advance of 22 on last year's entries. Competition in all classes was very keen, yellow Norwich and the variety Borders containing some birds of exceptional merit. Mr. Haston won special for best bird in show with his yellow Norwich, a bird of great promise, also special for best Border, with a very nice clear buff. Two grand Scotch Fancies were the only entries in the variety class, both the property of Mr. McClue, and it seems a pity no other variety was represented here, as there are a number of Yorks. and Crest breeders in the society. There was a record attendance. Mr. Wm. Haddow Hamilton judged, and gave satisfaction to all. NOR. YELL.: 1, 2 spls., Haston; 2, McLean; 3, spl., 4, Nelson; 5, Rundell. LEIGH AND DIST. C.B.S.

F.F. Show held July 27th, when a capital lot of 91 birds were shown in 12 classes. Competition was very keen, and some very promising young birds faced the judge, Mr. Chas. Houlton, who gave general satisfaction. Norwich were a good and level lot, as also were Yorks. Crests, and C.B. were hardly at their best, but some of the young Crests ought to make good birds later on. Young Mules were quite plentiful, nine in one class. In the British A.S. a fine well balanced Goldfinch won, with a good natural colour Greenfinch 2nd. The open Linnet class contained 10 very fine conditioned birds, all shown in their hop cages, and they were very ripe in song, and most, if not all, belonged to the singing Linnet Club members in this district. Specials for the three best birds in show were won by Messrs. W. Hulme, Ordish, and H. Taylor; best vhc, Charnock; best hc, best c, Taylor. Mr. R. Charleson had all in good order, and did his secretarial work well.

NOR. YELL. (5): 1, vhc, Bailey and Son, very fine cobby bird, grand type, good head, nice col. and feather; 2, Wilkinson, rare good head and plenty of col., nice qual. and condition; 3, Gaskell Bros., foul tail yell. green, nice col. and type. BUFFS (9): A fine lot; 1, 2, Ordish, bouncing big youngsters, well up to standard now; 3, Collier, very good type, bit loose in breast feather to-day; vhc, Gaskell Bros., tick neck, good quality. YORKS. YELL. (9): Fine lot; 1, Hulme, neat and level all through, fine feather; 2, Hart, good quality, bit more nervous than 1st, wants training; 3, Taylor, long raking bird, finely drawn, rare position, only beaten a little in head and beak; vhc, Collier. BUFF (7): 1, Charleson, very pretty for style, type, position, qual. and condition; 2, Hulme, very neat, and runs close up; 3, vhc, Charnock, also very good. CRESTS (5): 1, 2, Lomas, a pair of nice youngsters when more developed; 3, Taylor, cl. body Grey Crest, daisy-like; vhc, Lomas. C.B. Next meeting August 31st, when prize money will be settled and divided.—Walter Clarkson, Sec.

GLASGOW & W. COUNTIES C.B.S.

Y.B. Show held in the Good Templars' Hall, 122, Ingram-street, July 27th. The entries did not come up to expectation, no doubt owing to the lateness of the season, and on account of the annual holidays, quite a goodly number of the members were not represented. Norwich were the mainstay of the show, and some good specimens were staged by Messrs. Connelly, Knox, Macfarlane, Rankine, Campbell, and Jones, the former winning special for best with a neat buff hen, which possessed a rattling good head. Borders did not come up well. We understand that quite a goodly number of these have been bred by the members, the excuse for their non-appearance being "the moult." The principal prize-winners were Messrs. Adam, MacGowan, Cathcart, Edwards, and McLuckie. Mr. Walter Connelly's arrangements were admirably carried out. Mr. John Sinclair, Paisley, judged, and his decisions were most cordially received.

RUNCORN B.A.

First annual N.F. Show, at the Mariners' Arms Hotel, July 27. Entries numbered 53, a very good beginning for the first venture, and considering that the members have not had a successful season as one would wish, they are looking forward to doubling the number of entries at the next show. The officers and members are making strenuous efforts to build up the Association, and everything promises to be a great success in the near future. Mr. R. PUDSEY, STANNINGLEY, C.B.S.

Second members' show held July 27th, at the Fleece Hotel, Stanningley. The entry was only moderate; 39 birds were staged by 8 members, owing to the moderate breeding season, and the fact that most of the birds were commencing to moult. Principal point winners were: Towler and Hargreaves, Richmond, Marsh and Page. Mr. S. Wilcock, of Eccleshill, judged and gave entire satisfaction.

Club Reports.

LARKHALL C.B.A.

Meeting held in Mr. Clelland's hall, July 27. The Chairman intimated that owing to unforseen circumstances we could not again meet in the Miner's Hall, it having been reported that a number of intending members were kept back owing to our meetings being held on licensed premises. Decided to look for a suitable place, apart from a public house. Messrs. Bundell and Thomson were appointed to look after same, and report at next meeting, August 10, at Victoria Street, Mr. McClue having kindly granted the use of his house there. All intending members wishing to compete for young bird cup must join by this date, and previous members renew their subscriptions, or they will be debarred from this competition. We have secured the Y.M.C.A. hall for our annual show, and Messrs. Holden and Alston will judge. It is hoped that fanciers in the district will rally round and make a success ful show.—J. Pollock, Secretary.

ANNFIELD PLAIN C.B.S.

Meeting held Mr. Lumley's, Mr. S. Foster in the chair, when we had a good turn out of members. Decided not to hold any table shows during August and September, as the moulting season is in. Table show same night. Mr. Emmerson judged, and gave every satisfaction. NOR. YELL.: 1, 2, Humphrey. BORD. YELL.: 1, 2, Peart. BRIT.: 1, 2, vhc, Humphrey; 3, hc, W. Cresswell.—R. Peart, Sec.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Meeting July 23rd, Mr. A. Anderson in the chair, when it was agreed to accept Garrioch's model cards for open show, also Hyde's special. Fife and Kinross Norwich Plainhead Club grant us their patronage. Photographer's account passed for payment. J. Anderson gave report of last League meeting, which will be further discussed at next meeting, August 10th. Members are requested to attend this as stewards for open show will be appointed. W. Spence (Cardenden) was accepted as a member.—A. Dickson, Hon. Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Monthly meeting, July 27, Mr. G. Wareing chairman. All members will regret to hear of the death of Mr. Webster, Wigan, and members present expressed their condolence with Mrs. Webster in her bereavement. A members' show, containing four classes, was arranged to take place at the first open date in November or December. Messrs. Massey and Wareing were elected to judge. For the annual show on January 17 and 18th, 1913, seven classes were arranged, which include a class for teams, also a class open to fanciers who have not won a first prize. The club are commencing a points competition, and two handsome silver cups will be given (one for champion and one for novice), to the exhibitor gaining most points at the different shows throughout the season.—Andrew Percival, Hon. Secretary.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held in the Masonic Arms, July 27th, Mr. A. Simpson presiding. Colour feed order etc., were discussed. The Secretary reported that he had failed to secure a lecturer on colour feeding. He was instructed to try and arrange one at an early date. Report of the West Fife League meeting was submitted, and delegates were given instructions as to next meeting. Letters were read from the Fife and Kinross Plainhead Club, and the Border Fancy C.C., stating that we had been granted their patronage for our open show. Collectors were appointed to canvass the district for the show. The Secretary reported donations received, also that a members' cup had been presented to the society by Mr. D. H. Brown, of Aberdeen. Mr. Jas. Fotheringham was appointed assistant secretary. The following new members were proposed: Messrs. A. Harris, A. Jamieson, and W. Gardiner.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting held July 24, Mr. T. C. Crawhall presided. The Chairman moved a vote of sympathy to Mr. G. S. Ellwood, on the great loss he had sustained by the death of his wife. The secretary was instructed to forward a letter of condolence to Mr. Ellwood in his sad bereavement. The question of joining the Northern Crest Club in holding a specialist club show on New Year's day was then discussed. Decided not to fall in with the suggestion this year. The following shows were granted our patronage: Newcastle, Hartlepools, Blaydon, Whitehaven, Gateshead, with competition for challenge cup to Blaydon Show. We are still open to consider applications from northern societies desirous of having our patronage, applications to be made before our next meeting, August 7th. Members are reminded that subs. are now due, and as our handbook will be ready for printing in a short time, it will facilitate the work of the secretary if members pay up at an early date. Next table show, fixed for August 7, judge, Mr. R. Butler. Table show, held July 24. Mr. J. E. Atkinson judged, and gave every satisfaction. CHAMP. CL.: 1, 3, Butler; 2, Dix; 4, Crawhall. TKD. OR VARIEG.: 1, 2, Butler; 3, Dix; 4, Crawhall. NOV. CL.: 1, Mirley; 2, Witherley; 3, Gracie; 4, Smith. TKD. OR VARIEG.: 1, Witherley; 2, Mirley; 3, Smith; 4, Gracie.—R. Tindale, Hon. Sec.

BROTHERTON.

The Brotherton Linnet Club held its first open contest July 27, at the Commercial Hotel. With the kindness of the landlord, Mr. C. Moore, and a few friends of the Pontefract Linnet Club, we had a most pleasant afternoon, when close on 20 birds were put in the window. We have about 25 members to start with, and this club is hoping to be able to stand on a good foundation very soon. We are holding open contest Saturday next, when everybody will be heartily welcome. First bird will be hung at 4 o'clock.—J. Greenwood, Sec. pro tem.

LEIGH.

Globe Inn Linnet Club held their annual knife and fork tea, July 20, when 40 sat down, and we had a jovial evening with songs and dancing. Will members take notice that there will be a contest for members only on August 3rd; general meeting after concerning the club's finances for next year.—R. Holcroft, Sec.

LEEDS.

Open contest will be held at the above house on Bank Holiday, when our host will give a half tea service for 1st prize. Three good prizes for runners-up. First pair to be hung 3 p.m. —Walter Naylor, Hon. Sec.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

The usual week-end Linnet singing contest was held July 28th at Prince Albert Inn, when Mrs. M. A. Saynor gave three good prizes; 13 birds entered. Judges, S. Nevins and N. Soloman. 1st, Chippindale; 2nd, Chadwick; 3rd divided between Binns and Chippindale.—E. Wood, Sec.

SALFORD LINNET CLUB.

On July 28 a good muster of 37 members and friends of Mr. Cootes (Boat House Hotel) held their first annual picnic, some well-known fanciers being included. They journeyed by motor char-a-banc to Northwich, where lunch was served at the Green Bank Hotel. After a good repast the party resumed their journey to Chester, where dinner was served. After dinner several of the party climbed the ancient wall, and were rewarded with a grand view of the surrounding country. Then a sail down the river was undertaken. The weather turned out splendid, and we had one of the most enjoyable outings ever organised in the district. Great credit is due to those who had the arrangements in hand.—B. Wharton.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

THE MOST PUZZLING BIRD IN CANARYDOM.

The Cinnamon Canary, with its peculiar color and its pink eyes, is one of the most noteworthy members of the Canary family, and the manner in which its characteristics arose, and persist in the progeny, constitutes one of the most curious and puzzling aspects of the Canary-breeder's hobby.

Drawn from the specimens First and Second in the Novice Class at the Crystal Palace Show for Messrs. J. Wagstaff (Barrow-in-Furness) and J. Bevan (Ipswich), respectively.

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION. In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT. Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

ONE of the finest books ever offered to keepers of British and Foreign birds and Canaries is now offered at 1/8 and 2/3. This is "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages," the cheaper edition in stiff cover, the other bound in cloth gilt. This thoroughly practical work, by H. Norman, with innumerable sketches and photographic plates, is a boon to fanciers, and will save pounds. If you want to make your own cages or aviary, you simply must have this work; if you wish to buy them, it will enable you to get absolutely the best for your birds at the least possible expense. "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages," with appendices on Cage-making, and the keeping of Foreign Birds in Aviaries, 1/8 and 2/3 post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

AS YOU KNOW

low prices do not always mean cheapness, but when you get lowest prices and highest quality combined you have the essence of cheapness. So confident am I of the superior quality of my goods over that of other makers that I invite every intending purchaser to have any of my goods on approval, and if in their opinion the goods are not of highest value obtainable to smash them up and I will willingly refund their money. Clap nets made from specially knitted ⅜-mesh fine thread netting, 3 yards long, 5½ feet deep, and 4 feet fly, 4/- pair; ditto 4 yards long, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. All clap nets have two nets to the pair, each guaranteed of above stated size and all fitted complete with all pegs, poles, and lines ready for immediate use. These are the only nets on the market that are properly armed or geared all round. Loose netting specially knit from 60's 3-ply thread ⅜-inch mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; ditto, 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12 feet deep, 5d. yard; extra stout netting for use on rough ground, ½-mesh, 10 feet deep, 5d. yard. Lark netting, 1¼-inch mesh, 12 feet deep, 4d. yard; all netting post free. My netting is the only netting on the market having a plain single selvedge, thus doing away with all cut edges. Sparrow nets, fitted on 17 feet bamboo poles, 5/6; ditto on 19 feet poles, 6/6 complete; self-acting spring net traps, 24 by 18 inches, 1/2 each; three 3/-; ditto, 18 by 14 inches, 10d. each; three, 2/3 carriage paid. These net traps can be used with call bird inside if desired, and can be baited for hardbills and softbills at same time. Genuine Japanese bird lime, guaranteed strongest lime made, will stand all weathers and hold birds in pouring rain: ¼lb. 6d., ½lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6; sample 3d.; all post free. This lime must not be confused with that sold by others as Japanese. If you do not buy from me, rest assured that you are not getting the real thing, as I have no agents. Single trap cages 6d. each, 5/- dozen; double ditto 1/- each, 9/- dozen; treble ditto 1/3 each, 12/- dozen; all with separate compartment for call bird, in addition to traps stated. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (Reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Real Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun, free from snarl and strong as boat lines, 1/4 each post free. Bird calls for imitating call and song of any bird, 2d. each: twelve 1/- post free. Flirt pegs and lines, stave poles, and everything required by catchers in stock; send stamp for full descriptive list, which also gives hints on net making. Remember, all the leading professional catchers purchase their appliances from me, so follow their lead and get yours from the man who knows exactly what is required for successful catching. All on approval, and if not satisfactory, you smash them up and I refund money in full. (Imitators, please copy.)

"STANLEY" BIRD FOODS (Note gilt Match-box). Bird foods, as supplied by Nature, are composed entirely of living tissue. Whether it is fruit, herbage insect, or seed, birds live entirely upon living tissue. To keep birds as healthy as they are in a natural state we must supply them with this living tissue. "Stanley" Bird Food supplies the want, and all birds like it. When sending birds to shows, put in the show cage a little of this food; it revives and strengthens birds after the journey, and they are soon seen at their best. The best birds always win if supplied with this food, because they so quickly recover from the upset of travelling, and before judging time. Remember! this food does not turn sour, and is the acme of perfection in bird foods. Good alike in the breeding and show seasons, and as cheap as a good food can be, it beats egg food at every point. To bring this food to the notice of all fanciers I will give (for a short time only) to every purchaser of 1¼ lbs a free present of a silver plated match box and stamp case (combined). Send early to avoid disappointment. Sample tin 7d. post paid, ½-lb 1/3, 1¼-lb 2/6, 5lbs. 8/9; all post paid. Prepared by the winner of "Cage Birds" competition, May, 1912: Address, "Stanley" Bird Foods, 212, Rookery-rd., Handsworth, Birmingham.

LINNETS! Linnets!! Linnets!!!—Own caught, hand-reared contest singers, real stormers. A great secret is laid bare to lovers of these popular Britishers, which will enable them to rear real stormers. Linnet fanciers, there is a matter that requires dealing with caution: there is a very bad habit, which your pets may have, which must be overcome. Get that "Linnet Nutshell" at once. No. 2, price 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

SAMUEL HARDY, Nottingham. Linnets and Goldfinches; I have some of the grandest Linnets and Goldies ever a man got out of his nets, and I catch my own birds, and am going to give the workingman the benefit of them instead of the dealers. I can send straight, cock Linnets, 2/6 dozen; picked 3/- dozen; cock Goldfinches, 1/6 each, two for 2/9 three 4/-; every bird kept fourteen days before being sent out; postcard before birds; only straight business done: Samuel Hardy, Catcher, 18, Sussex-st., Nottingham.

BREEDERS, exhibitors, private bird buyers. Being a catcher 28 years I know exactly what is required to meet out. I have selected from the first nest several monster exhibition specimens of the Linnet, nicely laced, splendid whites, full chested, Norwich type birds, etc., 1/- each, three 2/6. Dealers! 50 doz. healthy cocks, 3/6 dozen; Greypates, several selected, very early, Norwich type, exhibition specimens, large, nice moons, tannings, etc., 3/- each; 14 days' approval willingly; cash or deposit: Fearby, Bird-catcher, Murray-road, Beddington.

FOR the best treatment of fresh-caught Goldies, the treatment that will put them on the front bench, see "Nutshell" No. 1, "The Goldfinch," which also gives useful hints on the distinguishing of sex, rearing of young, moulting, and particulars of cages most suitable for show and stock. 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., or 2d. from any of our agents. List on another page.

LEARN how to catch "Bullies" and how to hand-rear the young, from "Nutshell" No. 11, "The Bullfinch." You will find in this champion little book instructions for teaching your pets to pipe tunes and a host of other valuable information that will help you to keep them in health and condition. 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.; or 2d. from any of our agents. DO YOU WANT thoroughly healthy, reliable birds that are guaranteed properly on hard seed before being sent? If so, give me a trial. I send all on approval at my risk on receipt of cash or deposit system of this paper, and return money in full if entire satisfaction not given. Genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect condition, 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 6/6, twelve 12/; specially selected large cocks, for moulting for show, muling, or song, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 8/6. Two-year-old cock Goldfinch, call bird, 2/6; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-. Splendid lot cock Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- each; handsome lot cock Brown Linnets, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 3/6. Specially selected cocks for show or singing, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6. Goldfinch, Linnet, and Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 5/- dozen. Lark Runner cages, 4/-, 5/- dozen. Please note: All birds are guaranteed properly netted in county of Worcester by catchers employed solely by myself and are not sent out until feeding thoroughly well on the hand seed mixture. This latter is a very important item during this wet season, as it takes weeks to wean birds from the rain-sodden seeds they are now feeding on in wild state. This also explains why I have not previously advertised birds for sale, as they were not then on hard seed. To avoid disappointment, patronise the man who has 21 years' reputation to uphold. No connection whatever with any other advertiser.

of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 and 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 25 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, H. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner, showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Notice! The breeding of mealworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., or from any of our agents. BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against. It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

FULL PARTICULARS OF MEDAL SCHEME.

Secretaries, Please Keep These Notes.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. G. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. Cushny, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; MAURICE AMSLER, Esq., M.B., Elon; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., M.A., Baron's Court; E. BAKER, Esq., Cowes; M. THOMSON, Esq., Dunedin, New Zealand.

How the League Medals will be Given.

I thought I had made quite clear the conditions under which the Gold, Silver and Bronze Medals of Cage Birds League will be given for competition at open shows during the forthcoming season. It would appear, however, from more than one letter I have received this week that the matter is not fully understood by some, and I therefore give the details once more.

Any Society holding an open show will be entitled to a medal or medals of the League, according to the amount of paid subscriptions to the League by its members at the time of making application. If these total subscriptions to the League be five shillings, that is, if there are five old members of the League (or two members who are paying the new subscription of half-a-crown) the Society will be entitled to one Bronze or one Silver Medal, and so on for each five shillings subscribed to the League as annual subscription by the individual members of the society concerned. If this total subscription amount to thirty shillings, then the society will be entitled either to one Gold Medal or six of the Silver or Bronze Medals. For example, Sheffield O.S. has forty-one members of Cage Birds League on the old terms of one shilling annually, and, if the subscriptions of all these members are paid at the time of the application by the hon. sec. for the grant of League Medals, the society may have eight Silver, eight Bronze, or a number of both, making eight altogether; or, if preferred, one Gold and two of either of the others, or one Gold, one Silver, and one Bronze.

What Secretaries can do.

I think that, with the above explanation, there cannot possibly be any doubt as to the number of Medals to which any individual society may be entitled. All that the secretary has to do is to get to know how many members of his society are members of the League, and how much is the amount of their subscription. I cannot do this myself, for I have no means of knowing what League members in any particular town are members of the local Cage Bird Society, or, if there are more local societies than one, I cannot, of course, know to which one they belong. To save misunderstanding, it may be as well to point out that if a member of Cage Birds League be a member of more than one society, his subscription to the League can, of course, only count for one of these societies.

How they may be Allotted.

Only, one condition attaches to the manner in which Cage Birds Medals may be allotted by the committee of any society entitled to them. They must be for competition among Cage Birds League members only, and any member of the League will be entitled to compete for them so long as he puts the letters "C.B.L." to his entries when making them. The way in which the medals shall be allocated for competition is a matter entirely in the option of the committee concerned. The fact that they are being offered for competition at any show cannot fail to add to the revenue of the Society concerned, for Cage Birds League members will naturally be anxious to win one of these Medals, and will enter their birds accordingly at shows where they would not otherwise exhibit.

Over-due Subscriptions.

Although the great majority of Cage Birds League members are sending along their renewal subscriptions in good time, yet there are quite a number who seem to have forgotten that their renewal subscriptions are overdue. It would lessen my labours considerably if members would kindly send on Postal Orders for their subscriptions, to save the trouble and expense of making separate application by postcard. I would also remind members that those who fall out of the League by reason of the non-payment of their renewal subscription, must pay the new rate of subscription, half-a-crown, instead of a shilling, if they wish to re-join.

Our Membership Certificates.

I am pleased to hear that these are giving universal satisfaction. Following is a sample of the letters which I am receiving from members who have applied for them:—

Dear Sir,—I have received the pretty certificate of membership of Cage Birds League. It has already been much admired, and it will look very nice when framed.

(Mrs.) E. M. Sargeant.

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

PATRONS.—A donation of not less than Ten Guineas in one amount, or an annual subscription of not less than Two Guineas, shall constitute the donor or subscriber a Patron.

LIFE MEMBERS.—A donation of not less than Five Guineas in one amount shall constitute the donor a Life Member.

VICE PRESIDENTS.—An annual subscription of not less than Half-a-Guinea shall constitute the subscriber a Vice President.

HONORARY LIFE MEMBERS.—The payment to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE of a legacy of £20 and upwards shall constitute the administrator or executor making the payment an Honorary Life Member. A form of bequest will be sent, post free, on application.

ORDINARY MEMBERS shall pay an annual subscription of Two Shillings and Sixpence.

JUNIOR MEMBERS.—Members under the age of fourteen years at the date of joining shall pay an annual subscription of One Shilling.

BADGES.

Neat and unobtrusive badges are supplied to members, without any charge beyond their subscriptions as above. The badges may be had either in button form, or mounted in rolled gold in two forms, one as a brooch for ladies or for cycling caps or coat lapel, and the other as a pendant for bracelet or watch-chain. The kind required should be specified clearly.

MEDALS.

Gold, Silver, and Bronze Medals are offered for competition among Cage Birds League members at Open Shows. The terms under which these will be given may be had upon application.

CAGE BIRDS FREE TO PATRONS.

A copy of Cage Birds, the official organ of the League, is forwarded to patrons weekly, post free.

SEALS AND HEADED NOTEPAPER.

GUMMED SEALS printed in gold and colours in facsimile of the LEAGUE BADGE are supplied for affixing to note paper, postcards, or envelopes. Price eightpence per hundred, fivepence for fifty, post free.

Notepaper with the badge and motto of the League in the top left-hand corner and the address of any member at the top right-hand, may be had at the following prices:—

100 Sheets, Two Shillings and sixpence.
250 Sheets, Four shillings.
500 Sheets, Five shillings and sixpence.
1,000 Sheets, Eight shillings and sixpence.

All post free.

Members are entitled, if application is made at the time of joining, to a free copy of a sixpenny pamphlet on British Bird Culture, or a similar treatise on Canary and Hybrid Culture.

Appropriating a Letter Box.

At Crieff a pair of Robins chose a singular place in which to build a nest—the letter-box of a local gentleman's house. They had to come in and go round the front door to find the bag! The hen laid three eggs and hatched them. She and the cock bird watched the young carefully, perching on cloak pegs or on the gas brackets. The letter-box was left open for them, so that the parent birds could fly out or in when the front door was shut. The three young Robins flew off recently, quite vigorous.

Some Novel Bird-Scarers.

To keep Sparrows and Finches and other orchard robbers off the strawberries, currants, and small fruit in general is an anything but easy task. There are bird-scarers without end, but the wily birds get to know in time that they are only harmless contraptions, and one has to be everlastingly devising some new form of scarer to make sure of success. One cannot be always walking about the fruit beds with a gun, and even if one could the chances are that as much harm would be done with the pellets as good in destroying the birds. A number of quaint and, for a time, effective dodges have lately been referred to in the gardening Press. Quite a good one consists of a piece of fairly springy wire about 2½ft. long fixed to a stick at one end, and bearing a raffia grass strand or two at the other. The wood is stuck into the soil, holding the wire upright, so that the raffia grass is caught by every passing breeze, and waves about in the wind in an extremely—to birds—disconcerting manner. An Irishman publishes another quaint device. Says he, in a letter to the "Gardener's Chronicle": "A simple but useful bird-scare is to boil some beetroot, pull the skins off, and stick feathers round the roots; these scares make even the Blackbirds shiver." One would think so. The empurpled bulb with its trophy of feathers must have the appearance of a poor bird that had met with a very sanguinary doom. But how long will they last? One cannot be everlastingly boiling and skinning beets, and if some Sparrow bolder and more curious than the rest plucked up courage to make close investigation, and, tasting, found the beet to be good, it is quite easy to imagine what the result would be!

Illustrated Ideas

Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 606.
A Rack which Keeps Down Red Mite.

Sent by T. Smith, Jackson Bridge, New Mill, near Huddersfield.

To help keep down red mite, have your cages resting on as little wood as possible. Mine rest on pegs. Through a two-inch by inch upright, I drive an eight-inch peg, three-quarter inch in diameter, leaving three and a half inch projecting on each side of the upright. For the end upright a peg half size will do, as it will not have to go through. The uprights are held together by four one-inch rails, two along the top, and two just below the first row of cages. Being round pegs, the cages only touch a very small portion of wood, doing away with red mite breeding places. Then, before pairing up, I stain all over the outside of the breeding cages, except the front, with permanganate of potash, also the nest pan, and I have yet to see my first red mite.—Tom Smith.

No. 607.
A Combination Perch.

Sent in by H. Rees, 9, York Terrace, Clapham, S.W.

Having myself found this perch useful, perhaps other fanciers may be glad of the idea. It combines several different-sized perches in one, and it is always best to have perches of different widths to allow ample exercise for the bird's feet. I think the sketch of the perch will explain. It is finished off to supply four or more sizes, according to length of perch. I think it serves its purpose especially well in the smaller box pattern cages, where the perches are limited to two.—H. Rees.

Where to Seek Wild Birds.

In wooded districts one must not seek the majority of birds in the centre of the wood, but look for them in the small trees and bushes near the edge. Most birds feed in the open fields and meadows, and so nest as near as possible to their feeding grounds.

Cuckoo! Cuckoo!

It appears to be almost an accepted fact that both male and female Cuckoo give the well-known call. A reader writes that he has seen the two together both calling, and as a proof of the sex has found the egg, quite warm, and therefore recently deposited, on the spot where they stood.

Success with an Outdoor Aviary:

By H. L. BROWN (Exmouth).

How to house and cater for Canaries, British, & Foreign Birds outdoors

KEEPING birds in an outdoor aviary has, in my humble opinion, many advantages over keeping them indoors, whether in cages or loose in a room. It is far better to have one's pets away from the house, as there is then no mess, no stray seeds on the carpets to worry one's better half, and when the fancier is a busy man he can feed sixty birds in an aviary as quickly as one pair in a breeding cage.

Fitting up an aviary is not a very expensive or difficult matter, especially if one has a nice shed facing south or south-west. Twelve feet long, six feet high, and six wide, roof sloping from back to front, is a nice size for the aviary of the fancier of moderate means, and will accommodate about thirty pairs of birds in comfort.

In building, the structure should be of good stout match boarding, tarred felt roof, with a skylight in centre if possible, so as to admit plenty of light, fitted with a blind for use during the moult or when the sun is very strong.

The front should be boarded up two or three feet from the ground, the remainder being covered with small mesh wire netting, and a nine-inch weather board should be fixed at the top to keep the rain and damp from penetrating; in fact, too many precautions cannot be taken where dampness is concerned.

A Much Appreciated Feature.

If a little more space is at disposal, an open-air flight in front of the aviary is much appreciated by the birds. This flight may be of any size convenient to the builder. It should be boarded up from the ground a foot or so to keep the cats from being too inquisitive.

The flight is a splendid position for the bath. If the fancier, watching his happy little possessions taking their morning dip, in the sunshine, does not feel that all is right with the world, there must be something radically wrong with his constitution.

Sand or turf may be used on the floor of the flight, or it may be periodically sown with grass, canary seed, mustard and cress, etc. Personally, I find that frequent sowings are necessary, so I divide it into one-half gravel and in the other half I endeavour—not always too successfully—to grow green food.

Growing raspberry canes make excellent perches in the flight; I always think birds look so much more attractive hanging naturally to this class of perch than on the straight conventional stick. Inside the aviary the perches should consist of apple branches, pea sticks, etc., nailed to the walls. Fix a nice wooden tray eighteen inches square on a pole in the centre of the inside aviary, well away from all perches, have the sides of the tray some three inches high, place the seed in the centre of the tray, and then you will find that there is not much seed wasted to encourage mice.

Nursery Furniture.

If breeding is contemplated, nesting sites must be supplied, and two of these should be provided to each pair of birds; small boxes or earthenware pans for the Canaries, old Blackbirds' or Thrushes' nests for British hens, and cocoanut husks for foreigners. These should be placed in the house portion of the aviary; shelter them from the perches, and place a board beneath to prevent the young injuring themselves should they fall out. Place the receptacles so that they can be easily inspected without disturbing the young. I find that birds in an aviary do not interfere with each other's breeding operations if not crowded. The whole of the aviary inside should have a good coat of whitewash or distemper before the birds are introduced to their new quarters, and this should be redone twice a year to keep down red mite.

Cold weather need not frighten the fancier if he takes due precautions, but it is then that he finds out if his aviary is well built and watertight; if not, he should make it so at once, and draught proof.

During the winter glass shutters or old window sashes should be put in the front of the aviary, leaving one space for ventilation and access to the flight, if you have one. You need entertain no fear of cold from the birds availing themselves of the flight even in cold weather, as if they feel chilly they will soon regain the shelter.

In winter keep the water in the house portion, not the flight, and be careful to keep it free from ice.

A more liberal diet may be supplied during cold weather, and I have never found hemp in moderation to be prejudicial to the birds' health, as they do not accumulate fat whilst flying in an aviary as they do when caged.

The Birds to Get.

Let me take Canaries first, and the ever-popular Norwich Plainhead as an example, they, I think, being the most suited to our variable climate. If the birds are mated previously to being put in the aviary, according to size, colour, marking, type, etc., there is no reason why as many winners should not be bred as when kept in the orthodox breeding cage.

More hens can be kept than cocks, if one likes. The young should be caged up for a short time at about six weeks old to gradually decrease the egg food and get them on to hard seed. They may be liberated again when this is accomplished if one likes to take the risk of plucking.

Secondly, I intend dealing with British birds. Whether kept for singing, muling, or breeding Hybrids, or merely to reproduce their kind, they are ornamental, interesting, and instructive to both the layman and ever interested fancier.

Muling is one of the most interesting of pursuits, and perhaps the most profitable branch of British bird keeping.

A £2,000 BIRD'S EGG!

How the Great Auk was Exterminated: Astounding prices paid for its eggs.

There is in the National Museum at Washington a lovely specimen of the Great Auk's egg. Its value is assessed at £2,000, and it is said to be insured for that sum (according to "A. N. S.," writing in the "Scotsman"). There are only some seventy specimens of this egg known as existing in the world. It is a shell of about five inches long and barely three inches at its widest part. In colour it is pale blue, blotched with deep brown, the heaviest markings being towards the broader end. Now and again one of the great sale-rooms announces the offering of a Great Auk's egg. Such an intimation usually creates a special interest, for the individual ambitious to possess a specimen must secure one of the seventy at present known to exist.

A brief note on a few of the purchases and sales of these egg shells may not be without interest. Thirty-three years ago a gentleman secured two Great Auk's eggs in an Edinburgh sale room for 32s. the pair. These same shells shortly afterwards fetched no less a sum than £480. It is strange to think that in the year 1830 they only fetched about 5s. apiece, for they were even then rare. Yet, by 1856, the record states that a shell made twenty guineas, while in 1863 four belonging to the Royal College of Surgeons brought no less a sum than £120. One of these four was ultimately disposed of for £168.

Lord Garvagh gave £60 for a shell in the year 1869, while £225 was paid for one in 1888, which eighteen years previously only cost £18. This £225 was then a record figure, and until Sir Vauncey Crewe paid 300 guineas for a specimen in 1894 that record of 1888 held good. These prices, however, were overreached in 1897, when a cracked specimen fetched 300 guineas.

Over £500 in Return for 36s.

But all these records fade against the eggshell that brought down the auctioneer's hammer at £330 15s. This extravagant price reads like a romance. Two eggs were originally purchased for the meagre sum of 36s. along with some fossils and rubbish as a job lot. One of the eggs fetched the sum quoted and the other 180 guineas. Thus the original buyer got £510 15s. for his 36s., and had the fossils, etc., for nothing.

The bird whose eggs fetch these fabulous sums is now extinct. Although an active bird on the water, a splendid swimmer and expert diver, the Great Auk could be captured on land by the merest novice. It is even said that Auk hunters would erect a gangway from the shore to their ship and drive the stupid birds in thousands across the platform. The Auk was black on the back and white over the under portions, with a small white streak running across the wings. Its short wings were useless for flight. Like the other Auks, the "Great" species sat upright when on terra firma, and its full height was not over two feet. Like many other sea birds, the Great Auk's nest was merely a flat place on a precipice, and here only a single egg was laid and hatched during a season.

Of the habitat of this extinct bird, Lyddeker says it was more or less confined to the more northern regions of the Atlantic. The chief breeding grounds seem to have been the rocky islands known as the Garefowl Skerries and Funk Island, off the coast of Newfoundland. It appears that one of these breeding sites was distributed by volcanic action in the year 1830, where they had formerly been secure from molestation. Then the birds took up their residence on an island nearer the coast, and here the hunter and sportsman took full advantage of the situation. The last pair seem to have been shot in the year 1844.

Ancient records indicate that the bird was first discovered on Funk Island in the year 1534, at which date they were so numerous that the land looked practically covered with their numbers when viewed from a distance. Coming nearer home, one may see in the British Museum a specimen of this bird which was shot in 1813 on one of the Orkney Isles.

The "Pleasure of the Chase."

Of this specimen, Yarrel, in his "History of British Birds," writes:—"The natives in the Orkneys informed Mr. Bullock on his tour through the islands that only one male had made its appearance for a long time, which had regularly visited Papa Westra for several seasons. The female, which the natives called the Queen of the Auks, was killed just before Mr. Bullock's arrival. The king, or male, Mr. Bullock had the pleasure of chasing for several hours in a six-oared boat, but without being able to kill him, for though he frequently got near him, so expert was the bird in its natural element that it appeared almost impossible to shoot him. The rapidity with which he pursued his course under water was well-nigh incredible."

Ultimately Mr. Bullock got this bird from the Orkney Isles. This was in 1813, but a later instance is recorded by Sir Charles Dixon from the Isle of St. Kilda. This naturalist says:—"A bird was caught there as recently as 1821 or 1822, and we ourselves in 1884 were assured by an old inhabitant of the island that a Great Auk was stoned to death as an evil spirit on Stock-an-Armin about half a century previous, he himself assisting in the deed."

But when all is said, the fact remains that the Great Auk is not now on any ornithological list of any home or foreign country, and, like the Dodo, can never be replaced in its former haunts.

THE BIRD-LOVERS' LIBRARY.

An Indispensable Reference Book.

In a "Hand-list of British Birds," by Messrs. Hartert Jourdain, Ticehurst, and Witherby (Witherby and Co., High Holborn, 7s. 6d. net), the list of birds known as visitors to our islands is brought absolutely up-to-date, and if it were for this alone, the work would be one which no student of British ornithology could afford to be without.

The ordinary "cage bird man" cares little, or nothing, it may be, whether his Linnet should properly be called Carduelis cannabina cannabina, Fringilla cannabina, Linota cannabina, Acanthis cannabina, or Linaria cannabina; the "field naturalist" cares little more whether the Wheatears belong to the Genus Oenanthe, Motacilla, Saxicola, or Pratincola, but both must be interested in the movements of the resident birds in this country, and of the migratory birds in their long oversea journeys backwards and forwards, and in this volume both may find at a glance all that they desire to know.

In the cases of those birds whose appearances have been few, these few are set forth in detail, places and dates being given. The dates of arrival and departure of all migrants are given, together with their distribution over the British Isles while they are with us, the paths taken by them in their seasonal journeys, and their distribution abroad when they are away from our country.

It is, however, for the attempt to establish a uniform scientific nomenclature that the work is chiefly remarkable. In the introduction the authors emphasise the fact that nearly every bird has been given different scientific names by different authorities, and point out the great advantage which would accrue if a world-wide uniformity of nomenclature could be definitely fixed. One of the examples given by the authors of this multiplicity of names for a single bird is that of the Woodchat Shrike, one of our rare visitors. Eight or nine different Latin names have been applied to this bird by various scientists, all different from the Lanius senator used by Linne (who flourished 1707-78) in his 10th edition (1758). It is now sought to establish one name for one bird by rejecting all appellations other than the earliest known to have been given. It is pointed out in Article 26 of the "International Rules of Zoological Nomenclature" that the 10th edition of Linne's "Systema Naturæ," 1758, is the work which inaugurated the consistent general application of the binary nomenclature in zoology. The date, 1758, therefore, is accepted as a starting point, and the specific and sub-specific names used in the work mentioned are adopted, all others used by subsequent naturalists being rejected. In the cases where sub-species have been identified or separated by independent naturalists since the time of Linnaeus, and different scientific names have been given them, the prior name is taken as the correct one. The volume may be recommended to all interested in British ornithology.

Mr. G. H. Wharam, sec., Derby C.B.S., informs us that he has changed his address to 23, Macklin Street, Derby.

We hear from Mr. Havver, sec., Blaydon-on-Tyne and Dist. C.B.S., that Messrs. C. A. House and W. A. Cowgill will judge at Blaydon Show, held Nov. 1 and 2.

As our last meeting night fell on Bank Holiday, it was postponed to Monday next, Aug. 12, writes Mr. H. Boothman, hon. sec. of the Manchester and N.C. O.S.

We hear from Mr Geo. Brown (Leith) that Councillor Robert Keddie, of that town, has presented to the Leith O.S. a handsome silver cup for the best British bird, Mule, or Hybrid at the Leith O.S. Show on Nov. 9.

In reply to many enquiries from Bradford district, Ramsden's Pure Peppers are stocked by Messrs. Dibb, Cowgill, and Mundell. Any trader can obtain same to order, by remitting trade price for same with trade card or billhead.—(Advt.).

Owing to a printer's error, we were last week made to say that Mr. W. E. Tyrrell (38, Commercial Road) was the "judge" of the Portsmouth F.S. Show on Nov. 27 and 28. It should have read "the secretary," as Mr. Tyrrell is hon. sec. of the society.

The following gentlemen have kindly agreed to judge the Scotch Fancy and Belgians at our City of Glasgow Show on Oct. 18 and 19 next, writes Mr. J. Young, sec.:—Messrs. J. Dalgleish (Leith), Wm. Rodger (Colinton, near Edinburgh), Alex. Nisbet (Galston), James Ward (Shettleston), George Fulton (Partick), and John Pack (Govan).

Owing to the resignation of Mr. C. Holley, secretary, writes Mr. C. Lattimore, 5, Little Fitzwilliam Place, Lower Fitzwilliam Street, Dublin, all correspondence in connection with the Yorkshire C. and C.B.S. of Ireland should be addressed to me. Clubs desiring patronage should apply as soon as possible, giving the name of judge and number of classes.

My daughter was dressed for Kippax Carnival on August 3 representing Cage Birds, and was fortunate enough to win second prize, in one of the sections, writes Mr. R. Plows, hon. sec., Kippax and Dist. Linnet Club. We cut birds out singly from your colour plates and stitched them on her dress. It looked well, and will have done the paper a good turn as an advertisement, I hope.

Mr. R. L. G. Simpson, 35, Clare Avenue, Hoole, Chester, writes as follows:—At the monthly meeting of the Chester C.B.S, held July 30, at the Nag's Head Cocoa Rooms, Mr. R. N. Williams reluctantly resigned the secretaryship of the society, owing to promotion and alteration in hours of duty, which would prevent him regularly attending the meetings, and I was appointed in his place.

Messrs. King and Joiner (80, Stubbington Avenue, Portsmouth) write: We have again taken over the duties of hon. secretaries of Portsmouth C.B.S., and all correspondence should be forwarded to the above address. We take this opportunity of thanking all exhibitors who wrote expressing their satisfaction for the way the last show was carried through. We look forward to being well supported by exhibitors at our third annual show, Nov. 5 and 6, 1912. Up-to-date methods are what we are relying on. Messrs. J. H. Roe and H. Norman are the specialist judges engaged.

Glasgow and Dist. C.B.A., writes Mr. W. Hutchison, hon. sec., have been successful in securing the following well-known gentlemen as judges:—Crests and Plainheads, Mr. Jno. Holmes (Edinburgh); Borders, Mr. R. Lambie (Whitburn); Yorks., Dr. J. C. Syson (Glasgow); Brit., For., and Mules, Mr. R. Bald (Bathgate) and Mr. S. Ward. The committee have secured for the show the hall occupied by the Glasgow Highlanders, which is in close proximity to the haunts of Glasgow's birdy men, viz., the Bird Mart. It is in every way a most desirable hall—good top light, commodious, and free from draughts, and, given support, the G. and D. C.B.A. should flourish.

Ramsden's Pure Peppers are undoubtedly the finest ever imported into this country. They are ground from garden cultivated pods, samples of which, also the plants in full, will be exhibited at the next Palace Show. Twenty hundredweights of pods, as grown, have to be picked over to find one hundredweight of pods good enough in colour to grind for Ramsden's Peppers. Proof can be had if wanted. Value can always be ascertained through the Custom House returns, so ex parte statements of "wonderful cost" can be ignored. Ramsden's Peppers are acknowledged by analytical chemists and scientific men to be the best procurable. Buy no other.—(Advt.)

The hon. sec. of the New South Wales (Australia) O.A. is now Mr. J. H. Saunders, Crimea Street, Parramatta.

Mr. A. Wellings (Prescot) has been appointed to judge the Anfield, Everton, and Dist. C.B.S. Show, Dec. 26.

An appeal is being made in our correspondence columns on behalf of Mr. C. Eastop, 15, Spencer St., Gateshead, who is lying seriously ill.

Will members of the N.P.C., writes Mr. F. Cunliffe, sec., please note that their subscriptions are now due? I shall be pleased to receive any donations towards the special prize fund. Rally round the old club and make it a successful season financially. Mr. Cunliffe's address is 19, Lark Street, Burnley.

Mr. T. Bishop, hon. sec. Sheffield O.S., writes that the patronage of the following clubs has been secured for the Sheffield All-England Show on Nov. 1 and 2:—Yorks C.C., Cinn. Mkd. Y.C.C., Open Nor. P.C., Lanc. and Liz. F.A., National B.B. and M.C., Yorks County B.B. and M.C., and Foreign B.C.

The splendid collection of White Canaries, numbering twenty-five, bred by Mrs. M. S. Martin, of New Zealand, is now under my charge, and the birds are for sale, as per advertisement, an exceptional opportunity to fanciers to start this interesting hobby, writes Mr C. H. Goodman (Kempston).

I have been fortunate in securing again the large assembly room at headquarters, "Sydenham Hotel" for Boxing Day (the only available date) for our usual members' show, writes Mr. J. Sheppard, sec., South Birmingham C.B.S. We should easily reach 200 entries at the Christmas show, and I hope to secure a leading open show judge again.

OBITUARY.

It is with great regret that we have received from Mr. Havver, sec. of Blaydon-on-Tyne and Dist. C.B.S., a note as follows:—

One of our prominent members, Mr. G. S. Ellwood, has suffered a great loss in the death of his beloved wife, at the early age of 36. Mrs. Ellwood was a keen fancier, and helped her husband and also our society in every possible way; hence the great loss both the club and Mr. Ellwood have sustained, and our sympathies go out to him and her little family in their sad bereavement. May she rest in peace.

Mr. J. Wallbank (Blackburn).

We are sorry also to receive a note, as follows, from Mr. C. Roberts, Blackpool:—It is with great regret I have to notify the death of an old, respected, and widely known fancier in Mr. John Wallbank, Withers Street, Blackburn, who died on August 5 of heart failure after a short illness, aged 52 years. A life fancier, as was his father before him, Crests were his favourites, although he bred Norwich and Yorkshires for years. He leaves a widow and two sons, to whom I am sure the deepest sympathy will be extended by all fellow-fanciers in the North.

A handsome silver cup has been presented to the Anfield, Everton, and Dist. C.B.S. for competition in Yorkshire Greens at the annual open show and four outside shows, any distance, writes Mr. R. B. Wright, the hon. sec. Societies desiring our patronage should apply at once to me at 15, Worcester Drive, Clubmore, Liverpool. We have been granted patronage of N.G.M.Y.C.C. for our annual open show.

Special Notice.—R. A. Newley, the well-known bird cage specialist, will be glad to receive additional names and addresses of breeders of various types of Canaries, etc. View, purchase of stock for the coming season. Transactions straightforward and for cash. All communications treated in strict confidence.—Write, giving particulars and prices, to R. A. Newley, 24, Stockwell Green, London, S.W. Genuine.—(Advt.)

The handbook of the Welsh C.B.C. is to hand from the hon. sec., Mr. A. E. Brown, 66 Clare Street, Merthyr Tydfil. The rules have been considerably revised and brought up to date. The patronage of the Club has been given for the forthcoming season to Mumbles, Swansea, Cardiff, Pentrebach, and Pontypridd, and, in addition to the cups, £5 will be given as cash specials to members—30s. each at Swansea and Cardiff 10s. each at Pentrebach nd Pontypridd, with 20s. yet to be allotted There is quite a satisfactory increase in the number of members, and Mr. Brown will be pleased to hear from fanciers wishing to join. The balance sheet shows cash at bank £17 9s. 7d., with an asset of three cups valued at £3 4s.

Those on a study whose colour feed to use, just read these absolutely true facts. Everyone below had from 28lbs. to 112lbs. Royal Red, Crystal Palace, 1912. Ten Open Champion Norwich classes, nine 1st prize winners, special best bird in show, champion diploma, best in section, were moulted solely on Royal Red by Messrs. Thomas, Davies, Smeaton, Turner. The one first moulted on another was a Buff, four champion Cinnamon classes, every 1st, 2nd and 3rd were moulted solely on Royal Red by Messrs. Dormer, Godley, Deacon. In Yorkshires, Messrs. Binns, Thomas, Hirst, Ellis, Dykes, all big first winners, moulted on Royal Red. Sandiford's Royal Red costs £20 per ton more than any other in England. Note the above success at last Crystal Palace Show, where another Vendor gives scores of specials. I am never asked to give one, where 99 out of every 100 are my customers.—(Advt.)

We hear that the Roller Canaries will again be catered for at the next Crystal Palace National Show, and that Mr. F. Oldroyd, of Wakefield, is once more to be invited to judge this section.

Perhaps—Perhaps Not!

Allied to the practice of giving beer to pigeons, writes a correspondent to the "Manchester Guardian," would seem to be the unpleasant one of stimulating Canaries with wine. A fancier once admitted to me that he had sold a bird, whose only fault was an excess of taciturnity, by the simple device of administering to it a drop of wine just before the prospective buyer saw it. The bird burst into a thrilling, though perhaps incoherent, volume of song, which entirely satisfied the purchaser.

Humanising the Crows.

Mr. F. S. Hawkins writes from Alresford to "The Standard" that we can safely "humanise the Crow tribe." He has specialised in tame Jackdaws. "I had a Jackdaw just like a human being—he was always friendly with my maid till I had a hunting accident which made me unable to move without her aid. In moving, I called out in pain. Each time she came to move me my Jackdaw would not allow her to touch me, flying at and pecking her and doing his utmost to protect me. He was simply a human in bird form in all his ways." Mr. Hawkins gives another instance of the intelligence of a pet Jackdaw which returned to him after disappearing for days in a strange town.

Longevity in Birds.

In answer to Mr. C. W. Wells, I believe that twenty-four years is a record of a Mule's life. One bird of the same cross, i.e., between the Norwich Canary and the Goldfinch, has been under my observation for a number of years, writes "J. E. N." in the "Eastern Daily Press." That Mule is now nineteen years of age, rather fat, but in good plumage, and singing as well as can be expected, age, of course, beginning to tell. Birds now under my notice are a Redpoll, which is just nineteen this coming catching season; a couple of Linnets, aged respectively seventeen and eighteen years. The oldest Norwich Canary that I can remember was one of twenty-one years, and was exhibited at a show held in St. Andrew's Hall, Norwich.

Echo of the Coal Strike.

During the coal strike in the spring Thrushes' nests were several times found in the wheels of coal trucks lying idle in railway sidings, and sitting birds were often the centre of interest to business men waiting for morning trains. In many cases the strike was over before the young birds were safely on the wing, and dire were the consequences, as the trucks were shunted and taken into active service again. It was stated at the time that in the wheels of five successive coal trucks in the sidings of one station alone no fewer than eleven Thrushes' nests were found. Certain birds at all times take a lively interest in railway sidings and the neighbourhood of stations. The Thrush is conspicuous in this respect, and so is the Pied Wagtail.

An East End Birdland.

We have received an ingenious set of verses (arranged by Mr. S. Thomas to fit the music of the song "Dreamland") extolling the aviary which Mr. G. Bailey has at the back of his licensed premises, the Vine Tavern, Ratcliff, E. A photograph of this really excellent aviary (in which the Song Thrush has been known to nest, to say nothing of other birds) was given in one of our art supplements last year. The first verse and chorus run:—

Strolling one day down Ratcliff Highway,
I chanced to meet Mr. Bailey
Outside the "Vine." He said: "Have a wine,"
So I stepped o'er the threshold so gaily.
"Have what you like to drink with me,
Then come and see my aviary."

Chorus:

Just take a stroll to Birdland,
A wonderful sight you'll see,
All sorts of English songsters
Warbling in bush and tree;
Thrushes and Larks and Blackbirds—
What a variety!
Singing so gaily, while me and George Bailey
Stood near the aviary.

My Ideal Norwich Plainhead:

By E. BARRON (Glasgow).

A well-known Scottish breeder and exhibitor gives his views upon his favourite bird.

THE exhibition Norwich Plainhead is short and chubby in shape, of lovely quality of feather, and of good colour. As these three features are placed in order, so do I consider a bird ought to be possessed of them to gain the premier award on the show bench. Type is the first consideration. Without type (shape) we lose that which goes to make the bird we are striving for. Quality is the next essential, because the Plainhead should be a bird of tight silky plumage. Colour is the next point. Although the Norwich Plainhead is a bird of colour, yet colour alone ought not to be a determining factor when weighing up a bird's merit on the show bench. Without type, a bird of colour would do little good in the stock room. The rage for colour of a few years ago has had its day, and fanciers are once again paying more attention to type and to quality of feather.

The Stock Room and the Show Room.

The size of the Norwich Plainhead is a vexatious question; yet it ought not to be. Our standard lays down the law. The craze for colour and the desire for size have done much harm to this lovely bird. On the show bench many birds have been staged that possessed not a single recommendation except size and colour, and it is regrettable that encouragement in the form of awards was ever given to those unhappy products Fanciers found that it was impossible to send out their Plainheads to secure recognition, hence they had recourse to exhibiting their stock birds. But this state of things is righting itself, and to-day we now see more of the correct type of bird.

I do not mean to infer that there is no place for a big bird. Oh no! A good little one, however, should be hard to beat. The good big ones are difficult to find, and when they do come along they reap their reward; and that is as it ought to be. I do not, on the other hand, mean to infer that a show specimen is a small bird; I rather mean to say that it should not be a stock bird. I have seen during the last four or five seasons many fine birds, up to standard requirements, out of the tickets altogether, standing behind birds that were fitted only for the stock room or elsewhere.

The conclusion I have come to is that many of our judges in an honest endeavour to keep up the size of the Plainhead, have allowed type and quality to stand down. There are others, again, who fearlessly tackle the situation, and it is a real pleasure to look on their awards, especially if a goodly number of birds, true to type, are forward for competition.

The Kind to Captivate the Judge.

A first-class Norwich must possess a full, nicely-rounded skull, without flatness. The neck should be short and thick; the chest broad, deep, and rounded. The back should be broad and well filled in; the shoulders broad and the legs well set back. The wings should be short and neatly carried, fitting close to the body; the points meeting evenly and not crossing; and the tail should be short and compact. Such a bird hopping sprightly from perch to perch is sure to attract the eye of the judge.

The feather of the Plainhead should be very fine and silky in texture, short, and compactly disposed, fitting the bird like a glove, devoid of coarseness, leaving the outline of the bird sharply defined and clear.

Feather of the above texture will invariably be found to carry a rich colour. Colour and quality of feather both come from the green bird and it has been my experience that birds of proper feather have also that beautiful colour so necessary to a show specimen.

The Pairing that Pays.

When pairing birds to breed exhibition specimens, always have well in your mind the ideal you are anxious to produce. It is not sufficient to put two birds together and expect the progeny to be show specimens. As the Plainhead is a stout, thickset bird, it is necessary that the stock birds should be stout and thick set and of good quality. This matter of shortness applies more particularly to the hens than it does to the cocks. It is quite impossible to breed birds to type if long slim stock birds are used.

I like the hens to be of medium size, and as true to type as can be procured, possessing good feather and good colour. I am convinced that the hen is responsible for type in the young, and that size and colour are largely controlled by the cock bird.

It is advisable to select one's stock in the month of December from the birds of the previous season. These birds are matured and the progeny from them may be expected to be of good size and substance. In selecting them, always pay due regard to quality; this is almost as essential as shape and size. Birds of good quality of feather are also the best as colour producers.

Where the Stock Birds Should Excel.

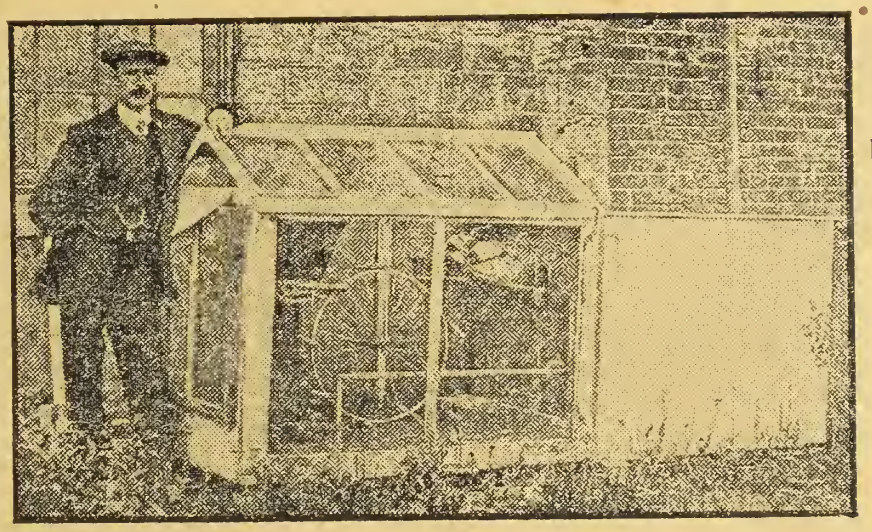
One of the most difficult features in the Norwich Plainhead to control is the head How often we see an otherwise excellent bird deficient in head properties. The stock birds therefore should excel in heads and necks. If one is inclined to weakness, its mate must be correspondingly strong in this respect. As the chest should be broad and deep and rounded, and the back broad and well filled in, the stock birds must be birds possessed of these essentials—at least on one side. One bird may not possess all these points, but what it lacks should be supplied by its partner.

Long flights and crossed wings are two very bad features and very difficult to control if once introduced into a strain. Birds that are weak in these two points ought never to be paired together. Their partners must have good wing carriage and short flights. A long tail mars the appearance of a good Norwich; it is therefore desirable that the stock is so paired as to procure the short-tailed bird.

A Favorite Mating.

The position of the legs is yet another point that requires attention. In the stock birds these should be well set back so that in position the birds are well across the perch. Two long-legged birds ought never to be paired together.

Personally I prefer mating Buff cock to Yellow hen, as I find it much easier to procure a good-sized buff cock than a large yellow cock, and with this matching I have also found it easier to produce that quality that is so essential to the Plainhead.



This novel outdoor bird-place belongs to Mr. Jas. Dean of Adwalton.

It is by the side of the main road from Wakefield to Bradford and during every week hundreds of people stop to look at and admire its occupants.

An Irish Fancier's Favourite Quartette:

By R. COBAIN (Crawfordsburn).

The Siskin, the Redpoll, and the Yellow & Reed Buntings.

Our Friend the Lesser Redpoll.

THE breast of the male Redpoll is a beautiful pink colour; back brown with dark pencilling; top of the head is crimson, and the bird has a black bib similar to the Siskin; wings and tail, dark brown, with lighter brown bars on the wings; the lower parts of the body are of a dirty white colour, with lacing on the sides as in the Siskin; the legs are dark brown; the beak is yellow, and not so strong as that of the Siskin; there is also a pink spot on the rump. The pink breast is absent, except in the breeding season, though one may find a few specimens that still retain it during the winter. In most cases the pink of the breast is replaced by a yellowish colour during the autumn and winter, the other colours remaining the same. The hens have the same colours as cocks, except the pink breast, so that in winter it is not easy to distinguish the sex. If one finds a pink feather in the breast at all, the bird is certain to be a cock, as the hens never have any.

As a rule, the Redpoll goes to nest about the beginning of May, although I have found nests in the middle of April. To my mind no rule can be laid down as to where a Redpoll will build its nest. I have found nests in all kinds of trees and shrubs, some twenty feet from the ground, and others not more than three feet. The nest is similar in appearance to that of the Siskin, and composed of the same materials. The eggs are four or five in number, blue in colour, with small brown marks on the larger end—darker than those of the Siskin.

Hundreds in a Flock.

The young hatch out and are ready to leave the nest in about the same time as allotted to the Siskin; and, like the Siskin, they come to maturity very quickly. In the nest feather, the young are grey in colour, and do not have the red head until after the first moult. It is not easy to distinguish the sex at this time. The cocks, I think, are a little larger than the hens. I might mention here that there are usually more cocks than hens in a nest. I have found this by rearing them from the nest, and also from the fact that in the beginning of the nesting season one invariably finds two cock birds with each hen.

The song of the Redpoll is not very musical, and is not much heard except in the nesting time. Its natural food is similar to that of the Siskin, and the two species are often to be found in company, especially so when they are feeding on the alder trees. I have seen flocks of Siskins and Redpolls, numbering hundreds at this season. They may be caught in the way described for the Siskin.

They may be bred in cages like the Siskin, but I have not found them to breed so freely as the latter. The cage and food of the Redpoll in captivity may be similar to that described for the Siskin. A good supply of sea-sand should be kept in the bottom of the cage, and also a bath, for either of these birds, as often as they like to take it, as besides keeping them clean it is beneficial to the health of the birds. During the moult they require the same treatment as described for the Siskin. After being housemoulted, the crimson cap is replaced by one of a golden colour, and the pink breast is not reproduced; the other colours remain as they were. The Redpoll, like the Siskin, is well to the front as an exhibition bird and hybrid producer.

The leading points of an exhibition specimen are a good clean-cut, large bib; deep, rich body colour, with good pencilling and lacing carried well down the thighs; the bird to be as large in size as possible.

Two Beautiful Buntings.

I will now leave our two little friends, and turn to my favourite Buntings. Of these, the Yellowhammer is a most beautiful bird, with almost Canary-like plumage when in full summer dress. In winter the plumage is not so bright. The head and upper part of the breast are canary yellow, getting paler in colour in the lower parts of the body; back chestnut-brown, with darker markings; there is a greenish-black mark in the form of a V on the head, and also a mark in the form of a horse-shoe on each cheek. In the winter there are brown edges on the breast feathers, which disappear in the nesting time, leaving the breast yellow; the tail and wings are brown in colour; legs and beak a clear flesh-colour. The hens are easily distinguished from the cocks, having very little yellow in the plumage, and are altogether much more dingy in appearance.

The Yellowhammer goes to nest in the middle of April or beginning of May. The site usually chosen is in the long grass to be found at the root of a hedge, or in a gorse or bramble-bush, and sometimes in a bunch of rushes. The nest is composed of dried grass, and sometimes a little moss, lined with finer grass and hair. It is always placed quite close to the ground. The eggs are from three to five in number, and almost round in shape. The colour is white with black spots and irregular lines all over. The eggs hatch out in about fourteen days.

The young are blue in colour when hatched, as is the case with all Buntings. They do not come to maturity so quickly as the two previous birds. When in the nest-feathers, the young resemble the mother, but I think there is a little more yellow to be found in the cocks at this time. In my opinion the Buntings form a link between the seed-eaters and insectivorous birds. The young are fed almost entirely on insects, and are not fed from the crop like the previous birds mentioned. The parents carry the food in their beak.

The natural food of the Yellowhammer consists largely of insects, but they also eat the seed of various grasses, and the seed of a plant commonly known as Redshank, having a red-jointed stem, and an oval green leaf, with a black spot in the centre, and bearing pink flowers and a three-cornered black seed. They are also fond of oats. In the winter they are to be found in the farm-yards gathering their food round the corn-stacks.

"A Bit of Bread and no Chee-e-ese."

The song of the Yellowhammer is short and plaintive. The last note is very long drawn-out. In the nesting-time the male bird perches on the topmost twig of a tree or bush, and will sit in one position repeating his song for hours at a stretch. The Yellowhammer is not an easy bird to catch, being very wary. In severe weather they may be caught by scattering oats along the ground where they are feeding and covering with limed twigs. They may also be netted at such times, but I have never found a call-bird much use in catching these birds.

In my opinion, the best birds are those which are hand-reared. For this purpose they should be taken, nest and all, when the young are from eight to ten days old. The nest with the young should be placed in a roomy box cage. The bottom of the cage should be covered with dry moss, and should be kept from draughts and covered at night. They may be fed every two hours with a goose quill or sharp-pointed stick. The food I have found them thrive best on is a good insectivorous food, which may be had from advertisers in CAGE BIRDS at about 1s. 6d. per pound, and also egg-food, the same as given to Canaries. I always give the insectivorous food and egg-food on alternate days; that is, one day I give insectivorous food, the next egg food, and so on. I always find them very good feeders, and they thrive well on this food. They should also be given ants' eggs and meal-worms occasionally.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

LUMP ON WING (A.B.C.).—The substance may be an abnormal growth of feather. Is it underneath the wing or on the outer surface? A rough sketch showing its position would have been useful. Paint the lump sparingly with tincture of iodine four times at intervals of four days each time. Add a slight dusting of flowers of sulphur to the egg food every third day for a fortnight, and on the day after sulphur is given each time dissolve as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny piece in the drinking water. Report result three weeks hence.

GERMAN HEN (F.E.N.).—Do not depend solely upon this hen for breeding next season. Although it is quite possible that with a good moult and careful management through the winter she may breed quite successfully. Still, I advise you to get a strong healthy young hen after the moulting season for next year's breeding, and thus avoid some of the risks of disappointment. You may, if you wish, keep the old hen also and mate her alternately with the same cock, and thereby increase to some extent your chances of success.

MAKES SQUEAKY NOISE (J.W.H.W.). It is not unusual for bronchial troubles to become acute at the moulting season. The bird should be kept in a comfortable and fairly equable temperature, quite free from draughts, and rather on the warm side until it has finished moulting. In addition to its ordinary seed diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw. Add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence to the water for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills, and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week.

SONG AND NO SONG (J. H. Macey).—The cock ceasing to sing now he has started to moult is quite a usual and natural thing. Occasionally one comes across birds which continue their song more or less through the moult, but they are exceptions rather than the rule. Treat him on the lines given in article last week, and he will doubtless resume singing as soon as he is quite over the moult. It is also nothing very unusual for a hen to sing more or less, and many of these hens will begin a lively twittering song after being separated at the end of the breeding season. In all probability the moult will put an end to her singing, though this is by no means certain. You must keep a sharp eye on the young birds, and if they start plucking each other, cage them separately at least, do this with the culprit, and do it quickly. Do not allow them to remain with the others until the habit begins to spread. Give them a few half-ripe plantain stalks to pick at, and feed them during the moult as advised for normal cases in article given last week. Your present feeding is rather too meagre for the moulting season.

REARING NO YOUNG (J. Thomas).—I am afraid there is some screw loose in your system of feeding or general treatment. You would certainly be well advised to invest in a copy of "Our Canaries," and thoroughly digest the early chapters in it dealing with all phases of management to equip yourself for dealing with next season's vagaries. I imagine your birds are somewhat overfed and lethargic. It is scarcely credible that they were in fine condition for such a number of pairs (30) to fail so inconsistently as to rear only two young. The cages you describe seem badly proportioned. A single breeding cage should be about 20in. long, 14 or 16in. high, and 10 deep (back to front). You ought to do better by keeping the foster pairs in cages. Common Norwich should make very good feeders, and either Rollers or Borders, or common nondescripts of no particular breed, are excellent fosters as a rule. But what you must be careful about is to get fosters, if possible, from parents which are known reliable and good feeders. If the grandparents have a similar record, so much the better. You should get about half 1912 hens and half 1911, but take care that the latter fed well in 1912, and that all are in good sound health and active.

OUTDOOR BIRDROOM (Hopeful).—You give no idea of the size, aspect, or material of structure of the birdroom, so I am somewhat handicapped in replying fully to your questions. If it is very small it would be as well to provide a sliding shutter over the ventilation apertures, by which you could regulate the current of air in stormy weather in winter, and in any case you should also provide an ingress for fresh air near the floor. If, as I read your letter to imply, the young birds have been bred and kept hitherto under normal conditions of temperature, they would certainly thrive very well in the place all through the winter without any artificial heat at all. I cannot be very definite on this point in the absence of more particulars concerning the room, as already mentioned, though I have no doubt the birds would thrive better without heat than with it. It would have been best to put the birds there as soon as they got on hard seed that they might get acclimatised, so to speak, before the moult began. You should lose no time in putting them in, except any that are deep in moult. If there are any in this condition, let them remain where they are until they have quite finished. Certainly, after thriving in this room through the winter the birds will breed there next spring if they are allowed to do so. Do not put the old cock out until he has quite got through the moult, and all trace of the cold has disappeared. Add 20 drops of whisky, six of oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil to the drinking water, and shake well together every second day for a week or so.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

WHAT COCKATOO? (F. A. Keevil).—(1) It is either a Greater or Lesser Sulphur-crested Cockatoo. (2) Solomon Island Cockatoo. This is both the name of the bird and its habitat. (3) This is very variable, but about 50s., according to number happening to arrive; but it is by no means frequently on the market. Very many of the White Cockatoos show yellow, pink, or salmon at the base of the feathers, especially at crest, nape, and under the wing, though appearing entirely white unless the feathers are shaken out.

DIET FOR BUDGERIGARS (L.B.S.).—The main diet will be a mixture of canary seed and white millet, in equal parts; an occasional millet spray is appreciated. Green food, lettuce, and non-poisonous weeds, but while obtainable they should have flowering (seeding) grass ad lib. Cuttlebone, grit, and water should be regularly supplied; also a few oats, say twice a week. They should have a roomy cage, but they do best in a garden aviary, for they are every whit as hardy as the house Sparrow; at the same time, when kept in cages they must not be subjected to draught. You should get our Nutshell "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free from our Manager. Please note: You should send name and address when asking for information. (See condition 2 at the head of these columns).

BLUE-FRONTED AMAZON (T. H. S.).—(1) One quart each canary seed, white millet and oats, one pint each paddy rice, hemp, and sunflower seeds; half pint each maize, dari, wheat, chillies, and shelled nuts. Well mix and store in dust-proof receptacle. (2) It is a good plan to add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed. As you use sand keep a tin of Parrot grit in the cage. (3) For running at the nostrils, bathe or spray them twice daily with diluted glyco-thymoline. For a cold 5 drops of Friar's Balsam in one ounce of water in lieu of the drinking water. Continue till relief is given, but prepare a fresh supply daily. If a bird gets a bad chill at any time, write for advice at once, giving full details.

CUTTHROATS EATING EGGS (C. B. Baggs).—It is merely the "cussedness" of some birdy natures. If you can be certain it is only one bird which has the vice and which is the one, get rid of it and procure another mate for the odd bird. But if you cannot ascertain which is the culprit, then get rid of the pair and replace them with another pair. Cutthroats usually sit close and are good parents. My birds have always favoured a roomy box about 6in. square at base by 9in. deep, with a round or oval entrance hole cut in one side and a twig fastened in front of it. At the same time, similar episodes to your own have occurred, which are illustrative of the individualism of respective pairs of the same species.

USE OUR NOTEPAPER

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

A QUEER SAMPLE (Andy).—I should be puzzled to tell you what the seed is; neither "fish, flesh, nor good red-herring," as the saying goes. I have seen some rich samples of said-to-be German summer rape seed, but the one you send is about the limit. There is a small quantity of summer rape amongst it and a quantity of charlock, but the bulk is composed of seeds of the brassica group of plants (turnips, cabbage, and near relatives) which it is practically impossible to separately identify at the moment. You would be unwise to use it; your birds, in fact, would reject the greater part unless starved into eating it.

A "FORWARD" BACK CLAW (Anxious).—There are several methods of treating a back claw that will not keep its position, i.e., comes forward under the front claws, but they are not easy to explain on paper. An illustration of an excellent method appears in "Our Canaries" (you could get the particular part containing this). A popular and effective way of coping with the trouble is to get from a chemist a small piece of rubber tubing, such as is used in the old style of infant's feeding bottle. In size this should be just sufficient to pass over the three front claws and hold the back claw up to the shank; the back claw, of course, is inside the tubing. Leave this on for from 7 to 10 days; and for a short time afterwards do not let the bird have very wide perches, and let them in shape resemble a triangle, and be placed so that the bird alights on the apex (the edge should be rounded off a little).

WHAT'S IN A NAME? (A. Goodall).—In all cases where the word "rape" is used, the kind known as summer (or German) rape seed is indicated. This is a highly nutritive seed, and the oil it contains is of a bland character and comparatively easy of digestion. Most of the other rapes (the English rape, or cole seed, sometimes termed winter rape, is a case in point), while of high feeding value according to their analyses, contain oil of an acrid nature and are difficult of digestion. Generally speaking, they are unsuitable for birds unable to take exercise freely on the wing; further, if eaten in quantity by birds not used to them, they will set up diarrhœa (scouring), the stronger kinds in particular. Charlock is the best and safest of all the "wild rapes," and even this requires a certain amount of discretion in its use.

IS IT TOO LATE FOR MULES? (Good Birds).—Your question is a trifle vague. If you mean is it too late to put together a Linnet and Canary with a view to Mule breeding, then I am afraid it is. The hen would probably fall into a moult and fail to rear the young, or maybe even to get as far as egg-laying. If, however, the hen is now about to lay, or is sitting on eggs, then there is some chance of the Mules being successfully reared. I have frequently had Mules hatch out in August and thrive. I always think, though, that it is somewhat rough on the hen Canaries. Those that breed until very late in the season seem to take longer over their moult, and as the weather is then none too favourable, it makes this always trying period a greater strain on them than ever.

A REARING MATTER (Mrs. Sargeant).—Thanks for your interesting letter, which I did not get in time to reply to last week. I hope you will rear the Hybrids should any hatch. If you are in a position to do so, you could not do better than try the food mentioned by Miss Reeves in the letter published two issues ago; or try live ants' eggs amongst the soft-food (these are almost over now, unfortunately). Another plan is to give cut-up mealworms or the "innards" of mealworms squeezed out amongst the soft food. Allow plenty of shepherd's purse, seeding chickweed, and groundsel heads. I should not chance all the fertile eggs under any one hen

Canary (you appear to have a choice). Even the Bullie herself would probably rear the young for a few days, when you could take them in hand and hand-feed them. Keep your eye on her, of course. I have found Bullie hens, when they get "tired," very prone to throwing out the young on to the cage or aviary floor. It is not easy to give advice on these matters, so much depending upon the past behaviour of the birds—some hens will feed anything short of a pigeon and do it with any food within reason.

OVER THE MOULT (Moulting).—Yes; the tasteless pepper is the kind to use, and the brand you name is excelled by none and equalled by but few. There is no hard and fast period of time over which a bird must be colour-fed. It is necessary to anticipate the moult a little; that is, get the system impregnated with the artificial colouring agent before the feathers commence to fall. The pepper should be continued for at least a fortnight after the last pen-feather (i.e., feather in the quill, not fully grown) has disappeared. It is the feathers in the region of the head which are the last to moult—in, of course, normal cases. The colour-food is not needed at full strength the whole of the period; start with it weak; also gradually reduce the strength during the fortnight mentioned above. In most cases the whole period is very little less than three months; broadly speaking, round about 10 weeks. Some birds, however, get the moult over much more quickly than others, as you will find out by experience in due course. I have never recommended the colour-feeding of Goldfinches. What I have advocated is giving them colour-food right at the end of the moult, when the blaze is almost clear of pen feathers. The Goldie starts to "come up" in colour then, and the artificial colouring matter in the blood deepens the "tanning" and crimsons the blaze, while the oil in the pepper aids the acquirement of that silky polish on the plumage without which an exhibition Finch stands a poor chance. If the colour-food is given through the moult, the colour contrasts are ruined and the wing-bars (in my opinion) spoiled. We want to aid (I might say enhance) the natural colour scheme, but not to alter it. By-the-way, please note that I dislike questions about colour-feeding; they generally bring me trouble.

Practical Handbooks for Bird Lovers.

Brief particulars of some of "Cage Birds" SPECIAL PUBLICATIONS for keepers of birds, with post free prices.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 113 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and 12 words of description, 250 2/-, 500 2/6, carriage paid.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Published in 8 Monthly Parts at 6d. each, post free 7d. Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid. The practical and comprehensive work for which all Hybrid breeders have been waiting.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockatiels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives very full details upon how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

The Manager, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Mrs. Holmes.—Cerebral apoplexy or rupture of a blood-vessel upon the surface of the brain. Death is immediate in such cases, due to pressure by the clot. The bird was in an overfed condition; the liver was infiltrated with fat, and no doubt there was fatty degeneration of the arterial walls predisposing to this condition. Give a more moderate diet and an occasional saline aperient such as glauber salts, in the drinking water occasionally.

GENERAL.

Answered by The Editor.

R. Plows.—Accept our hearty thanks. Shall be glad to receive the photograph.

W. Bryant, F. Mascall, W. H. Teat.—Your letters have been duly forwarded.

A. R. Birnie.—We will get a drawing made of your ingenious trap and publish it in due course.

A. C. Norrington.—We have illustrated a similar perch before.

Hailwhistle Lad.—There is no law prohibiting the use of birdlime in the open season. The close season in Northumberland is between February 31st and August 12th.

Keenest.—An autumn cage bird show is not now run at the Crystal Palace. The L. and P.O.S. have once or twice held a show there in the autumn. This society's 1912 fixture, however, is arranged for Oct. 23rd and 24th, in the Holborn Town Hall.

A. Hale.—Almost weekly we state that it is contrary to newspaper rules to disclose correspondents' addresses without their permission. Send your communication to us in a sealed stamped envelope, and we will see that it is posted to the gentleman in question.

The Shows.

ACKWORTH.

Annual show, August 1st. Entries came up well and some noted birds were staged. Mr. M. A. Wilson won special for most points. Mr. R. Winterburn judged. OLD CAN.: 1, Middleton, cl. buff, wins; 2, March, nice cl. yell.; res, Middleton; vhc, Kelsey. BRED 1912: 1, res, vhc, Walmsley, mkd. Nor., in good order, will be heard of again; 2, c, Kelsey, good buff Yorks; hc, Middleton. LINNET: 1, Pogmore, tight as wax, good col, and feather, wins well; 2, Seal, good bird, but not the condition of winner; res, M. A. Wilson; vhc, Hodgson; hc, Brown. A.O.S. BRIT.: 1, 2, vhc, hc, M. A. Wilson, noted Waxwing in rare form, and Bramblefinch, another big winner, in good order, followed by Goldfinch and Greenfinch; res, Hodgson; c, Pogmore. This was one of the best classes seen for some time, and every bird fit to win.—R. Winterburn.

CAMBRIDGE.

The Cage Bird section at Cambridge has fallen considerably from the high position which it held a few years ago, and this year although the entry was better than twelve months back, it was not what it used to be. Most of the classes announced were cancelled, but some very smart exhibits were staged. The challenge cup over the British Bird and Mule Sections was won by a very handsome Goldfinch shown by Mr. Lawrence. Mr. Driver, the energetic and courteous secretary, had all the arrangements in good form, and he was ably supported by a most excellent committee. Mr. C. A. House judged.

NOR. (9): 1, sp, res, Allen, lovely yellow plhd., grand shape, sound col., beautiful quality; 2, Brookes, varieg. Crest, nice centre, capital droop, rare good texture; 3, hc, c, Mayhew, nice quality green Crest; vhc, Thurley; absent, 455a. A.O.V. CAN. (4): 1, 2, 3, res, sp best Canary, Brooks, very smart team; 1st, splendid Dutch Frill, plenty of feather, rare shape and style; 2, beautiful quality buff Cinn., lovely col., nice shape and size; 3rd, another good Frill. BRIT. GOLD, ETC. (7): 1, 3, sp, and challenge cup Lawrence, magnificent Goldie, large deep blaze, splendid chest and back, grand style and feather; 3rd, large, good shaped Greenie, beautiful col., just going into moult; 2, Wren, rare shaped Bullie, very rich rose coloured breast, grand cap and back, neat feather; res, Miss M. Hawkins; vhc, Wren; hc, Montague; absent 465. MEMBERS' BRIT. (9): 1, 3, vhc, hc, Lawrence, very rich coloured, well marked Goldie, and a grandly mkd. Yellow Bunting, beautifully shown; 2, Williams, magnificent Waxwing, wonderful feather, charming markings and col; res, c, Wren.

HAVERHILL.

A nice little show for a first attempt was that of the Haverhill and Dis. F.S., which was held on August 6th. Entries were not numerous, but several very nice exhibits were staged. Mr. F. C. Christmas, the president, personally superintended the arrangements, and they were well carried out by the undermentioned local fanciers, who made a most excellent committee: Messrs. R. '. Morison (treas.), W. Ibbotson, S. L. Bigmore, G. W. Brown, W. Poole, E. Butler, J. Radford, W. Hartgrove, C. Kiddy, W. Jarvis, H. Cracknell J. Arber, F. Westrope, J. Siggs, W. Appleby, W. Westrope, and F. Cole. In Mr. R. M. Reece the society has secured a splendid worker, and to his energy is to be added that courtesy and geniality which make a good secretary. Mr. C. A. House judged.

NORWICH (3): 1, withheld; 2, sp., Master Wallis, rattling good buff, rare shape and size, lovely feather, rather poor in col.; 3, res., Cole, tkd. headed yell. and a buff, both nice feather and col., not quite so stout in body. YORKS. (2): 2, Goodchild, shapely, stylish, well feathered buff cock; absent, No. 3. BRIT. (4): 3, Clayden, smart, clean cut Goldie, rich colour, fails in feather, absent 32, 33, and 34. FOR. THE LANCASHIRE COPPY CANARY.

ROYSTON F.S.

Annual show held August 5. The entry was a good one, the quality excellent, the show was an entire success. Mr. H. V. Chamberlain, the live stock secretary, did his utmost to perfect the arrangements, and he was ably assisted by competent stewards. Mrs. Atiee, as usual, officiated as chief steward for cage birds, and although in somewhat indifferent health, stuck to her post until judging was completed and the prize cards affixed to the cages. Mr. J. Moss was one of the chief exhibitors, and put down a good team of Norwich, Mules and Goldies, while in Yorks. Mrs. Ballard was well to the fore with some typical birds. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and his awards were well received. During the afternoon many hundreds of visitors passed through the stock tent, and the cage birds were a great source of attraction.

NOR. (12): 1, sp, res. and medal for best Nor. out of the money, Moss, the leader a grand level coloured rich quality yellow, in fine bloom; 2, vhc, Pedder, typical buff, not quite so close in feather, showing signs of the season, but rich in undercolour, good head; 3, Allington, fine qual., good shape, varieg. yell.; hc, Miss Warren; c, Goldsmith. YORKS. MULE OR HYB.: 1, Smith, dark Goldie-Canary, good condition. GOLDFINCH: 1, 2, Burrows, two very nice Goldies, in splendid condition, 1st the better blaze and tanning; 3, vhc, Cambers, smart bird, not quite the condition. CHAFFINCH: 1, spl, 2, Cambers, leader a topper, 2nd not the polish, still a good one. LINNET, &c.: 1, 2, Burrows, good Linnet leading and a smart Lesser Redpoll. FOR.: 1, Smith, pair Cuttbroats, nice condition, well shown; 2, Higgins, Lavender-headed Lovebirds, good specimens.

The Hawfinch in Foreign Lands.

It is said that the habits of the Hawfinch in Northern Africa are precisely similar to its habits in this country, although one would naturally expect to find them considerably modified owing to the altered conditions of its surroundings.

Out After Dark.

The Heron is almost nocturnal in his habits, and apparently is in no hurry to get home before dark. In fact, he has been suspected of slaying and eating young ducks and other wild fowl during the night. One can frequently see him lazily flapping homewards after all other birds have retired to roost, and the noise round a Heronry does not cease with the going down of the sun.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

The Cage Bird Fancy in South Africa.

Sir,—In regard to my note sent (together with photo) per last mail, re the South African Cage Bird Club, kindly make the following correction, viz., to get the various South African poultry clubs to give cage birds better facilities; it should not read South African Poultry Association. If too late, then kindly insert in following issue.

How Can I Steady a House-moulted Redpoll?

Sir,—I should be very glad if any of our readers of Cage Birds could enlighten me on the above subject. I have a house-moulted Redpoll, and I have tried various ways to get him steady. He flies about the cage like a "wild 'un" when I go to give him more seed or change his water. I have tried covering half the cage up with thin muslin, also putting him in a smaller cage, but all without success. I know readers are always glad to help anyone in difficulty, and I wish Cage Birds every success.

Now is the Time to Utilise Sunflower Heads.

Seed-eaters Delight in Them.

Sir,—Now that our sunflowers are dying off, I think it is a great shame for a bird-keeper to throw the heads away. I personally cut the heads off with a pair of scissors, or a knife, and then give them to my pets in my aviary just as they are. I may say there are Goldfinches, Greenfinches, Bullfinches, and Canaries in the aviary, and they go after the seed in the sunflower heads before they touch anything else. By using the sunflower heads in this way you save money and give your pets a treat.

Milk Sop and the Rearing of Canaries.

Sir,—At my first attempt at breeding Canaries I have used the ordinary breeding cages and had five nests from one pair. I removed each egg as laid and returned them after the third egg was laid, and fed on egg and biscuits. Result:—First nest, one out of four (thunderstorm killed); second, three out of four; third, two out of five; fourth, three out of five. For the whole five nests I removed the ordinary nest pans and put in small red flower pot saucers, as I found the birds had no room when beginning to grow. With the saucer they are not on top of one another, and get on much better. I had five eggs laid for the fifth nest, and all five hatched. I then gave the ordinary seed and milk sop, not too moist, morning and evening (not a single taste of egg), and all the young thrived and got on splendid, and are all living to-day. The birds are of the ordinary songster sort (I gave 5s. for cock, and 1s. 6d. for hen). They are kept in front room, which is always warm. They are very quiet, as I am out nearly all day, and there is no one else in the place. I give plenty of green stuff, and find they are very fond of cabbage or cauliflower stalk.

How Can We Legally Combat the Cat?

Scotch Judge Holds Owner Responsible.

Sir,—In your next issue please express my thanks to the writers of the three letters on page 637 as to prowling cats. Glad I put the enquiry. The answers will serve many of your readers. The watch I had from you works very well.

Bird Keeper.

Sir,—For the benefit of bird-keepers and readers in general, I will try to explain how I overcame the cat nuisance. My birds are all kept outside in cat-proof cages; but if proof against cats getting at the birds, they are not proof against the fright a cat causes when she appears on the scene. So to prevent this I borrowed a trap I saw at a friend's. I will try to describe it. It is a yard long and nine inches square, made with four boards fixed together; one end has iron rods fixed two inches apart; the other end is fitted with lid, which drops in a groove from the top nine inches from the end with rods. A hole one inch across is bored in top, and through this hole a trigger with a hook is fitted (similar to a mouse-trap trigger), and from this trigger runs a string along the top. At the end is attached a little iron rod. A small hole is made in drop lid, and this rod connected to the trigger by the string holds up the lid. A fish of any kind placed on the hook of trigger will induce any cat to go in, and directly she touches the fish the lid behind her drops, and there she is. We all know we must not damage a cat, and with this method there is no need to. Just take the trap to a water tap and turn on the water through the end fitted with rods; or, failing a water tap, get a large watering can without the rose and do the needful. Pussy doesn't half enjoy it, and it does her no hurt. You may see this cat or eats on the wall in the distance afterwards, but never round your cages again. The Editor has my address, and if "Bird Keeper" does not see his way clear to build the trap, I will get one made and send on to him on receipt of 2s. 6d., the cost of same.

Chas. Burrows.

Sir,—You will find enclosed a cutting taken from the "Weekly News" of July 27, which might interest some of your readers.

Robert Atkinson.

"That an owner is responsible for the depredations of his cat is the decision of Sheriff Moffatt, of Falkirk. The action was one in which the question involved was the liability of an owner for the depredations of his cat. Pursuer claimed for a sum of £2 7s. 6d., being the loss which, he alleged, he had sustained by a number of exhibition chickens being killed by a cat belonging to the defender. In his judgment the Sheriff holds that in law a cat, when it is kept housed and fed by an owner, must be regarded as an animal for whose noxious acts the owner is responsible if the owner has knowledge of such noxious habits. The doctrine that a man may keep, maintain, and support a cat which is injuring and continuing to injure other people's property seems to him to be insupportable. His Lordship accordingly finds the defender liable in reparation to the pursuer in the sum sued for."

Does the Red-mite Live Amongst the Bird Seed?

Our Correspondent Thinks So.

Sir,—I clean my cages out once a week—that is, put clean sand on the floor, clean the perches, and all crevices of mite, but I found I could not keep the mite down. After cleaning the cages, etc., out, the birds were just as restless at night time, and I could not make it out until I noticed that one cage in particular was more "mitey" than the rest—it was the cage into which I threw the seed siftings. I may say I sift the seed every day. The following day, after sifting the seed out of the boxes, I kept the seed in one large cake tin, and left the siftings in the usual cake tin. Then I looked at both very closely, but could not see anything. I was not satisfied with the glance, however, so I took both tins downstairs and placed them in the oven. They had been in but a second when the whole of the siftings and seeds seemed to be alive! That was why I could not keep the mite down. I hope this may be of some use to readers of good old Cage Birds.

THE WAYWARDNESS OF "RUBY."

Strange Behaviour of an "Old Maid" Java Dove.

Sir,—A year ago I gave a young Dove to a friend, who soon got it wonderfully tame. This year Ruby, as she is called, made a nest, and laid several eggs, and when these were taken away she made such a noise they were given back to her again. Being unfertile, the eggs, of course, came to nothing, and after sitting two or three weeks she allowed them to be taken away. She still continued broody, however. A fortnight later we gave her two good eggs, and though she had been sitting practically for four or five weeks, she settled down steadily, and hatched out one young bird; the other egg was accidentally cracked. Her pride and joy were great; in a few days the baby was so fat it looked as if its skin would split, but on the fifth day she refused to have anything more to do with it! Being only white Java Doves, most people would probably have given the youngster up as a bad job, but my friend, who was a nurse and has had much to do with human babies, determined to try and bring the birdy baby up by hand. With the help of a glass syringe she managed it. But twice she left him thinking his last hours had come. Once he could not digest the food, but by gently massaging the crop she saved his life. The food that best agreed with him was crushed seed and soaked bread, which was made warm. He soon learnt to open his mouth when he was hungry. When it was nearly three weeks old my own Doves, who by this time had another young one, on the fifth day began plucking out its quills. I was obliged to take him away, so took it to my friend, so that she might bring it up with hers. One morning, in cleaning out Ruby's cage (she had been sitting again for a fortnight on one of her own eggs) the nesting materials which were clean were put under my baby Dove in the cage where he was, and the eggs were taken away. Later on, on going into the room, Ruby was found trying hard to get into the youngster's cage. Though she had taken no notice of her own youngster, as an experiment the door was opened for her. Immediately she went in, made a great fuss over it, and fed it at once, and settled down as if it had been her very own. The only thing that seemed to worry her was when he got up on his feet and clamoured for food. Did she think he had been hatched out that morning from her own egg we wondered? If so, it may have puzzled her why this baby should be so big! I believe it was nearly a fortnight old then. The little Doves are now nearly four and five weeks old respectively, and they both live in the same cage with Ruby and nestle up with her at night; but otherwise she takes no notice of her first foster child. Strange to say, he takes no notice of her either, and however hungry he is he never looks to her for food, but sits and squeaks till his mistress comes to fed him. He is very lazy about attending to his own wants, and naturally is not such a fine bird as the other one.

Hybrids with Alien Parents.

What About the "Half-and-Half" Bird?

Sir,—I was glad to see this question gone into. Some years ago I wrote asking if hybrids from two foreign Finches would be foreign hybrids. The matter then was not taken up, neither did it seem to interest anyone. At that time the Russian birds were not used so much. Now it is quite different, for the craze is for size, and, of course, quite right too, for a good big one should always beat a good little one. Now the question is, should this be stopped and their hybrids disqualified to compete with British hybrids? Should secretaries of shows state distinctly that hybrids from Russian birds are not eligible to compete against British hybrids? If this was done, many a good bird would not be seen. Or should secretaries provide classes solely for such foreign hybrids? I am afraid if they did, they would not get well filled. Can we look at it in this way, that the Russian Finches after they have moulted in this country have become "naturalised British subjects," and their offspring British subjects." On the other hand, what if hybrid breeders use only one Russian Finch? That would increase the size of hybrid, and it would hardly be fair to set it back for being "half-bred British." As one who in my time has bred a good many Mules and hybrids, and who has not used foreign Finches except on two occasions (years ago it was a rather difficult matter in the country to get them), I must give way, and say that the foreign birds, when they do breed, produce larger and finer hybrids than our British birds. I am surprised that some of our large aviarists don't go in for breeding in aviaries both the Siberian Goldfinch and Bullfinch. I cannot myself see at present how these hybrids can be kept out of the picture. I should like to see the British Bird and Mule Club settle this point, for I expect they will be called upon to do so some day, especially so should some noted man object to some noted bird. I still have a good word for our British birds, as they have been found to be better and surer breeders than the "alien." Is there at the present time a cross between a Canary and a Siberian Bullie hen? Are not many of the Canary-Bullies tainted with alien blood?

Hybrid Lover.

A Yorkshireman's Novel Type of Outdoor Aviary.

Sir,—With regard to the fitments of my aviary, the sleeping place is 4ft. long, 3ft. 6in. high and 3ft. 6in. wide, with sloping roof to run the water off. Inside are nest holes about 8in. wide and 10in. high, with a 4in. deep board nailed in front to keep the nesting material in. The door to permit of access to the inside is at the back. I have a hole about 4in. or 5in. square in this door, with wire netting over it, so that I can at all times see in. The flight is 5ft. long, 4ft. wide, 3ft. high, with roof sloping both ways. It is netted all over and then covered with glass, but I can remove all the glass, except the top, in a few minutes, and do this when the sun is shining, and in favourable weather. At one end of the flight I have a lid to lift either up or down. When all the glass is on I let this lid down, and the air goes right in and through the hole where the birds go into the sleeping place and through the hole in the door, so there is always fresh air in circulation. Inside is a hopper, which holds half a stone of seed. The seed runs down as they eat it. At this end there is a tank with a tap in the bottom to let the dirty water out, and a copper pipe runs from outside the tank, so that my wife can give them fresh water any time. I have in it two pairs of Budgerigars, one pair of Red-crested Cardinals, five Canaries (all Yorkshires), one White Java, two Linnets, one Greenfinch and one pair of common House Sparrows. I have had them nine months now. The birds make the wheel go round (seen in the photo.), and they stop outside both winter and summer. I have won two gold medals and one silver with my Yorkshire Canaries.

James Dean.

AN IDEAL HOBBY FOUND AT LAST.

A Reader who is Fascinated by Foreign Beauties.

Sir,—Many and many a happy hour have I spent in my aviary, a dwelling inhabited almost entirely by feathered friends from across the seas. Surely there is no hobby productive of sweet hours of recreation that can possibly bear comparison with this most delightful hobby of bird study in aviaries or in cages. From the poor man to the duke, all may, and practically do, keep at least a few of our feathered friends, who, by their joyous song and brilliant plumage, help to brighten our spirits. It was quite by chance one day, several years ago when as I was passing along a crowded thoroughfare I espied in a shop a magnificent coloured plate issued by Cage Birds, and the glorious plumage of the birds illustrated thereon so struck me that without more ado I marched in and reduced the contents of my pocket by two pennies, I trotted up the street, with a huge smile prominently displayed on my features, for I had at last discovered a great hobby! I very soon had an attractive and cosy aviary constructed at the rear of my residence. The beautiful Budgerigars from the land of the Southern Cross performed the opening ceremony. For beauty, there are few birds to equal these charming little Parrakeets. In an aviary they will breed quite freely, and being naturally gregarious, will do better where there are two or three pairs together. A few British birds and a few Canaries helped to still more brighten the gathering. By the way, just a word to prospective breeders of Budgerigars. Do not allow these birds to mate while very young, as the offspring from such youthful alliances will be sickly and will fledge badly. Budgerigars will, I believe, breed in roomy cages, but cocoanut husk nests are imperative if the best results are looked for. I wonder how many readers have had the pleasure of observing these little treasures in their native land? It is indeed a sight of a lifetime to watch these beautiful birds. They are always seen in flocks; seldom does one see a solitary specimen. They are here, they are there, dodging and flitting around murmuring softly to one another, and the brilliant sun causes their delicate plumage to sparkle like so many emeralds. It needs the sun that shines on the land of the Southern Cross to do these little marvels justice. The effect is indescribable. The nearest approach that I have seen in this country is a flock of Goldfinches, enjoying themselves upon thistle stalks, balancing themselves with the greatest ease in almost incredible and perilous positions. To return to the aviary, I may here remark that for practical purposes I found that cages were, as a rule, too cramped to permit of foreigners successfully breeding, and from experience experts have proved that various foreign birds hitherto considered too delicate and only able to thrive or live in heated rooms, can exist throughout the year in the unrestricted freedom of an outdoor aviary. Even when the temperature was registered as freezing, and the surrounding land clothed in a mantle of snow, in my aviary could be seen flying about in good health and in the pink of condition birds from all climes, both hot and cold—lovely Budgerigars, charming Avadavats, Fire Finches, Waxbills, Lovebirds, Quails, Spicebirds, Bengalese, Combassous, Diamond Finches and the lovely little Orange-cheeks, not to mention the British birds. Such a blending of colour cannot be adequately described; no pen can tell of the glorious spectacle; it must be seen to be fully appreciated. My pets were fed on good canary seed, rapeseed, hempseed and teazle, with, of course, spray and white millet and a few white oats for the Budgerigars. Plenty of gritty sand was supplied, and water for bathing purposes was always at hand. Though I do not possess the aviary now, I, in order to repay somewhat the great debt that I owe Cage Birds, regularly read with pleasure that journal, though, if I purchased ten thousand issues, it would be a poor return on my part for the great enjoyment I have derived as a result of my introduction to that energetic and enterprising weekly.

Six Goldfinch-Twite Hybrids Reared in Scotland.

Sir,—Being interested in the letters that appear in CAGE BIRDS every week about Hybrid breeding, we thought about giving our experiences to those interested. We have a white-checked hen Twite which we paired up with a Goldfinch. They built a nest among some twigs in the corner of the cage, where she laid seven eggs, four of which hatched out, and we are proud to say that two of the young are seven weeks old and doing well. The next nest she laid five eggs; two hatched out; one bird died, and the other is three weeks old. The third nest she laid four eggs, and three of them hatched on Sunday. So I think with a little care we will have six Goldfinch-Twites by the end of the season. We are anxious to know if anyone has struck this cross with the same success. We wish your grand paper. CAGE BIRDS, every success.

MUIR AND HEENAN.

The Novice Question at the Shows.

Sir,—Perhaps Mr. Fulcher is satisfied with the Norwich classes; but are the Yorkshire men with theirs? He must have heard, as well as I, the men say that the novice is not fairly dealt with. I believe the M. and N.C. O.S. had three sections—professional, amateur, and novice; then why not Ardwick? Or does he want to keep the novices under, for by his letter it seems so? I dare guarantee that if the societies would cater more for novices more would join. I have shown schedules to fanciers who belong to no society, and the question has been asked: What chance has a novice? Mr. F. mentions one of our members being a professional and novice. But in my letter I did not confine my remarks to the County Palatine; I have birdy friends in more than one county, and I hear of more than one county, and I hear of more than one fancier indulging in sharp practices, Mr. F. says more classes and fewer entries; or does he mean more classes, more prize money being paid out, and less money for different societies? Where a man's treasure is there will his heart be also. Mine is in "Ardwick." Where's your's, Mr. F., now? A. E. LONG.

Trapping Mice with a Bottle.

Sir,—I send you what I have found to be a very effective mouse trap. Get a large bottle of suitable shape, and put some canary seed in it, or a bit of cheese. Set it down at an angle against some of your cages or appliances where the mice are likely to get at it. When a mouse goes in, it can't get up the side of the bottle to come out. My sketch shows one set against an empty cage. WILLIAM MELVIN.

Canary that Cheers Hospital Patients

And Takes Five O'clock Tea.

Sir,—I read with very much interest the following pretty little story in Saturday's "Pall Mall Gazette," and if the facts are as stated (and I have no reason to doubt their authenticity), then the incident is a further proof of birdy sagacity; and I think readers of CAGE BIRDS may be very interested in the matter.

JOHN B. WATERMAN.

How is "Dinky" this morning? Did she come in last night? These are the first inquiries which patients at the Royal Hospital for Incurables at Putney Heath make every morning on rising, for "Dinky" is the little bird that brightens their days and alleviates their sufferings. There is probably no tamer and no more intelligent bird in London than "Dinky," the Canary, the friend of the hospital ward. Every morning "Dinky" leaves her cage and flies to a horse-trough about two hundred yards away, where she takes her daily dip, free from the gaze of the passer-by. As if possessed of true human instinct, she never enters the hospital with her feathers wet, and sees that they are perfectly dry before strutting into the wards. Here she saunters from patient to patient, and in sweet little chirrups seem to bid them "Good morning." When she has made sure that every one has seen "Dinky," and is satisfied, she leaves them to spend the day with the Sparrows, with whom she is a favourite. Punctually at five "Dinky" returns to the wards, where speculation is generally rife among patients as to whom she is going to select to have tea with. But "Dinky" likes to please everybody, and she chooses her hostess in turns. She is equally at home with any one of the patients. After enjoying a "good tea," which, however, consists of breadcrumbs, she will take French leave and make again for the open. She sometimes keeps very late hours, and is so tired as not to be anxious to look for her cage. On such occasions "Dinky" drops asleep on anything that comes in her way.

A Hen that Refused Egg-food.

Was She a Good Judge?

Sir,—Two years ago I put up a pair of Canaries in an ordinary breeding cage. The hen hatched three birds, but she refused to eat egg food, so I had to see what other food I could give her. I took two parts of crushed hemp seed and one part of stale bread crumbs (the latter passed through a sieve), with a little maw seed, and mixed them thoroughly together. I gave this three times a day. In addition, I gave them a good supply of young lettuce seedlings about an inch in height. She brought up three nests that season—two threes and a two—and they were well feathered days before my other birds that were about the same age, and were having egg food. I have been a bird fancier for forty years.

MRS. COVELL.

An Appeal for a Newcastle Fancier.

Sir,—Will you please give me a little space in your paper to make an appeal on behalf of a fellow-fancier, a member of Newcastle Society, and also Gateshead—Mr. C. Eastop, 15, Spencer Street, Gateshead. He underwent an operation some months ago in Newcastle Infirmary for cancer of the stomach, and is now lying seriously ill at his own home, and the doctors give no hope of his recovery. He has a wife and four children, the eldest of whom is eleven years of age. We have decided to open a subscription list. Mr. H. E. Cracknell, 99, Croydon Road, Newcastle; Mr. J. Mackenzie, 50, High Friar Street, and 153, Grainger Street, Newcastle; or myself will be glad to receive any contribution, however small. I can assure fellow-fanciers that this is a really deserving case. Thanking you in anticipation of your publishing this letter.

The White Canary.

Who First Established a True Strain?

Sir,—In your issue of July 27 Mrs. Martin, of New Zealand, puts forward a claim as to being the first in the field in the breeding of White Canaries. By the following particulars, readers will be able to observe that she is not even in the first three. My first White Canary was hatched Aug. 3, 1908, and exhibited at Crystal Palace Show of 1909. Now, in a letter to me from that lady dated May 31, 1909, also to yourselves, appearing in CAGE BIRDS of July 24, 1909, she stated that a young friend of hers at Martinborough, N.Z., had bred that year a White Canary which she (Mrs. Martin) had purchased. On May 3, 1910, I was successful in again proving that this particular kind of Canary can be regularly bred—as hitherto it had been considered a freak. Likewise, in that same year, Dr. Galloway (Aberdeen) and Dr. Syson (Glasgow) were successful in raising White Canaries, while, according to Mrs. Martin's own written statement to me dated October 6, 1910, she had only bred a White Canary a fortnight before that date, whereas all the birds I have referred to were already in existence. I think I may safely leave it with your readers to judge as to who established the White strain. It may interest you to learn that, by the help of Dr. Galloway, I have bred in a new strain. He supplied me in 1911 with a Cinnamon-marked hen. I mated her to my original White, with the result:—One White, three Yellows. The White proved a hen. I mated her this season to one of my White stock; result, from this pair all Whites. In the future I will be able to put up more White pairs, as hitherto I have had to guard against too close breeding.

W. KIESEL.

A COCKATEEL AND THE MYSTERIOUS CALL OF THE SOUTH.

Owners of Finger-tame Birds—Beware!

Sir,—Last autumn I bought two pairs of aviary-bred Cockateels, all 1911 birds. They were in a small aviary in our back yard all last winter. In the spring one hen died, and her mate looked rather seedy; so I took him into the house to "doctor up" a bit. He quickly got well, but as it was too cold and wet to turn him outside I thought I would try to tame him. In a very few weeks he would come out of his cage on my finger and go with me all over the house. In each room he had his special perching place, and was not happy except in that particular place. Soon I was able to carry him about the garden in the same way on my finger. He would sit for an hour at a time outside on a window sill, at times just taking a fly over to talk with his big brother and his wife in the aviary opposite. He generally sat on the back of my chair during breakfast. For a few days past he had been rather restless. When I played with him he would not mock fight so nicely as he used to do, but gave me a sharp nip or two. On Saturday last I was taking his cage outdoors to clean, and, as usual, was going to let Joey sit on the window sill. However, as soon as we got to the door away he flew into a very big tree, then off he went like a flash of lightning. I set the other two Cockateels in the aviary calling by putting one into the sleeping place, thinking that Joey would come back to the aviary; but no, thank you, the mysterious call of the South was far louder in his ears, no doubt. I miss my Joey very much. Others who have pets take warning; during the migration period do not allow quite so much liberty, or your pet bird may try to follow Joey in his hunt for a warmer clime. I left Joey's cage out till to-day in case he might think well to return. I never would have thought him capable of serving me such a trick, for we were great friends, and he was so very tame anyone could take him on a finger so long as they did not touch his tail; he objected very strongly to that. It has been so very wet that I am afraid Joey cannot be having a very good time. If birds can wish, no doubt he has wished himself back in his cage before now.

L. A. KNIGHT.

Very pleased to say I have at last found a paper for good advertising returns from all over the country, and that paper is CAGE BIRDS. Shall try no other now. Please send me some advertising forms and envelopes.—H. Moore (London, S.E.).

Kindly discontinue advertisement as replies to same have far exceeded my anticipations. I wish your very interesting paper "CAGE BIRDS" every success.—A. Nicholls (St. Columb).

Have sold my birds, thanks to the advertisement in "CAGE BIRDS," and shall certainly advertise in "CAGE BIRDS" again when I need—it has proved very satisfactory.—E. M. Wethey (Redcar).

AS A MEDIUM FOR EFFECTING SALES OR EXCHANGES OF MISCELLANEOUS GOODS "CAGE BIRDS" IS UNRIVALLED!

Mr. Preston (Keighley), in sending an advertisement for our Miscellaneous Exchange column, writes: —"To my last advert. in "C.B.," of Bantams, I had 23 enquiries, and among them I found some good people and fanciers."

Cat Mother's Blackbirds

Strange "Family" to be Seen at Newlyn, Cornwall.

A cat which acts as foster-mother to two young Blackbirds is the remarkable sight to be seen at Newlyn, Cornwall, writes a correspondent of the "Daily Mirror." A fourteen-year-old-boy named Alfred Jenkins owns this remarkable family, and when I entered the kitchen of his home the first thing I saw was the cat lying down in a chair with the two young Blackbirds tucked snugly away under her paws.

"Wait a moment," said Alfred. "They'll jump on her head directly, and then puss will go to sleep." A few moments later one of the birds hopped upon the cat's head, the other upon her back, whereupon pussy closed her eyes and indulged in "forty winks" just as if nursing her own kittens.

The young birds have no fear of their foster-mother. I saw them hopping about and pecking at her mouth until I felt she must surely devour them. At another time I saw her stretch out a paw, pull one of the birds to her side in the gentlest manner possible, and then place her foreleg round it in the most motherly way.

This, I learnt, is her second family of Blackbirds this year. How she became a foster-mother was in this wise. Alfred had just brought home his first nest of young birds, and puss, whose kittens had recently been drowned, chanced to enter the outhouse where he was feeding his pets. To Alfred's astonishment the cat got into the box, laid down, and tucked in the birds around her warm body. The birds took kindly to their new mother, who could not afterwards be induced to leave them, even when hungry.

Puss's first family numbered three, but tragedy overtook one of them. Whilst the foster-mother was asleep one day, a strange cat came along and snatched at one of the family. Puss woke up just in time to save the bird, but in the battle squeezed one of her bird kittens so tightly that it died.

Wild-Bird Life.

The Nesting of the Wryneck

That interesting bird, the Wryneck, nested in one of the old walnut trees near to the writer's home. The site selected was a hole at the end of a thick branch, where the limb had been broken off by the winter's storms. For some time the birds were constantly flying about the open meadow-land, visiting tree after tree, and occasionally descending to the ground. The land is a light sandy loam, and consequently just the one to be infested with ants, in fact, their hills are plentiful everywhere, and these the Wrynecks visit, making holes in the sides, in just the same manner as the Blackbird works a damp spot where one has been watering in the garden.

Although the Wrynecks are no nest builders, the birds were constantly popping in and out of the selected hole, as if particularly pleased with their new home; they were as busy as Starlings running up and down the branch, and then disappearing for a minute or so, coming to the entrance, and looking about as if surveying the surrounding district.

When the eggs were laid, and the hen bird commenced to incubate, her partner was very shy and wary, seldom going near the entrance; in fact he was more frequently to be seen in some of the surrounding trees, or flying from one to the other. It was impossible to inspect the nest to get a view of the eggs or young. As a rule, the hen lays some half-dozen clear white eggs, although a full clutch might contain as many as eight.

The fecundity of the Wryneck in the matter of eggs is very remarkable. Egg after egg may be removed, and still the female lays more, continuing to do so in some cases right through the summer and she will return to her old quarters the following spring to repeat her efforts to propagate the species.

The Wryneck could frequently be seen, searching among the slender branches and twigs for small insects and caterpillars, but apparently their principal food was obtained from the ant hills. The Wryneck does not pick up food by the beak as other birds do, but, shooting out its long tongue, it gathers the ants and their eggs upon it, evidently by means of some sticky fluid by which it is anointed.

Besieged by Crows.

Crows are infesting Japan in unusual numbers this spring, says the "Daily Express." Recently a farmer and his son at Shidzuoka were attacked by a flock and forced to take refuge in a building, where they were besieged until nightfall.

The Act of Soaring.

The action of sailing or soaring appears to be only possible to certain birds and to take place in a wind of a certain velocity. It differs from ordinary gliding, inasmuch as the bird does not lose either in velocity or in vertical position.

The Wary Oyster Catcher.

The Oyster Catcher is one of the most wary of birds, so much so that one never sees the old bird leave the nest. She takes wing long before the intruder is on the breeding ground, so that she never discloses the whereabouts of the home. The ever watchful male bird is constantly on the look out, and never fails to warn the sitting hen of the danger approaching.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same.

DERWENT VALLEY.

Meeting held 3rd inst., Mr. G. Barkess in the chair; moderate attendance of members. Decided that we give 10s. out of funds for first prize in our annual draw, and a special prize of 2s. 6d. to the seller of most tickets (members excepted). Decided to put draw tickets into printer's bands.—Lindsay and Marsh, Hon. Secs.

CHOPWELL C.B.S.

Meeting held in club hall, August 3. Only a moderate attendance of members. Mr. T. Betton was enrolled as a member. Special prizes were looked through, but it was decided to leave them until next meeting to allot them to the different classes. Decided to have Hyde's class in schedule. Messrs. J. Flint and J. Mason were elected as auditors. Next meeting in usual place, Aug. 17.—W. Tomlinson, hon. sec.

GLASGOW AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Committee meeting in Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Ingram-street, July 29th, Mr. J. F. Park presiding over a good attendance. Secretary reported on judge's acceptances for show. Sub-committee reported re Hall, and it was unanimously agreed to hold show in Glasgow Highlanders' Drill Hall, Greendyke-street, it being more commodious than the last hall occupied by the association. Various matters in connection with show were taken up and considered.—Wm. Hutchison, Sec.

WELSH C.B.C.

I have to-day (August 3rd) sent out balance sheets and new rule books to every paid up member. There are several members who have not yet paid their subscriptions for 1912, and I shall be glad if these members will please do so as quickly as possible. We have enrolled eight new members for 1912, and I trust that before the show season commences we shall add considerably to this number. Can any fancier please give me the address of Mr. J. Pritchard, late of Mountain Ash? I shall be pleased to give any information to any fancier wishing to join.—A. E. Brown, Hon. Sec., 66, Clare Street, Merthyr Tydfil.

AMALGAMATED LANCASHIRE SOCIETIES.

Meeting held at Oldham on August 1 for the purpose of settling all matters connected with our show held at Bury. The following societies were not represented:—Middleton, Heywood, Littleborough. The balance sheet, as issued by Mr. Jameson, show secretary, was passed as read. Decided that each society pay 2s. to cover the expenses of show, and that the three societies not present have a balance sheet. It was also moved and seconded that delegates sound their respective societies with respect to holding a back end show, and that a meeting should be held at Littleborough on Sept. 14 at 3.30.—Jas. Cope, sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting held August 1, at the Wentworth Cafe, Mr. F. Jones (President) in the chair. A good number of members were present. The special item was the table show of young birds, 69 birds being on view. A letter was read from the secretary of the Sheffield O.S., asking us to send a deputation to a proposed meeting of the other Sheffield societies to discuss the subject of novices. The two Secretaries and Messrs. F. Jones and T. Hemming were appointed to attend. The Ramble on August 10 is to be in the Oughtybridge district. Members and friends meet at Oughtybridge Station at 2.30. Train leaves Sheffield Victoria Station at 2.10, or Wadsleybridge at 2.19. Next meeting, September 5. Important arrangements for open show. Mr. W. Hallows was elected a member.—J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Monthly meeting, held at Oldham Hall, Liverpool, July 25, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe in the chair. New members elected, Messrs. Jones and Greenwell. The following were nominated for membership: Messrs. Malone and Taberner. Owing to lack of entries the night show postponed from the June meeting had to be cancelled. Patronage was granted to the following shows: Newcastle-on-Tyne, Yorks. and Bord., Manchester, Liverpool O.S., Rochdale, London C.B.A., Scottish Nat., G.C.A., and Crystal Palace, Yorks., Bord., and Nor., Halifax, Yorkshires, Preston, and Bradford National, Yorks. and Nor. Special cards will be got out as early as possible. It is essential that members send their subscriptions, otherwise it will delay the committee in allotting specials. The August meeting is set aside for arranging a syllabus for 1912 and 1913; members are requested to attend.—C. Green, Hon Sec.

THE NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C.

Meeting held at Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, July 27. Mr. W. A. Cowgill presided. Messrs. H. C. Crossley, W. Mann, A. Spencer, and S. Binns were elected members of the club. Mr. S. Moore was elected on the committee in place of Mr. W. Crabtree (resigned). Mr. L. Hodgson's tender for the printing of the club's handbooks was accepted. Patronage was granted to the Anfield, Everton, and Dis. C.B.S.'s open show, December 26. We have now granted our patronage to ten shows, which is the limited number. The following is a list of specials given by the club at the shows where the patronage is granted. Open competition: First prize, trophy, value £10 10s. (presented by Mr. W. H. Shackleton), together with a club medal, value £1 1s., the trophy to be won twice before becoming the property of the winner. Second trophy, value £2 2s. (presented by the club), third, (gold), value £1 1s. (presented by Mr. L. Dykes), fourth, pair of boots, 10s. 6d. (presented by Mr. J. Chippendale); fifth, box of 50 cigars (presented by Messrs. Pickup and Sons). A handsome silver-plated teapot, given by Mr. J. W. Ramsden for most points gained by birds moulted solely on his pepper, in the open classes, and a special value 12s. 6d. (presented by Mr. C. Morrison), is also offered for competition for most points gained by third birds, only three birds to count. Amateur: 1st, case of dessert cutlery, value £1 10s. (presented by Mr. T. Sandiford); 2nd, special, value £1 1s. (presented by the club); 3rd, medal, value 10s. 6d. (presented by Messrs. Sutcliffe and Son); 4th, medal, 7s. 6d., (presented by Mr. H. Hill); 5th, special, value, 5s. (presented by the club). Junior novices: To be competed for at Yorkshire Union Shows in novice classes where Green marked classes are provided. 1st, special, value £1 1s. (presented by Mr. W. A. Cowgill); 2nd, special, value 10s. 6d. (presented by Messrs. Brown and Son); 3rd, special, value 5s. 6d. (presented by Mr. J. Bailey); 4th, special, value 5s. (presented by Mr. E. Clegg); 5th, 2s. 6d. (presented by the club). Cash specials: 3s. for most points gained by fourth birds, and 2s. for most points gained by fifth birds, at each show where the club's patronage is granted; winners of first prizes in green marked classes do not compete. I shall be pleased to receive names and addresses from intending members as early as possible, so that I may put them in handbook; also members or others who wish to have adverts in the handbook should apply at once.—E. Clegg, Hon. Sec. and Treas., Victoria School House, Dewsbury.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting, with a fair turn out of members. Annual schedule was finally considered. Decided to add some fresh classes. Also decided that a letter of condolence be sent one of the members, Mr. G. S. Ellwood, in the great loss he had sustained by the death of his wife. The Secretary reported having secured the following patronage: Northern Lizard Club, Yorks. C.C., Northern Yorks. C.C., and the Northern Border F.C.—Geo. Havver, Sec.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held at Rawtenstall, July 21st, and a fair number of members put in an appearance from Manchester, Glossop, Oldham, Shaw, Roehdale, etc. Friend Teddy, from Glossop, expressed his opinion in scathing terms as to at last having found a place that was made at a later period than Glossop. However, we had a very good meeting. Patronage to Manchester, L.C.B.A., and Sheffield, was confirmed. The secretary was instructed to write several others re patronage. Messrs. John Hamer and Barker Clegg were elected members, and Mr. E. Lord, Newchurch, was proposed as a member. Next meeting, August 10, at the Old Boar's Head Hotel, Manchester.—John Rukin, Secretary.

VALE OF LEVEN C.B.C.

Monthly meeting, held in Village Schoolroom, Alexaudria, August 1st, President Hannah in the chair. The classes were revised for annual show, to be held in Public Hall, Alexandria, November 16th. The young bird classes to remain the same as last year, viz., Norwich 4, Crests 2, Bord. 4, Scotch Fancy 4, Yorks., 2, A.O.V. 1, Mule and Hybrid 2. Old bird classes: Norwich 4, Crests 2, Bord. 6 (increase of two), Scotch Fancy 4, Yorks. 4 (increase of two), A.O.V. 1, sell., 10s., 1, Goldfinch Brit., do. For.; Bullfinch Brit., do For.; Linnet Greenfinch, Redpoll, Siskin-Twite or Mealy Redpoll, Chaffinch or Brambtefineh, Yellow Bunting, Softbill, hen, any variety, A.O.S. British, A.O.S. Foreign. The Secretary intimated that Mr. G. Hislop, of Stirling, and Mr. D. Holden, of Muirkind had accepted invitation to judge Canary section, and Mr. J. H. Adams, of Glasgow, the British and Foreign.—A. H. McLean, Sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Committee meeting, held at headquarters, the Feathers Hotel, Gt. Chapel Street, Westminster, on July 27. Present, Messrs. J. Robson (chairman), A. J. A. Marley, A. C. Askew, G. Mortlock, S. Grahame, C. Cooper, W. A. Shepherd, J. Dewhurst, O. Leek, R. A. Newby, C. T. Maxwell, and J. P. Carr. The Chairman welcomed Mr. Otto Puck as a member of the London Committee. The following shows were granted the club's patronage: Clapham (gold and silver medal), Newcastle (silver and bronze), Cheltenham (silver and bronze), Sheffield, Leicester, Portsmouth, Leyton, Wimbledon, and Luton (silver medal each), Swansea (two silvers and bronze), Cardiff (silver and bronze), Llanelly (two silvers), Bradford (gold and bronze), Scottish National (gold, silver and bronze). Mr. Shellam presented a gold medal for most points in the British section at Cheltenham, Swansea and Cardiff shows. Mr. Longden, a gold medal for most points in Hybrid section at Cheltenham, Swansea and Cardiff shows, and Mr. Archer a silver medal for 2nd most points at Bradford show. The allotting of medals to the following shows was postponed pending fuller particulars of classification and judges: Manchester, Carlisle, L.C.B.A., Gateshead and Crystal Palace. Mr. J. E. Jefferys, Swansea, was elected a member of the club.—J. P. Carr, Joint Hon. Sec.

SWINDON F. AND F.A.

Monthly meeting, held at the Baths, Milton Road, July 31. Present, Messrs. A. Ireland (chair), J. T. Edmonds, W. Greenwood, J. Tarrant, E. Ireland, S. Lewis, T. Patterson, J. Bennett, H. A. Northover, G. Gorton, C. Bridgeman, T. R. Gee, C. Barker, and W. J. Moran. New member elected, Mr. Barker, 40, Commercial Road, Swindon. A small table show of cage birds was held, but only one member, Mr. Greenwood, exhibited, as all the other members' birds were deep on moult. A judging competition was held, and it was found that only one member, a rabbit fancier, had placed the birds in accordance with the judge's awards. Mr. J. T. Edmonds judged the birds, and also gave a very interesting and instructive discourse on cage birds, breeding cages, and outdoor aviaries. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Edmonds for his very good advice; and in replying he mentioned he would give another lecture on foreign birds in the coming winter. The next monthly meeting will be held at the Baths, August 28, at 8, when a table show of poultry will be held. Fanciers and friends heartily invited. I wish to call members' attention to rule 3, and will be very pleased to receive subscriptions due before August 31st.—W. J. Moran, Hon. Sec.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF SCOTLAND.

Meeting to allocate patronage for forthcoming season, held in the Good Templars' Halls, Glasgow, Aug. 3. President Heggie presided over a good attendance. Decided to grant our patronage to six shows, and the following were successful, viz., Lochgelly, City of Glasgow, Ayr, Cowdenbeath, Glasgow and District, and Scottish National. Decided to adopt the English clubs' definitions regarding ticked and marked birds during the season. The trophies to be competed for during the season are as follows, viz., Silver rose bowl for most points, with gold medal to winner; special to runner-up presented by Mr. Chas. Martin. Above confined to nominated birds. Mr. Heggie gives three specials for most points during the year, all entries counted. Second, confined to novices, most points at four stated shows (same system as last year). Third, for the number with least average points at all patronised shows provided he makes at least fifteen entries all told. The Club also decided to give 5s. (or value) for most points at each individual show on same terms as previous years. Mr. McLellan gives a special to runner-up to winner of the President's novice special. Mr. Penman, special for most points in young bird classes throughout the season. Mr. Anderson, special to runner-up to above special, and Mr. Pinnock, special for most points gained by a novice in young bird classes at a show he will nominate. Members might kindly look up Rule 2. New members cordially invited to join now, and be in time for the opening of the season. Mr. Hendry Geddes, Cowdenbeath, and Mr. Steel, Glasgow, were accepted as members.—R. D. Gibb, hon. sec.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

Meeting held Aug. 1, Mr. N. C. Potts in the chair. Correspondence was read from the following societies granting patronage for open show on Oct. 18 and 19:—Open Norwich Plainhead Club, National British B.M.C., Yorkshire C.C., Border Fancy Club, Northern Border and S.F.C., Northern B.B.M.F.B.C., Northern Yorkshire C.C. A letter was read from Gateshead C.B.S., suggesting that we combine to hold a members' show. This will be brought on again at our next meeting. A letter was read from Cinnamon C.C. Mr. H. E. Cracknell sent a letter informing the members of the sad position of one of our members (he is also a member of Gateshead), Mr. C. Eastop, 15, Spencer Street, Gateshead, who is lying seriously ill of cancer of the stomach, and will not recover. He has a wife and four children, the eldest of whom is eleven years of age. It was arranged that subscription lists be opened out: Mr. Cracknell, 99, Croydon Road, Newcastle; Mr. J. Mackenzie, 50, High Friar Street, Newcastle, and Market; or myself, 218, Ladykirk Road, Newcastle, will be glad to receive any contribution, however small. I can assure everyone that this is a really deserving case, and is worth assisting. Mr. Cockburn, 136, Doncaster Road, Newcastle, was elected a member. Mr. Crawhall presented the cups won at our N.F. show to Mr. G. Greenwell, Wallsend, for best Canary, and Mr. J. Nankivell for best in Brit. and For. sections. The schedule for open show was arranged. Will members please let me know by next meeting (Sept.) how many specials they have? We have a big classification, and we will require a lot of specials, so each one stick in and do his best for the society and make our show a bigger success than ever. Those members requiring advertisements in catalogue might let me know next meeting. There are still a few members who have not paid their subscriptions. I am waiting to receive same, so hurry up, be in time.—J. W. Reed, sec.

OLDHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Meeting held July 23 at Textile Dining Rooms, Shaw Road. Decided that at next meeting, Aug 13, at 8 p.m., which is announced as an open debate on any variety of bird, we should also decide where show shall be held, and also classification for same. With regard to our debate, Mr. Geo. Fitton has kindly promised us the use of his book, "(Our Canaries," and I have no doubt that it will be both interesting and instructive. Hoping to see a good number present, as all fanciers are heartily invited to attend.—Jas. Cope, sec.

BANKFOOT AND DIST. C.B.S.

Third and last Y.B. show of season, held August 3, at Red Lion Hotel, Bankfoot. Owing to the lateness of the show a wretched entry resulted, only 21 birds being staged in six classes. Mr. J. Wilcock, of Eccleshill, made the awards, which were highly satisfactory. All members kindly note that the next meeting night is Tuesday, August 20th, when, it is to be hoped, all will make a special effort to attend. CL. OR TKD. YELL. EAST BOWLING & DIST. B.F.A.

Third members F.F. show held in St. John's Parish Room on August 3rd, when some grand birds were staged. Mr. P. Mason, Windhill, judged, and gave entire satisfaction. Most points were gained by W. Bteazard, L. C. Casey, W. Hellewell, in open section, and F. Hinton in novice section. OPEN, CL. OR TKD. YELL.: 1, 2, Bleazard; 3, Casey; 4, vhc, c, Helliwell; hc, Padgett. NORTH SHIELDS AND DIS. C.B.S.

Second N.F. show held July 27. A splendid entry was forthcoming, and the majority of the birds were of excellent quality. In the Canary section Messrs. Fox, Newton, Wigglesworth, Johnston, Little, Rutherford, Wilson, Couchman, and Armstrong were the principal prize winners. Mr. Wiggiesworth gained the medal for best Canary, with a splendid Yorks. In the British section Messrs. W. Hunter, Buglass, Bergen, and W. Beevor, took chief honours, Mr. W. Hunter winning the medal with a magnificent Siskin. Mr. W. Johnston, of Wallsend, judged to the satisfaction of everyone. Mr. Wilson acted as show steward. The best thanks of the North Shields and Dis. C.B.C. are due to Mr. Johnston for judging, and to Mr. Wilson for superintending show. New members are cordially invited to join us. Any information can be had from R. P. Fox, Hon. Sec., 34, West Street, N. Shields.

MANCHESTER AND NORTHERN COUNTIES O.S.

Twenty-third annual F.F. Show held July 20th, when 126 birds were on view, a falling off of recent years owing no doubt to the bad breeding season some have experienced, and also to the show being held so late. Although numbers were down the quality was good right through. Mr. J. T. Brown won gold medal for best team of four Canaries with a grand lot of Yorks.; the buff, with ordinary luck, should do the owner some good after it has moulted. He was pressed hard by Mr. J. Beswick, who showed a grand team of Norwich. Mr. R. J. Metcalfe would have won medal for best team of British only there were not enough competitors, several exhibitors not starring their birds; rather hard lines for him. His winning Goldfinch was a grand bird, in splendid condition, and gained special for best Brit. in show. Mr. G. Pike showed a splendid team of Yorks., scoring three 1sts and one 2nd. No doubt these would have carried off the medal if they had been competing for it, and we wish him luck with them and a good moult. Then they will be sure to be seen again on the show bench. His ticked yellow is a topper. Mr. W. A. Cowgill (Bradford) judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction.—H. Boothman, Hon. Sec.

Singing Contests.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Week-end singing contest held August 4th, at the Prince Albert Inn, when 10 birds entered to sing for three good prizes given by Mrs. M. A. Saynor. Judges, Messrs. Smith and Madden. 1, Sellers; 2, Chippendale; 3, Turner.—E. Wood, Sec.

SALFORD.

The contest on August 10th, at the Boathouse Hotel, will start promptly at 3 p.m., afterwards tea will be provided at 1s. per head. Fanciers and friends are heartily invited. New members will be enrolled at the meeting, also new business concerning club matches.—B. Wharton, Sec.

LEEDS.

Weekly contest for quality held at the Old Bird House, King's Head, Shannon Street, Leeds, August 3rd, when 16 birds sang for 3 good prizes given by Wm. Tillotson. 1, Butler; 2, Chadwick; 3, Sellers. Judges, Messrs. Hardcastle and Turner. Also Aug. 4th, when 13 birds sang for 3 good prizes. 1, Richardson; 2, Butler; 3, Chadwick. Judges, S. Hardcastle, W. Naylor.—Walter Naylor, Hon. Sec.

A meeting of Buslingthorpe Linnet Club will be held at Skinner's Arms, Buslingthorpe Lane, on August 11th, at 7.30 when all members are earnestly requested to attend.—C. Clayton.

KIPPAX AND DISTRICT

Members' sing held at Commercial Hotel, July 27th, when only a moderate number of birds were entered. Nevertheless, it was one of the best sings of the season, as they must have been got up specially for this sing, and some of the oldest fanciers in the village were present to hear them. 1, Potter; 2, Tomlin; 3, Perkin. This terminates this season's contests. General meeting will be held August 17th, at 3, when all members are requested to be present.—R. Plows, Hon. Sec.

Would any sort of house suit you? We think not.

What of your Birds?

Will any sort of cage, any kind of room or aviary, do?

Try it, if you don't mind risking your birds.

The best plan is to consult

their construction and furnishing, and note the best way to house your birds.

Money spent on suitable cages is well spent.

The Mule Breeders' Vade Mecum.

Written by CHARLES HOULTON, who has had many years' successful experience. All that is required to make a success of this fascinating hobby. In thirty-three chapters, cages, aviaries, nests and nesting material, foods—natural and artificial, —the selection of stock, breeding of light and dark mules, are fully described.

GLORIOUS COLOURED PLATES. MANY ART PLATES.

Carriage paid for one payment of 7/6.

Or for 2/6 down, and three monthly payments of 2/-.

Has its Book in the "Cage Birds" Series.

Does all you eat agree with you?

You know it if it doesn't, anyway!

Wisely fed birds are healthy birds, and healthy birds do you service. Avoid all errors of diet in feeding them, therefore.

"Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants for Cage Birds"

will help you to feed them properly. It is especially valuable at this season when wild foods are to be had in such abundance, merely for the gathering.

There are many sketches and a splendid coloured plate of all the best known wild plants.

THE RING OUSEL.

Drawn from the specimen successfully exhibited last season by Mr. W. H. RAVEN, of Nottingham, at Clapham and other Shows.

RING Ousels are mostly summer migrants, though some occasionally winter with us. They are near relatives of the familiar Blackbird, but shun the vicinity of mankind, seeking the solitude of the moors and uplands.

Advt. Manager, "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3. AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4. IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

"Sorting Shop, Lion Mills, Co. Tyrone, Ireland, 6/8/12. I now send you a few lines to say that the bird lime you sent me last was the best I ever used. I have caught from a Wren to a Pigeon, and it has never let one go. Send me same again."—James Haire to W. Rudd.

"The Cottage, Claramont, Goffs Oak, Herts, 6/8/12. Please send another tin of bird lime. I use it in the garden, where the birds are very destructive, and never has one got away. It is the best lime I ever used, and I used to use a lot years ago in Scotland, and many a bird I lost through buying lime from others."—J. Conway to W. Rudd.

"Rathbeale, 23/7/12. I want you to send me 4d. tin of Bird Lime, as I have had some of yours since last year. It could not be beaten. I caught over 1,000 birds and did not lose one with your Lime."—John Culligan to W. Rudd.

YOUNG,

AS YOU KNOW

low prices do not always mean cheapness, but when you get lowest prices and highest quality combined you have the essence of cheapness. So confident am I of the superior quality of my goods over that of other makers that I invite every intending purchaser to have any of my goods on approval, and if in their opinion the goods are not of highest value obtainable to smash them up and I will willingly refund their money. Clap nets made from specially knitted ¾-mesh fine thread netting, 3 yards long, 5½ feet deep, and 4 feet fly, 4 - pair; ditto 4 yards long, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. All clap nets have two nets to the pair, each guaranteed of above stated size and all fitted complete with all pegs, poles, and lines ready for immediate use. These are the only nets on the market that are properly armed or geared all round. Loose netting specially knit from 60's 3-ply thread ¾-inch mesh, 7 feet deep. 3d. yard; ditto, 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12 feet deep, 5d. yard; extra stout netting for use on rough ground, ¾-mesh, 10 feet deep, 5d. yard. Lark netting, 1½-inch mesh, 12 feet deep, 4d. yard; all netting post free. My netting is the only netting on the market having a plain single selvedge, thus doing away with all cut edges. Sparrow nets, fitted on 17 feet bamboo poles, 5/6; ditto on 19 feet poles, 6/6 complete; self-acting spring net traps, 24 by 18 inches, 1/2 each; three 3.-; ditto, 18 by 14 inches, 10d. each; three, 2/3 carriage paid. These net traps can be used with call bird inside if desired, and can be baited for hardbills and softbills at same time. Genuine Japanese bird lime, guaranteed strongest lime made, will stand all weathers and hold birds in pouring rain; ½lb. 6d., ¼lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6; sample 3d.; all post free. This lime must not be confused with that sold by others as Japanese. If you do not buy from me, rest assured that you are not getting the real thing, as I have no agents. Single trap cages 6d. each, 5/- dozen; double ditto 1/- each, 9/- dozen; treble ditto 1/3 each, 12/- dozen; all with separate compartment for call bird, in addition to traps stated. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (Reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Real Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun, free from snarl and strong as boat lines, 1/4 each post free. Bird calls for imitating coll and song of any bird, 2d. each; twelve 1/- post free. Flirt pegs and lines, stave poles, and everything required by catchers in stock; send stamp for full descriptive list, which also gives hints on net making. Remember, all the leading professional catchers purchase their appliances from me, so follow their lead and get yours from the man who knows exactly what is required for successful catching. All on approval, and if not satisfactory, you smash them up and I refund money in full. (Imitators, please copy.)

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Look, ladies and gentlemen, I am patronised by owners, trainers, English and American jockeys, also the following well-known music-hall artistes: Miss Vista Tilley, a real champion Canary; Bella and Bijou, one of the best Canaries that ever sang through a bill; Fred Poplar, a real champion Canary; Arthur Prince, the great ventriloquist, one of the best Linnet Mules that ever sang in a cage; this bird was taught by the champion Linnet of the world; all the above birds sang in my band in a crowded room of spectators; you see the class of people that patronise the Original; if you want first-class birds, send to me; they are at working-men's prices. Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world; they make the purest Linnets ever carried to a contest for length, burns and form; they stand alone, and for voice they have no equal; this class of bird has won the English Derby and all the English Championships, and the world's greatest contests; all the recognised judges say they are equal to the finest German Roller, 1/-, 1/6, real toppers 2/-. Linnets, taught by the world's champion, singing a treat, with new page, 3/6, and a few extra specials, cannot be beaten, 4/6; exhibitors, try my A1 specials, 2/- each. German Rollers, singing splendidly, 4/6 each, taught by the winner of over 50 first prizes. Real English pear-tree cock Goldfinches, 2/-, a few gems, 3/-. Hundreds of British and foreign birds in stock; only honest dealing done with me, so send to your old friend: Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

DO YOU WANT

thoroughly healthy, reliable birds that are guaranteed properly on hard seed before being sent? If so, give me a trial. I send all on approval at my risk on receipt of cash or deposit system of this paper, and return money in full if entire satisfaction not given. Genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect condition, 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 6/6, twelve 12/-; specially selected large cocks, for moulting for show, muling, or song, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 8/6. Two-year-old cock Goldfinch, call bird, 2/6; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-. Splendid lot cock Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- each; handsome lot cock Brown Linnets, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 3/6. Specially selected cocks for show or singing, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6. Goldfinch, Linnet, and Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 5/- dozen. Lark Runner cages, 4/-, 5/- dozen. Please note: All birds are guaranteed properly netted in county of Worcester by catchers employed solely by myself and are not sent out until feeding thoroughly well on the usual seed mixture. This latter is a very important item during this wet season, as it takes weeks to wean birds from the rain-sodden seeds they are now feeding on in wild state. This also explains why I have not previously advertised birds for sale, as they were not then on hard seed. To avoid disappointment, patronise the man who has 21 years' reputation to uphold. No connection whatever with any other advertiser.

of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 and 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 25 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, H. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner, showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Notice! The breeding of mealworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., or from any of our agents. PARROT PROBLEM solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

The Close of the Breeding Season in Liverpool & District.

Taken all round, the final breeding results in the Liverpool district have been fairly satisfactory. Mr Winn (Cabbage Hall) has bred two young Larks; Mr. R. Algie (Bootle) has had phenomenal results—200 young Yorks., Greens and Clears (we noticed some very stylish Greens in this room); Mr. McNulty (Bootle) has bred thirty Yorkshire Greens, not a big lot, but real good ones; Mr. Hamilton (hon. sec., Bootle Society) has bred about twenty Yorks Clears, and has recently bought the stock of the late Mr. Potter, in which are some very nice Clears; Mr. Rawsthorne has bred over forty Yorks Clears and Greens; Mr. Knight only five Yorks Cl., a poor lot this year (better luck next time!); Mr. Lobb, Bootle's oldest fancier, has bred fifty young Yorks Greens and Cl., very typical birds, we liked very much. Mr. T. Rowlands has done remarkably well—eighty young Yorks Greens; Mr. Malone, thirty fine youngsters; Mr. Parsons, 58 Yorks Greens (I noticed some stormers here); Mr. Kelly, 30 fine Cl., another nice lot; Mr. W. H. Harrison 43 (real good young Clears these); Mr. T. Cutts, 47 Yorks Greens and Cl. and Borders, some typical youngsters; Mr. Crowe, 49 Yorks and Nor.; Mr C. Rumsby, 58 Nor. and Yorks; Mr. Williams, 15 real Yorkies; Mr Holden, 38 Yorks Green and Cl.; Mr. McLoughlin, 34 Yorks Greens; Mr. W. Walker has 97, comprising Yorks (Green and Cl.) and Nor. (Green and Cl.) of fine quality. Mr Ritchie, 57 nice Cl. Yorks; Mr. Redpath, 47 Cl. Yorks and Nor., we noticed some fine birds here; Mr. Whiteside, 69 Yorks Cl.; Mr H. Kelly, 43 big young Yorkies; Mr. T. Plunkett, 47 Yorks Greens and Cl.; Mr. Bright, 30 Yorks Cl.; Mr. Cooper, 17 Yorks and Nor.; Mr. Eaton, 29 Yorks Greens; Mr. Cole, 34 Yorks Greens; Mr. H. Cooper, 67 Yorks Greens and Cl. and Nor.; Mr. Sinclair, 35 nice Yorks; Mr. Steinart, 49 Yorks Greens and Cl., very typical birds; Mr. Alf. Corbett, 32 beautiful Yorks Cl. and Greens; Mr. J. Smith, 47 Yorks Greens and Borders; Mr. Cutmore, 60 Yorks and Nor.; Mr. Cross, 29 Yorks; Mr. Alston, 47 Yorks, tip-toppers; Mr. S. Edwards, 43 Yorks Cl. and Greens and Borders, good ones these; Mr. Benson has 87 fine young Greens; Mr. Young, 39 Yorks Green and Cl.; Mr. Moreton, 47 Yorks Cl. and Gr.; Mr. Richardson 49 Yorks; Mr. McDougal, 41 Yorks; Mr. J. Gore, 47 Yorks Gr., and big ones too. The following districts have done fairly well, namely. Chester, Ormskirk, Warrington, St. Helens Widnes, Southport, Wrexham, Birkenhead, Garston, Prescot, and other small towns. Birds are now right in the moult, and I have no hesitation in predicting one of the finest show seasons of recent years. Everybody is very enthusiastic, and the Fancy seems to have taken a new lease of life. I have been requested to escort a party of fanciers into the Bradford district shortly. We are promised by the Yorkshire men their finest collection of birds at one of the principal shows, to be held in Liverpool about Christmas. This will be a treat to the members of several societies. I appeal to all fanciers to join one or other of the societies; it will improve their ideas and bring them into contact with each other, and they will get full value for their subscriptions. Birds are now well on to colour food, but there are still some fanciers who do not like the idea of colour feeding, as they consider it detrimental to the health and breeding qualities of the birds. This is a false idea. Colour feeding has no ill-effects upon a bird in any shape or form, and novices can cast that idea on one side as mere sentiment. Let me appeal to members of societies to send subscriptions in as soon as possible, and so give the officials a chance to get their printed matter out; it will also materially assist in the working up of societies. Rally round, turn up to the meetings, etc, and make your society a success both numerically and financially.—R. B. Wright.

The Toll of the Migrants.

In his admirable book, "Studies in Bird Migration," Mr. Eagle Clarke writes: Those who have not witnessed a "bird-night" at a light-station cannot form any conception of the appalling loss of life that takes place. I have stood on the gallery of the Eddystone Lighthouse and watched the migrants striking the great lantern and falling into the surf beneath for ten and a half hours without a break. I have stood on the deck of the Kentish Knock Lightship from dusk to dawn, and seen birds falling thickly the whole time, to perish miserably, many of them being stunned, in the calmest of seas. On each of these occasions thousands of the migrants perished. What must the combined slaughter have been at these neighbouring stations, or, perhaps, at many British stations, for the conditions and the movements are often widespread? What for a whole season? Hundreds of thousands: I am convinced of this. Another danger may be alluded to, namely, the havoc wrought among the travellers by birds of prey. These destroyers take a heavy toll, for many follow their migratory prey and play havoc in their ranks.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

Some Favourite British Seed-eaters.

Their Selection for Show, and Management.

A lecture delivered by Mr. H. J. Chittenden, a well-known fancier and judge, before the Leeds C.B.S.

THE Linnet which has the following good points will be a show specimen: good colour, to be heavily marked, marks to extend well down the thighs, well-braced wings meeting nicely at the tips, neat pipe tail, white feather in wings and tail, showing clean and distinct as the bird hops from perch to perch, nice round head and bold eye. It should be of the true Norwich type; I never favour those of the Yorkshire type.

Getting the Show Shine.

Such a bird as I have described will win, providing he has that good condition which makes the Linnet so very pleasing to the eye. Steadiness is also an important item, and the fancier who takes pains to get his bird steady is the man who wins the prizes. If I were judging a class, a bird possessing these characteristics, if only of medium size, or even on the small side, would get preference to the big rough birds you see winning occasionally. I am no believer in constant washing, preferring the spraying process, as this does not take too much out of them. When thoroughly dry, catch the bird, and hold gently but firmly; next take a good quality silk handkerchief and groom him. You will find that this will make your Linnets shine like glass bottles—termed in shaw reports, "lovely sheen."

I find the Linnet is improved by a little colour feeding, and have never had any difficulty in getting them to eat it by simply adding a pinch of aniseed, which kills the taste of the pepper, and is itself pleasant. Care should be taken not to overdo it; just a pinch of pepper in the ordinary food every day during the moult is all that is required.

Many of you will know that staining and faking exist to-day, practised by those who are utterly devoid of any sense of honour. A more contemptible action than showing a stained bird against competitors who are staging their exhibits honestly and fairly I cannot imagine. In my opinion the stainer and faker might just as well put his hand into his brother fancier's pocket and rob him. Judges experience great difficulty in detecting stained birds, simply because the fanciers (if they are worthy of the name), by years of constant practice, have become artists—in a sense of the word—at this low-down game.

"Improving" the Redpoll.

A good specimen of the Lesser Redpoll must be bold, cobby, of good size, be well tanned and laced, with perfect wing carriage and good round head, showing a nice clean bib, almond shape (or similar to shape of thumb nail). It is hard to get one good in all these points, the biggest fault being the uneven bib. It is common knowledge that birds have been tampered with to get that clean-cut bib which puts on the finishing touch to a specimen good in all other respects. When showing the Redpoll, care should be taken to have the show cage in proportion to the bird, which means a little bird should never be staged in a big cage, and vice versa, but to have bird and cage in proper harmony.

This little fellow is the easiest of our British songsters to get steady, and when once used to the show cage he will never forget it, even if you allow him to fly about in a large flight for as long as two years. When visiting some of our big shows, I have seen the owners of many of these little birds giving their pets a tit-bit in the shape of a hemp seed, holding it against the wires, and the birds have come forward fearlessly and taken it. This is how you should have your show Redpolls, so that when the judge picks up his cage he will come up to the front of the wires and show off all his qualities; such a bird demands attention.

Many of the winning Redpolls on the show bench are foreigners, they being much larger than our own, and so have a big advantage if possessing all other good qualities. To get the good deep colour that is required, I treat the same as the Linnet, viz., a pinch of colour food mixed with aniseed in the daily food. I have found Redpolls readily eat this.

The Points of a Twite.

In the Twite, size again is needed, along with good colour, bold and distinct markings, high condition, and good wing carriage, with tail neatly folded and well carried, the bird to be as steady as a rock, and carrying no loose feather, be clean waisted, and cut away like a clean-cut Norwich, nice round head and shapely body. A bird such as I have described will be a tip-top show bird.

And Communicated by Mrs. B. J. Moore, S. Belgravia, S.W.

MY name is Billy, at least that is what my present and favourite, mistress calls me. I have had a good many masters and mistresses in my time and I hope that a friendly talk about my experiences may be found interesting to CAGE BIRDS readers.

My first master bought me at a big shop. I heard him bargaining with the bird dealer; for I must tell you that soon after I was imported over here I began to understand the English language, but never felt inclined to try to talk it, it was too great an effort. Of course the bird dealer cracked me up a lot, and I felt very proud of myself. Well, home we went, to rather a nice house and he showed me to his wife.

"Oh! George," she said "I hope it is not a screamer." Up went my crest at that! "No dear," he answered "the shopman said that with a little patience he will talk."

I was made a great fuss of, and people would talk to me, and poke their fingers through the bars. But somehow I did not feel comfortably settled, and got generally sick of things, so I wondered what a little noise would do towards getting me a new home, and every time they left me alone I would kick up a row. To my joy, one day I heard them say they would advertise me and try and get a talking Parrot in exchange.

I hoped I should get a real good home where I might feel content, get plenty of monkey nuts, and not always be shut up in my cage. How I longed to get out and have a nibble at some wood work and stretch my wings and generally dash about. It would be glorious. I believe I did once have a fly, but such a long time ago when I was a baby I suppose.

Hurrah! My new home is fine! This time it is a mistress I belong to; she is young and has quite taken a fancy to me and I to her. I heard her say she wanted to make me finger-tame. I thought why not? Then I shall get out of this old cage. She is very gentle, and keeps tapping my claws with her fingers. Now this, done by some people, I should resent, but how can I resist her! I have made up my mind the next time she tries me I shall step on to her finger, and perhaps she will lift me out.

My mistress lifted me to-day on to the back of a chair. I fluttered my wings and generally shook myself. I did not attempt to fly; for one thing I was not sure of my wings, and could not tell where I should land. After a time she put me back again into my cage and gave me a monkey nut. We are getting friendlier with each other every day, I now let her stroke my feathers, and even my tail. But, alas, I have discovered she has a sweetheart, so you see there is always something to upset a poor bird, and just as I thought I was going to be happy and settled, too. She is getting married next month; I only hope she leaves me out one day when "he" is in the room!

Well, we are settled in our new home, and what do you think I have found out? A way to get out of my cage. I pushed out my food tin, and pulled the wires about and soon squeezed through. I nibbled one or two chairs, when as luck would have it, in came the master! I flew towards his shoulder in the hope of getting a peck at his ear, but no; I found myself on the floor, and then he got the broom handle and invited me to climb thereon. This I did in a sulky way and was forced into my cage. Soon my mistress came in and scolded me, but we soon made it up and I got a new cage. Now, one day I laid an egg, and every body seemed so astonished and pleased with me, and they laughed because my name was "Billy"! I really think I must reform and be a good bird in a good home!

POINTS ABOUT OUR ASSOCIATES SCHEME.

A Disappointed Glasgow Bird-lover.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. G. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. Cushny, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; MAURICE AMSLER, Esq., M.B., Eton; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., M.A., Baron's Court; E. BAKER, Esq., Cowes; M. THOMSON, Esq., Dunedin, New Zealand.

A Hint to Intending Associates.

Among the hundreds of readers who are applying for registration as Associates of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, there are a few who have not read correctly the simple condition that they must send in six coupons, one signed by the reader applying for registration, and the other five signed by separate friends of the sender. Some readers are forwarding coupons which, although they bear different names, are not actually signed by the different people, but are all filled in by the sender. This is not complying with the condition, which states plainly that the friends of the sender must themselves sign the coupons and fill in their addresses.

Six Coupons, One Badge.

Further, quite a number of readers seem to be under the impression that badges are sent to the five friends of the sender of the six coupons, and that all six are entitled to be added to our list of Associates, and a few even go so far as to write in a strain similar to that which follows, and which is a word for word copy of one of the letters received. "Please make me and my friends members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE." In view of such misconceptions as these, I am compelled to point out that only the actual sender of the six coupons is registered an Associate Member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. If the five friends who sign his coupons wish to become Associates, they must each send along six coupons duly signed, while if they wish to join as ordinary members they must, of course pay the subscription of half-a-crown annually.

Every day I have to write to readers who have misunderstood the plain reading of the coupons, telling them that coupons filled in otherwise than in the way clearly specified are wasted, and I hope the publication of the above note will prevent the continuance of the misunderstandings.

A Misapprehension Corrected.

Some members of the LEAGUE are asking whether, in renewing their subscription, they have to pay half-a-crown, the present annual membership, or one shilling, which was the membership rate at the date of their joining, and some members who joined before the rate of subscription was altered are sending two shillings and sixpence in payment of their renewal, in the mistaken idea that that is the amount which they now have to pay.

Here, again, I thought it had already been made clear that in the case of members who joined when the subscription was one shilling the renewal subscription, of course, remains the same, namely, a shilling. If, however, they drop out of the LEAGUE, and afterwards wish to rejoin, they can only do so as new members, and in that case their subscriptions will be half-a-crown annually. I have had several times to return the balance of eighteenpence to old members who have sent the incorrect amount, and I hope that members will please note that whatever alterations may be made in the terms of subscription, such alterations can only affect those joining after the alterations are made. Members whose original subscription was one shilling pay only one shilling annually.

Glasgow Readers Please Note.

Some weeks ago (in our issue dated June 22) I had the pleasure of announcing that Mr. J. Stevenson, hon. sec. to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE for Glasgow, whose address is 38, McNeil Street, South Side, Glasgow, had made the generous offer that if any Glasgow reader would send him three coupons properly filled up, he would himself add three more to them and send them to me so that the original sender should be registered an Associate Member of the LEAGUE, and receive a badge.

Mr. Stevenson is disappointed to find that only a few of his fellow citizens have taken advantage of the offer, and writes to say that it is still open to the first fifty Glasgow readers who will send him three coupons. He says he is not disheartened, for he knows that Scotch folk are generally "slow but sure," and he hopes yet to be able to say that he has helped at least fifty fellow fanciers to become Associates of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. All that a Glasgow reader has to do is to sign one coupon himself, get two of his friends each to sign another, then send the three to Mr. Stevenson as above, and he will in due course receive his badge.

In the Matter of Overdue Subscriptions

Last week I referred to the fact that a considerable number of renewal subscriptions were overdue, and asked members to kindly send these along to avoid the expense and trouble of applying separately by postcard. I have received several letters from members saying that they do not know the date upon which their subscriptions fall due. This they can gather from their original receipt, or if they have not kept this, and are in doubt as to the date, they may send the renewal amount at any time and they will receive a receipt dated from the time the subscription is, or was, actually due, and covering a year from that date. I am sorry to find that a few members to whom reminder postcards have been sent have not yet complied with the request that they send P.O. in payment. If a member remains for more than a month in default of paying his renewal subscription his name may be taken off our list of members, and if he wishes to rejoin it will cost him half-a-crown annually instead of a shilling.

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

PATRONS.—A donation of not less than Ten Guineas in one amount, or an annual subscription of not less than Two Guineas, shall constitute the donor or subscriber a Patron.

LIFE MEMBERS.—A donation of not less than Five Guineas in one amount shall constitute the donor a Life Member.

VICE PRESIDENTS.—An annual subscription of not less than Half-a-Guinea shall constitute the subscriber a Vice President.

HONORARY LIFE MEMBERS.—The payment to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE of a legacy of £20 and upwards shall constitute the administrator or executor making the payment an Honorary Life Member. A form of bequest will be sent, post free, on application.

Twitterings.

A plague of Sparrows has ruined many acres of wheat in various parts of Warwickshire, it is said.

All prize-money won at Epworth Show has been paid, writes Mr. W. E. Burrows. Anyone overlooked please communicate with the secretary.

A new and unusual inmate has just entered the Church Army's Central London Labour Home for Men, in the shape of a pet Canary, which has been sent to the society by a lady.

We learn from Mr. J. Woodall that the Sheffield O.S. ramble via Grindleford and Baslow, on Sunday next, weather permitting, will be carried out. Meet Midland station, 1.45; tea at Royal Hotel, Baslow; all fanciers and friends invited.

Mr. J. Gilliatt, of Leith, sends a sketch of another removable cage front. The two inside crossbars are left a little longer than usual, then bent downwards (hook shape), and the bent-over portions drop into small brass eyes screwed into the cage sides.

Mr. H. Norman will judge the cage bird section at the Ilford and County F. and F. Society's annual show in November, and Mr. A. E. Enfield the cage birds, and all except poultry, at the young stock show in September.

The Sheffield C.B.S. outing on the 25th to Torksey, writes Mr. J. Woolhouse, assist. sec., will consist of a ramble in the Sturton-by-Stow district. Train leaves Sheffield Victoria Station at 2.20; fare 1s. return. A good number are intending going. All fanciers welcome.

Mr. J. E. Jones (Harlech), being desirous of making their show a success, asks us to inform all fanciers from a distance that he will keep their birds till Monday, and then return, if so desired. A silver cup is given for most prizes, and 5s. special for most entries. He hopes that exhibitors will support the well-known fanciers at Harlech at the annual show on Sept. 13.

It is a n undisputed fact that Ramsden's Pure Peppers are the best and most expensive peppers imported into this country. Reference to the Custom House entries will prove this. They are used by the leading fanciers of the day. Reference to the Crystal Palace Show Catalogue will prove this. Ignore all statements to the contrary and feed only on Ramsden's Pure Peppers.—(Advt.).

Quite a pleasant surprise was awaiting me last Friday morning, writes Mr. J. Bevan, of Ipswich. I thank you very much for the honour of placing my Buff Norwich Cinnamon cock, Pride of Ipswich, on the front page, especially so in company with Mr. J. Wagstaff's Yellow Cinnamon. Also your artist for the splendid drawing of him. I have shown him several times, and he has always been in the first three. Wishing Cage Birds every success.

We have received from Mr. Councelly, of Glasgow, writes Mr. G. Mitchell, Coaltown of Balgonic, Markinch, Fife, a medal for the best British bird at our show, to be held on Nov. 2. We have been successful in securing the following judges:—Mr. Watson (Glasgow), Scotch Fancies; Mr. A. Chalmers (Kirkintilloch), Mr. Bennet (Kelso), Borders; and Mr. Connelly, British.

Special Notice.—R. A. Newley, the well-known bird cage specialist, will be glad to receive additional names and addresses of breeders of various types of Canaries, etc. View, purchase of stock for the coming season. Transactions straightforward and for cash. All communications treated in strict confidence.—Write, giving particulars and prices, to R. A. Newley, 24, Stockwell Green, London, S.W. Genuine.—(Advt.)

I was delighted, writes Mr. A. Hordern, of Shaw, on opening Cage Birds last week to find my buff coppy illustrated in your valuable paper. This bird was 1st at Manchester, 1st Nottingham, 3rd L.C.B.A., 1st Palace, and 1st at L. and L.F.A. Show, Hyde, and winner of Toronto medal for best Lancashire in show. I am glad to be able to say he is now going through the moult very nicely, and I am hoping to be amongst the winners with him again next show season.

Adwick-le-Street C.B.S. has a radius of ten miles, writes the secretary, Mr. G. H. Robinson (21, The Park, Woodlands, Doncaster), and I shall be pleased to enrol fanciers within that radius as members. I hope they will come forward and try to make our inter-club shows a success. Our popular squire and president, Mr. C. Thellusson, has kindly consented to give a cup for competition between the Ardwick, Hemsworth, and Doncaster societies.

Mr. A. Wellings has been engaged to judge Dundalk (Ireland) show, Nov. 13.

Ealing and Hanwell F.S. are holding an evening show on Aug. 21, writes Mr. Rowland Bamber, hon. sec. and treas.

There are nine open classes in the cage bird section of Brasted (Kent) Show, entries for which close on Monday, August 26. Exhibitors should send for schedule. Particulars will be found in the show advertisement and review of schedule in this issue.

Owing to Mr. J. Young taking over the duties of secretary of the City of Glasgow Show, writes Mr. R. Whitton, sec., Broughty Ferry C.B.S., he is unable to fulfil his engagement as judge at our show, but we have arranged with Mr. Chas. Campbell (Glasgow) to take his place in the Norwich section.

Mr. Fairhurst is unable to give us his lecture at our next meeting, owing to pressure of business, but has promised to give us one in November, writes Mr. H. Boothman, sec., Manchester and Northern Counties O.S. We have engaged the following judges for our annual open show on Oct. 25 and 26:—Messrs. Mundell, Battye, Booth, Compston, Houlton, and J. Johnston.

OBITUARY.

Mr. C. Eastop (Newcastle).

Mr. H. E. Cracknell (Newcastle-on-Tyne) writes:—I regret to have to report the death of one of our brother fanciers, in the person of Mr. Charles Eastop, of 15, Spencer Street, Gateshead-on-Tyne, who passed away on Saturday, August 10, at the early age of 38 years, after a long and painful illness. An appeal was made for him in the columns of this journal last week. Mr. Eastop was a keen fancier and well respected in the district. His main hobby was Canary breeding, and he was well known amongst the birdy men in the district. Owing to his long and painful illness, he was compelled to part with his stock for the support of his home, but was always cheerful with the thoughts of one day replacing them and still carrying on the hobby. He leaves a wife and four young children to mourn his loss, and it is for these that we now appeal to brother fanciers for help.

Exhibition at San Francisco.

A mammoth exposition of live stock will be held at San Francisco in 1915. The Panama Pacific International Exposition Company has set aside 175,000 dollars to be used in premiums in the live stock departments, and this amount will be largely augmented by the Pedigree Record Association and Legislatures of some of the States. Mr. D. O. Lively, North Portland, Oregon, is the hon. secretary. A postcard to Mr. Lively from anyone interested will bring full particulars.

Birds as Life-savers.

"It is comforting to know that the bird now required to accompany explorers, and upon which their safety so much depends, has not been overlooked." Mr. J. Gerrard, the Inspector of Mines for the Manchester district, makes this reference in his report on the inspection of mines for the year 1911 respecting the taking down of Canaries and other birds into coal mines to detect the presence of bad gases. He continues: "No longer now need the life of a bird be sacrificed. A light rectangular box having mica sides to enable the bird to be seen, and to permit of oxygen from a small cylinder to be administered to the bird for its revival, may prolong its life after warning has been given."

Readers, Please Copy.

It gave me pleasure to see my perch idea in last week's Cage Birds, and I may say that I have had one or two nice letters from fanciers returning thanks for same, writes Mr. H. Rees (Clapham). I visited Brighton yesterday (Monday), in rather bad weather, raining all day, but I managed to dispose of the parcel of back numbers of Cage Birds that I took down with me. I think that if other fanciers would do this, the effort would do our paper, Cage Birds, a world of good. Two persons to whom I gave a copy were surprised to hear of a paper solely devoted to our feathered pets, and promised to read same each week. (We are much obliged to Mr. Rees for his kindly help, and shall be glad to send specimen copies to readers disposed to do likewise.—Editor.)

Black Redstart's Nest Found.

It is reported on the authority of Canon Rawnsley that the Black Redstart, usually regarded as a winter migrant in Great Britain, has nested in Cumberland. From time to time reports of the nesting of this species have been published, but none has hitherto been regarded as authentic. In the present instance, however, it appears that the bird was found on the nest. Two or three years ago the nesting of the Black Redstart was recorded in "Country Life" by two correspondents, and the descriptions of nests and eggs corresponded with those of the Black Redstart. In neither of these cases, however, does the bird appear to have been seen. The Black Redstart is a regular visitor to all the Midland counties, and as it regularly nests on the Continent in similar latitudes, its avoidance of Great Britain for breeding purposes has long been a mystery.

Wild-Bird Life.

A Persistent Singer.

In some places the heavy showers and storms have somewhat impeded one's movements in the study of wild bird life. The hedgerows and undergrowth are now so dense and thick, that a good shower prevents one from penetrating very far, excepting at the risk of a wetting, and yet these thick hedgerows are just the places one likes to investigate at this time of the year, for, although our spring visitors have mostly finished their domestic affairs, the Finches and Buntings are still busy with their last brood. These last broods are in some years exceptionally late, and the writer has sometimes found young birds still being fed in the early part of September.

Of all our song birds, perhaps the Yellow Bunting is the most persistent of singers. Day after day one may sing from a bare branch by the gateway leading into the fields, and if you stroll there in the afternoon you may sit and listen to him for a full hour. At long intervals he flies into the field, but soon returns to his perch, and drones out his somewhat monotonous song; he sings until the sun sets behind the hills, and then again until dusk. He is almost the longest of all singers, he sits and sits, and has no inclination to move.

Another is perched daily upon a telegraph wire which runs along the railway embankment. His only cessation from singing is when a passing train drives him from his post, and then he frequently only flies into the air, away from the line, going round in a half-circle and returning quickly to his perch. His song commences again before the roar of the train has died away.

Where Yellowhammers abound one does not lack for birdy music. In the spring they sing, in the summer they sing, and in the autumn when the leaves are colouring, and the last sheaves of corn are being carted along the country lanes, still they sing.

All the Buntings are somewhat clumsy in build and gait, and yet each species builds a fairly neat nest. Although the materials of which the exterior is composed do not favour neatness, yet the interior is snugly lined with fine roots and horsehair, and of a beautiful cup shape. The eggs are most interesting, being spotted and streaked in a peculiar manner, as though one had scribbled over them with a reed pen, dipped in purplish-brown ink.

A Trained Starling.

Last year some Starlings built in our chimneys, writes "N.W.N." (Tonbridge), to the "Strand Magazine," and during alterations to the house the workmen disturbed the birds. I took one of them, and after feeding it for some weeks it gradually began to recognise me, and eventually answered to the name of Ticka. I have now taught it to sit down, and on the word of command to hold out a claw for food. It will also pick out the ace or one of the picture cards from a few cards arranged in front of it. My friends are very interested in the bird, and I wondered if any of your readers knew of a similar case of bird training.

A Herb that Saves Birds' Lives:

By J. ANDERSON (Harthill, Lanark.)

A well-known Scottish fancier tells the remarkable powers of a herb, and gives hints on moulting and training young birds.

WHEN feeding my young birds I mince up one egg and mix it with five sponge biscuits. As soon as they are four weeks old I remove the youngsters to the flight cages. I continue the egg-food till they are six weeks old, but I give crushed canary seed also. When they start to eat seed they have a tendency to get very loose in the bowels, and many breeders lose a lot of young birds through that trouble. Well, I may say I have never lost a bird in my twenty-three years' experience, as I have a little knowledge of herbs and there is a herb which helps me.

The herb is called tormentil. I get the root of it and boil it and give the young birds the water to drink, and my young birds are always hard and healthy. I might say that tormentil is worth more than its weight in gold to the breeder of Canaries, for I never knew it fail.

Over Twenty Young Pulled Round.

I went to see an old breeder and exhibitor two years ago, and he had over twenty young birds looking very poorly. He said they were incurable; but I said "No." I went out and pulled up some tormentil, and made it ready. Then I caught the young birds one after the other and gave them a few drops in their beaks. Then I filled up their drinking glasses, and about twelve hours later you would have said that there had never been anything wrong with them! They were tightened up and hopping about as smart as you please. That's what the tormentil did for them. I could not speak too highly of it, for I know through experience there is nothing that can fill its place. It keeps young birds in grand condition, strong and healthy, to start the moult.

To use the tormentil, I simmer for one hour eight ounces of the root in two gills (half-a-pint) of water. When cold I fill the birds' drinking glasses with it every other day until I see that they are quite recovered and in tight condition again. It is safe to give as strong as you think fit, as it will not in any way injure the birds, but the above is the strength I adopt. In case you have a bird very bad, catch it up and administer five drops direct into the beak, and in an hour's time it will be a great deal better. I have never known this remedy fail when the case has been taken in hand within a reasonable time.

When the young are eight weeks old, I start to colour-feed them. I make it very weak and raise its strength by degrees till I tone it up to a deep dark red. The birds I intend for exhibition I put in separate cages, for if you have more than one bird in a cage they will pluck each other, and it is very disheartening to see a bird's plumage spoiled that might have gained honours on the show bench. During the time of moulting I give a little sulphate of iron in the drinking water; it helps to nerve up the birds, and also is a great help to the feather. I also mix some maw seed with the colour-feed, and at the end of the moult I give a little linseed, which also improves the feather.

Benefit from Scalded Milk.

Scalded milk in the drinking glass once a week, with a little corn flour in it, is a great help, especially to any that get "soft." I also mix the colour feed for one day in each week with bread soaked in scalded milk, then squeezed out. This helps to keep them from getting too soft. By the aid of the above-mentioned I can always secure a successful moult.

As to training the young for exhibition, I have very little difficulty, possessing plenty of patience, which helps greatly. I have doors in the ends of the cages that I moult exhibition birds in, and I open this door and place a show cage with the door open close to it, and the bird can run out of its own cage into the show cage. By doing this it gets used to the show cage and very soon tames down. I also put tit-bits in the show cage to encourage it. I handle the cages often; I handle them in turn and work the birds to and fro with a pencil and they very soon get used to the training. I believe in handling birds for exhibition as much as possible, for it makes them gain confidence in you. I have them at this present time as steady as a statue, and the above-mentioned is my method of training.

Tormentil belongs to the cinquefoil group of plants, some members of which bear a close resemblance. A distinguishing characteristic of tormentil is that its flowers have four petals; they are small and bright yellow in colour. It is a small perennial plant, flowers all the summer, and is common on banks and in woods. The roots are large and woody, and are used in medicine, possessing astringent properties. Its name comes from the Latin, tormina, meaning dysentery, for which it was considered a specific. The root can be obtained at all herbalists and most chemists; while the plant is easily cultivated in one's garden.

Birds in a North Yorkshire Garden:

By the Rev. BERNARD WILTON (Middlesborough).

A year's life in delightful surroundings delightfully told by a lover of our British birds.

THERE are some serious disadvantages in living nine miles from a railway station. One realises this when the Dale roads are blocked by a sudden fall of snow. But I am far more than compensated for incidental discomforts by my enjoyment of the undisturbed wild life of the fields and woods which such a situation affords, where neither tripper nor bird catcher ever penetrates. The Dale, twelve miles long, in the centre of which I live, abounds with birds, but I purpose in this article to mention only those which I have seen in my own garden. Thus I hope as I enumerate what seems to me a considerable number of species (about 60) to make the townsman who pities my barbarous isolation, envious of my ornithological opportunities.

To begin with January. We are then passing through our dreariest time. The garden is in the grip of frost, and only the most faithful of our feathered friends remain with us. Under a crab apple tree that grows wild in the tall hedge on the east side of the lawn, the Blackbirds are often hard at work among the small fallen apples that have lain there neglected until these hard times. Blackbirds are dear to me in the abstract, but not in the concrete. I adopt the same attitude towards them as an old man in my father's parish who was always quarrelling with his neighbours. My father told him that as a Christian he ought to love his enemies. "Yes, sir," he replied, "I loves their souls, but I hates their bodies!" Even so, when I sit at my window in the April twilight, and hear the mellow fluting of the Blackbird from my garden hedge; I love the musician's soul that breathes such music through his golden beak, but when, later in the year, I see his all too material body among my ripe fruit, and afterwards at closer quarters view the havoc he has made, I fear that my hatred sometimes takes a deadly, and explosive, form.

The Birds of January.

But to return to the January birds. Under the dining-room windows the Hedge Sparrows are searching among the privet roots for any belated insects that the frost had benumbed before they found a securer hiding place. If we throw out a few crumbs after breakfast, these will be joined by the clamorous House Sparrows that accompany me daily while feeding the fowls. The Great Tit, too, and the Blue Tit, will want but little encouragement to swell the breakfast party. The cock Chaffinch, also, is there in his gay dress. He has consented to a temporary separation from his sober wife, who is away in a neighbouring farmyard with a number of other ladies, and a few gay young sparks, hatched last year, who will be turning their thoughts to matrimony in a few weeks' time.

At feeding time in the fowl yard the Robin is my daily companion. There, too, comes sometimes the Marsh Tit, snatches up a grain of maize, and flies with it to some safe haunt, where he can deal with it at his leisure. I used to wonder what these tiny birds did with such a tough subject, until I had traced one, which had carried away one grain after another, picking out the soft heart from the pointed end, while he held the corn tightly between his feet on a convenient branch. Once, in the same part of the garden, where the hazels fringe the orchard wall, I saw his tiny first cousin, the Coal Tit, conspicuous and distinguishable by the white mark upon his head, flitting among the interlacing nut boughs.

In this same thicket I have first heard the thin silvery note, and then seen the flaming head, of the daintiest and smallest of British birds, the fairy-like Goldcrest. There, too, where the alders grow by the little brook that, happily for me, runs through my garden, the Siskins may alight for a moment in their search for seeds, among the hard cones of the alder.

February Music and March Arrivals.

It is generally on the first fine evening in February that the Thrushes sing again in my garden. They seem to leave us for lower ground in the autumn, but with the first mild afternoon of the year they are back again in their old haunts, a few days after the Missel Thrush has hurled his first wild greeting to spring from one of our oak-tree tops. The little Wren that during the hard weather I had often watched clinging to the leaded panes outside the windows, in his search for torpid flies, is now proving that a small person can make a great deal of noise, and the Starlings "clap their tiny castanets" on the housetop, and in the old oak tree, close by, which contains those convenient nesting holes of which they take annual advantage.

When March comes, the Lapwings which nest in the meadows all round our house, and on the moor above it, will be back in their old haunts. I love to hear the creak of their wings as they dash close by me on the terrace in the spring twilight, and to listen to their weird cry at all hours of the night as I lie in bed. It is in March, too, that the Pheasants from the neighbouring woodlands make their presence painfuly felt. Their winter stock of seeds and berries is exhausted, and the new year's growth has not yet made good the deficiency. In consequence, they systematically dig up my rows of new sown peas in the early morning, undeterred even by the taste of the paraffin in which I have soaked them as a precaution. The Partridges come, too, but are less mischievous. Last year a pair nested beneath the cypress close to the drive.

Spring's Real Awakening.

Then April comes, and the stirring time of bird life begins again. I see the Pied Wagtail once more by one of the big pools in which I have dammed up the waters of my garden brook. The people here say that when these birds appear again it is time the corn was sown. By the same pool I have occasionally seen a Water Ouzel bobbing up and down by the water's edge. But he is only a chance visitor, his real home being the little river that flows a quarter of a mile below my house.

Now, once more the Jackdaws fly overhead, their beaks full of wool to line their stick nests in the crevices of the quarry near by. Now, too, high up, one may hear the mellow call of the Curlew, and see him as he sails with his mate towards the moor above the quarry where he has his summer home. I can hardly claim him as one of my garden birds, however, for though I often watch him from my little kingdom, he never sets his foot there. In this he resembles the Heron, which flaps solemnly over me on his way from one fishing ground to another, or the Skylark which I see as an almost invisible mote of song in the blue sky above my house, but which I have never seen alight within my boundaries.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

SIZE OF BIRDROOM (Hopeful).—Thanks for further particulars about room. Considering its size and aspect, I would not advise you to attempt heating it. I have no doubt whatever the birds will thrive better without it. As you seem to have rather a large amount of glass you should provide yourself with wooden shutters to cover about one-half of it in severe weather during the winter months. These could be made either with hinges at bottom to drop down when not in use, or to slide in grooves, and put up when required.

STIFF HIND TOE (T.G.).—Fill a small saucer with cold water, and dissolve in it a half-teaspoonful of common salt. Fill another saucer with fairly hot water—not hotter than you can comfortably bear your little finger in for some time. Place these side by side on a table. Catch bird, and hold the foot in the hot water for a minute or so, then transfer it at once to the cold water for a similar time. Repeat these movements half a-dozen times, keeping the same order—hot to cold—and finishing up with the cold. Then dry foot and lightly paint the toe with a feather dipped in Friar's Balsam. Repeat the process all through, if necessary, after an interval of a week. Give one perch of a nearly round shape and varying in thickness from a little under to a little above the thickness of an ordinary lead pencil, in addition to one of your usual perches.

CRESTBRED MOULTING (T. Harding).—It is not at all unusual for birds to be more or less dull and listless when moulting, and some specimens are affected more than others. Keep the bird in a cosy temperature as equable as possible, and quite free from draughts. Also touch the ends of the perches, joints of doors, etc., with a good insecticide twice a week if there is any sign of red mites being troublesome. Give a staple diet of plain Canary seed. Add separately just a pinch of summer rape daily. Also give every second day half a teaspoonful of fresh egg-food well sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Omit the oil after the first week, but continue giving the remainder for two or three weeks. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, teazle, black rape, broken groats, and chopped sunflower seeds. Give a half ripe plantain stalk about three time a week. In the drinking water add 20 drops of whisky and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of Chemical Food two days in every three for a fortnight.

TWO COCKS (G.B.).—Possibly you have not taken sufficient precaution to remove the exciting causes which make your treatment for asthma of no avail, and you certainly will not be likely to aid the cure by limiting the bird solely to a diet of sop. Make yourself sure it is not exposed to cold draughts at any period of the day or night, that it is not subject to extreme and rapid fluctuations, nor exposed to foul impure air, such as hanging near the ceiling or near or over a burning light in the evenings. Give a staple diet of a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape, and each day for the next two or three weeks give half a teaspoonful of rusked sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. Give a pinch of the seed mixture advised to "T. Harding" twice a week, and on each of the remaining days a half ripe plantain stalk. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of the following mixture, which any chemist will mix for you, two days in every three until better. Mixture: Two drams each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one dram each of ipecacuanha wine and chlorodyne, and eight grains of iodide of potassium. Give the other cock that coughs occasionally a little sponge cake as mentioned above for one week, the rhubarb mixture for one day, and the other mixture as above for one week. See that causes are removed, as in case of the first-named bird.

BIRDS IN GREENHOUSE (Avis).—(1) Certainly you should remove the birds from the greenhouse, at least until the moult is quite finished. Otherwise, with such great and constant fluctuations you may find the moult become perpetual, or it will be checked and recommence in the spring when the birds are wanted to breed. Take them indoors—an unheated room will do very well so long as the temperature is fairly equable. You may treat them otherwise the same as advised to No. 1 "G.C." (2) Better send a Mule query separately to Mr. Weston before next season. Your failure this year is probably due to keeping an incompatible mixture of birds together—always a big mistake.

CLEAR EGGS AND CROSS-BRED (Crest).—When mating occurs in the cup of the nest, as you describe, clear eggs are more the rule than the exception. You can do nothing else to prevent it besides placing something in the nest or removing nest altogether until the hens are ready to lay. Then if the hens are really in good breeding condition, they will solicit from the perches for some days before they are ready to lay. Your hens ceasing to "call" when something was placed in nest simply shows they were not in a keen condition normally. I would advise you to try them next season with fresh mates, and choose lusty vigorous young cocks in fierce song for them. If they repeat the performance with the first nest next year, discard them at once. The cross-bred youngster would be properly described as a Roller-Crest first cross. It is quite possible for it to grow a crest, but it is not certain to do so.

ALL UNFERTILE (Rellens).—Your experience is quite a common one. The fact of the birds apparently mating and performing all their duties satisfactorily does not by any means ensure the fertility of the eggs. There are so many causes of this trouble that it is barely possible to say what is the cause with any degree of certainty. The cock may not have been in good breeding condition, notwithstanding his attentions to the hen, or he might have been very young, or past his prime. On the other hand, the hen may have been the one at fault. Sometimes these cases are simply due to the hen sitting in the nest when pairing, instead of on the side, or on the perches. At other times no reason at all can be assigned other than a lack of affinity between the individuals concerned. Your best plan is to separate the birds, get them through as good a moult as possible, and then try to keep them in good hard condition ready for next spring, when I would advise you to try both birds with different mates. I note you have five clutches from them this season, which is too many, and may tell against their fertility and usefulness again next season.

AN OLD CREST (Urmston). If the bird is not continually dropping stray feathers there is no reason to think it is troubled with "soft moult." Its bareness on legs and lower parts is far more likely to be due to red mites infesting the cage, or a natural thinning of its plumage on account of its age. Fifteen years is a long lease of life for a Canary, and you cannot now expect it to be quite equal to a youngster. Examine the cage well, and if any mites are found take steps to exterminate them. You may perhaps discover mites on the cloth with which it is covered at night when you remove it in the morning. In that case soak it in boiling water each morning. Keeping cage in a window is also running a tremendous risk of injuring the bird's health. Either remove it elsewhere, or make yourself quite sure that it is not exposed to draughts or extremes of heat and cold. For the rest, treat the bird as advised to "G.C." No. 1, giving a staple diet of three parts canary and one part summer rape, and omitting the extra pinch of rape seed each third day. Instead of the latter offer it a morsel of banana, or one or two mealworms, crushing the heads of the latter.

All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

EGGS DRYING UP (Lover of Birds).—If you had the current issue of CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL you would have seen in my article therein that the cause of this trouble lies with the hen—most likely some weakness in the lower portion of oviduct. The panting of the hen whilst sitting is also suggestive of some slight weakness. You should separate her now and devote your attention to getting her through a good moult and in hard, healthy condition for next season. You could, of course, mate her with the Roller cock next year, but if you want the best possible singers you should get a Roller hen for him, and try to get a stout singing, healthy, 1912 yellow Yorkshire cock for the Yorkshire hen. If the hen is clear, the cock should be ticked or marked. It is quite possible the hen may succeed better next year, but you would do well to be prepared with a robust young hen and substitute her in case the old one fails again with the first nest next season. Or you might run the cock alternately with both hens. Any breeder or dealer could supply you with a hen that would lay fertile eggs. You only want a quite healthy normal hen, beyond that no one can guarantee future fertility. Watch our advertisement columns for a few weeks.

GOING LIGHT (S. Thomson). The birds are undoubtedly troubled with the complaint called "going light," or rather, one of them, as this vague description is applied to more than one complaint. Put on a staple diet of plain canary only. Every morning give a little bread soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar, allowing a piece about the size of a hazel nut to each bird. At mid-day give half a teaspoonful of soaked or scalded rape per bird, and in the evening before roost give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts rape, hemp, millet, teazle, and broken groats, with a sprinkling of maw. Each time when giving these extras remove what is left, if any, from the previous supply. Keep cages and perches scrupulously clean, and the cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. If birds are very listless add 30 drops of brandy to the water on the alternate days for the first week when giving the gentian mixture. As regards your friend's assertion that he has repeatedly written for advice, and got no reply, will you ask him to kindly send definite particulars of any query which has not been answered. As a matter of fact, I am afraid he is mistaken or has overlooked reply. I have received a great number of queries in the course of time from your town, all in the same handwriting as your letter, and every query, without exception, has been replied to, some of them postally, in which cases, at least, there is no question of reply being overlooked.

VARIOUS (G. C.).—(1) Keep the green cock rather on the warm side until the moult is quite finished, and see that the cage is quite out of the way of cold draughts or extreme and rapid fluctuations of temperature, and that it is free from red mites. In addition to the staple seed mixture, give a morsel of bread the size of a hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with maw seed, every third day. On the intervening days give an extra pinch of equal parts rape, inga, teazle, and gold of pleasure one day, and a little green food the next. Add 20 drops of whisky, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence to the water for two days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and aromatic sulphuric acid three times a week for a fortnight. (2) The splashed bird's cage is probably infested with red mites. Look well into this, and if any are found thoroughly overhaul cage. Mix a few drops of essence of quassia in the bathing water twice a week for a time. If moulting, treat it as above for a month. (3) As mixtures usually go, the sample you send is a very good one, the bulk of it consisting of very fine seed. But as a regular staple diet I prefer a plainer mixture.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

COLOURS OF SHOW CAGES (J.W.M.).—Personally, I think a rich deep blue (turquoise blue, for example) very hard to equal as a colour for the wires and interior of the show cage for all kinds of Mules. Certainly I know nothing that sets off a light Mule to better advantage. For dark Mules, some exhibitors prefer light tones of different colours (blue chiefly), but others go in for dark greens—the difference in opinion is very marked. There are, of course, no recognised "standard" colours for the show cages. Some men even have a fondness for pink!

YOUNG MULES (Alton).—Young Mules get their "proper colouring" (i.e., adult plumage, except tail and flight feathers) in the first moult, but improve very much in colour at the second moult. The yellow showing on the breasts of your birds is the earliest indication of this. Give the following stock mixture: Canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, summer rape and linseed 1 part each. Reduce the linseed when the moult is over. For variety, give each bird now and again a dessert-spoonful of cracked sunflower seed, a teaspoonful of cracked hemp, the same of a good wild seed mixture, ditto Finch mixture, and a little coarse oatmeal (not all at once, of course, but separately). For green food, ring the changes on chickweed and shepherd's purse, with occasionally groundsel tops; thistle and hard-heads, plantain stalks, and other "wild foods" are also excellent.

PRESERVING BERRIES (J.H.W.).—Do you mean by "preserving" them, treating the berries in same manner as bottled fruits, or making jam of them? If so, I have no doubt they could be so preserved (that is, in syrup); but I can't give you instructions beyond those used by house-wives generally, and mentioned in cookery books. They will, I know, keep for a long time if packed amongst sawdust (like imported grapes), and stored in a cool place; or they can be buried in sand. Most berries will keep for a long period if gathered on the branch, the stem of the latter being immersed in a bottle of water. I have personally used all the three last-mentioned methods with success with privet-berries, black berries, etc. I generally tinted the water with a few drops of Condy's Fluid, this undoubtedly helping to keep them fresh for a longer period than when same is not used. I stored them in a cool, dry cellar, changing the water (when I used it) as necessary.

COLDFINCH FAT AND SOFT IN CONDITION (W.H.W.).—I presume it is the young bird? I expect you have been feeding him very generously on rich seeds, with a view to keeping him in high show condition, and that his liver has been thrown out of working order. After a course of treatment, your best plan would be to give him a few weeks in a good-sized outdoor aviary. Reduce his staple diet to equal parts canary and teazle, with a pinch of summer rape. Let him have a very small quantity of other seeds (just a "feed") daily; crushed sunflower, hemp, and niger, not all on the same day, of course. You could also with advantage use the special wild-seed mixture I frequently recommend in this column; or Thistle and hard heads. Give on alternate days for a week half-a-teaspoonful of syrup of buckthorn in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water; but don't allow the excreta to become too loose and watery; just keep the bowels freely moving. Soak a dessertspoonful of teazle seed in hot water; let it stand over-night; then drain, dab dry in a cloth, and give the bird to eat. On the days you do not give the buckthorn, let the bird have to drink the water in which the teazle has been soaked. Keep on with the soaked teazle for some time. I think you will soon see an improvement in the bird. I hope so, seeing that he has a good winning record.

THE LINNET'S DRESS (John Hind).—It is curious how many people get in a knot over the seasonal changes of plumage of the Linnet. Briefly, a fully adult cock Linnet in spring and summer dress has a red crown and red breast (more or less expansive, according to age). The hen Linnet has at no time a red breast and head. After the moult and during autumn and early winter, both cock and hen are plain brown, but the hen is invariably a greyish-brown tone, whereas the cock is a deep nutty brown tone, especially on the shoulders. With regard to the sex, if you get a bird which is a warm, nutty brown on the back and the wing-butts, and which has the white on the outer edge of the flight feathers extending back up to the quill (shaft), you can depend on it being a cock. The hen seldom has more than the edge of the web of the flight feathers white, there being a dark line between there and the quill—thus she looks to have less white in her wing than the male; further, she is seldom other than greyish-brown on the back. If you just ruffle the breast feathers with the tip of the finger, a tinge of rose colour can often be seen which is not otherwise visible; that is a sure sign of a cock (providing, of course, it is not artificial colour, owing its presence to human agency). In the adult cock, too, at all times the tips of the breast feathers have a dark edging, giving what is known as a "mooned" appearance (the dark edging being, of course, necessarily crescent-shaped). In the hen the dark colour runs down alongside the quills of the breast feathers, giving her a heavily streaked (pencilled) appearance. That there are odd instances, however, of genuine cocks with "henny markings" on the breast cannot be questioned, for I have myself bred Mules from such a one; but these, of course, carry all the other distinguishing marks of the male sex.

COLOUR-FEEDING A YELLOWHAMMER (Frankie).—It can easily be done by grinding up canary-seed and groats (or coarse oatmeal), and mixing the tasteless pepper with this. Only a very little of the colouring agent should be added at first, gradually increasing it. The process is made even more simple, however, if the bird has been used to eating a little soft-food (which should be a high-class insectile mixture). Simply mix the colour-food with this, one teaspoonful in about eight; commence with a pinch only, and gradually work up to this strength. Use tasteless sweet pepper, without added oil (which I have often fancied to turn Britishers against it), adding a little finely-ground linseed to it, say, half a teaspoonful, made fresh every day, towards the end of the moult. You can mix enough of the stock food (insectivorous food and pepper) to last a week, letting it stand a week before using, as then the colour-food gets well absorbed by the other ingredients. Damp it for use with a spot or two of water; don't make it "pasty," only crumbly moist. A little whole canary-seed can be mixed in, if you like; but see the bird does not waste the food searching for it. Or add it crushed, with the groats. A Yellowhammer will thrive well on this diet through the moult, with a fair supply of live insect food in addition. Continue the colour-food for at least a week after the moult is over, which will be when feathers cease to be dropped, and when you can discern no quill feathers remaining about the head. Give a feed twice a week through the show-season.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

WHAT PARROTS (Perplexed).—(1) I think this must be a Dufresne's Amazon, but I will keep your query by me, and if necessary will revise my reply in next issue. (2) Undoubtedly a Festive Amazon; the dark beak is a sign of youth—it will get lighter, and the forehead more red as the bird grows older. Both species are uncommon, and extremely handsome birds.

MILLET SPRAYS AND BUDGERIGARS (Walliton).—Any of the large seed merchants advertising in our columns would send you millet sprays, and the same applies to procuring Budgerigars. Write the dealers and others appearing in our Foreign Bird advertisement columns. Send to "C.B." Manager for "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," also the Nutshell "Budgerigars"—nipence will secure you both post free. If the above does not meet your need, send me a stamped addressed envelope per the Editor, and I will try and assist you further.

BUDGERIGARS (Bird Lover).—(1) It would accommodate sixty, but I consider six breeding pairs would be ample, as with their young you should soon have a good troop. You could keep with Budgerigars pairs of Cockatiels, Madagascar, and Bluewing Lovebirds. (2) None, as birches, etc., of all kinds are soon pulled to pieces. Put in some good sized branches of fruit trees, consisting of a good stout main stem, with branches and twigs of varying thickness. (3) Put nests everywhere and leave the birds to choose. (4) Give canary and white millet in equal parts, and the others also in equal parts, but supply at least double the quantity of the former to what you do of the latter.

BREEDING MEALWORMS (A.J.R.).—This query has been passed to me to answer. Have you closely examined the contents of the boxes; possibly many of the worms are in the chrysalis stage, and will shortly reach the beetle stage; if this is not the case, first minutely examine the contents of the box, and if there are no mites, then add some more beetles and leave them alone for a time. You must remember that while in the minute stage, like thin twine, they can squeeze through a very small hole indeed; as soon as the worms are large enough to be picked up conveniently, they are better removed from the breeding box, but the box to which they are to be removed should with its contents (food, etc.) stand in the same temperature for 24 hours before the young beetles are placed in it.

PARROT NOT PERCHING (J.G.D.). Reinstate the thick perch at bottom of cage, but leave the thinner one above it, and for the present remove the grit from above cage tray. The difficulty is, you say, it will not let you handle it. There is evidently some foot trouble that would be relieved by fomenting with hot water, and painting with whisky. Keep the cage tray covered with sawdust, and add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed mixture, also add a little cuttlebone crushed to the size of millet seed, as it appears to be afraid of things hanging or lying in cage. For the lower perch get a piece of a branch of a fruit tree about 1½ inches in diameter, and another about 1 inch thick for the upper one; leave the bark on both perches. Keep the bowels moving by putting a teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in its water once a week, and on other days half a teaspoonful of hypo-phosphates in the water. In addition to the diet you name, supply ripe fruit daily, any kind it will eat; it can also have pieces of plain biscuit and a portion of lettuce leaf. I should also spray it with a dilute quassia solution once a week, choosing a warm sunny day and keeping out of draught till dry. It should get over its fright as soon as it becomes accustomed to you all. Do not reinstate grid till the bird is perching freely.

BLUE SUGAR BIRD (Sugar Birds).—Yes, your bird is the Yellow-winged Sugarbird, a beautiful little species. Prepare the milk sop so: Condensed milk one teaspoonful, ditto crumbled sponge cake, saltspoonful each Mellin's food and honey, boiling water to fill an ordinary small round cage glass; this will suffice for one day's supply. I find my birds take fully ripe banana fairly freely. I should not stint food; give it a roomy cage, with a twiggy branch for perch, and the exercise it will then take will keep it fit. Supply split grapes, and if it cares for an occasional mealworm (small) supply one daily. It should do well, as they are not at all difficult to keep.

SEXING COCKATEELS, ETC. (F.W.C.).—(1) The cock is easily distinguished by his bright primrose-yellow cheeks, bright brick-red ear patches, and black underside of tail. The hen has grey cheeks, slightly tinged with yellow, dull red ear patches, and the underside of her tail is barred black, white and yellow. Yours may be a young male coming into colour, as the nestling plumage is very similar to that of the adult hen. (2) I am not clear as to this query. You call it bird-room, but surely the space 11ft. by 8ft. is not a room. I take it this is a flight, if so, your shelter accommodation is fully taxed. If the whole is an enclosed room, then the large section of your ground plan is insufficiently lighted. If it is a room, you could add to your present stock pairs each of Zebra and Ribbon Finches, Java Sparrows, Ruficauda, and Longtail Grass Finches, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, and Gold-breasted Waxbills. (3) Not often; they mostly do not breed till they are two years old. I think you had better repeat query No. 2 with fuller details of the room or aviary, and I can then be more definite.

IN POOR PLUMAGE (F. Moore).—(1) It is an African Grey Parrot, and you should send for our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free, from our Manager. It will give you the fullest details as to dieting your bird. Use a "mist" sprayer, and spray it with a dilute solution of quassia twice a week for a month, avoiding cold dull days, and keep it strictly out of draught till dry. Give it once a week one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in its drinking water, and on other days put half a tea-should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, spoonful of byno-phosphates in the drinking water; you must not use a metal drinker while giving drugs. In addition to what you are giving, supply daily ripe fruit, any kind it will take, shelled nuts, pieces of plain biscuit, also supply regularly cuttlebone, grit, and a little green food, lettuce, etc. As soon as you get the Nutshell booklet, compound your seed mixture on the lines given therein. If your convenience permits you to let the bird out for a little daily, to go about the room as it pleases, and to return of its own will to the cage, it will be very beneficial, and certainly help towards recovery. Report progress in about a month.

AVIARY QUERIES, ETC. (C.H.S.).—(1) Your aviary should give the birds ample protection as it is, but it will be a wise precaution to put a glass sash (I should not make this permanent) over top of open flight, and cover up the end of same with felt; it would also be well to cover up side of covered flight, between the shelter and entrance door. Damp is the chief enemy, and by the above means you should circumvent it. (2) Many species do this if disturbed at all, and probably in your case cats are the disturbing influence. (3) Yes, the Red-crested and the Red-head (Pope) are quit distinct, the former has a crest, the latter has none, and the upper parts of the Pope are darker and purer in colour and more variegated than the Red-crested. (4) Send me a stamped addressed envelope per the Editor, and state the ground you want covered, and I will send you brief descriptions of the most interesting and highly coloured species. (5) No, I should not separate them; let them take their own "sweet will"; but there is ample time for another brood yet.

YOUNG BLUEFRONT (Bird Lover).—For one day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, follow this for four days with five drops of Friar's Balsam to each ounce of water, then repeat the Magnesia, afterwards putting the bird on to a course of byno-phosphates, half teaspoonful to two tablespoonfuls (one ounce) of water. All the above take the place of the drinking water for the time being, and you must not use a metal drinker while giving the above. Stale crusts and pieces of stale bread and plain biscuits are quite in order, and can be given freely. Also supply nuts (Barcelona, pea and walnut), shelled nuts are best. Induce it to take some fruit, test its taste by offering various kinds. Keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and add a pinch of grit to the daily supply of seed. Let the bird have light and air, but keep strictly out of draught. Cover it up at night, all round the sides of cage, but the great part of top should be left open for ventilation. Prepare the following mixture: One quart each canary and white millet seed, one pint each crushed oats, and paddy rice; half pint each crushed maize, wheat, dari, hemp, and sunflower seeds; one gill chillies—well mix and keep constant supply in cage.

SEXING BLACK-CHEEKED LOVEBIRDS, ETC. (L. D. Pickard).—(1) It is almost impossible to sex an odd bird; one long accustomed to the species might make a shrewd guess from its demeanour. From a crowd of adults a pair should be picked out by carefully noting the shape of head and beak, choosing one with a flattish crown, and the other with it more rounded also noting the shape of their beaks, particularly the length of the hooked tip. Your best plan is to buy a guaranteed pair, and get the vendor to take your bird as part exchange. (2) I am assuming you have this bird in a cage; give it a liberal quantity of seeding grass to pick over daily, and you can include other weeds, chickweed, etc., but the grass should predominate. A small leaf of fresh lettuce may also be given. Keep it where it will get light and air without draught. Keep its bowels moving freely (not watery-loose) by an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia, half teaspoonful to one ounce of water; give this as required, the bird's condition to regulate the frequency of the doses. On other days put the same quantity of byno-phosphates in the water, continuing this treatment till the bird is fit again. You must not use a metal drinker while giving the drugs. Supply millet sprays liberally, also paddy rice, canary seed, and white millet.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

W. Moore.—Septic fever. It is strange though that only the Crests become affected. As the other birds at present seem healthy, I should advise you to at once isolate them, as otherwise they will be certain to take the disease.

Avis.—I see no reason why the mate should not survive. The hen died of septic peritonitis, resulting from infection of the oviduct.

F. Fulcher.—Septic pneumonia. The infection occurred by way of the oviduct, which contained a quantity of septic egg contents.

GENERAL.

Answered by The Editor.

H. Wilkinson; W. Williams.—We have given illustrations several times of contrivances similar to that of which you send a sketch.

J. F. Cowl.—In Cornwall the following birds are protected all the year round:—Cirl, Reed, and Snow Buntings, Goldcrest, Goldfinch, Lesser Redpoll, Hawfinch, Hoopoe, Chough, Kingfisher, Bearded Tit, Wren, and Woodpecker. In the case of the Skylark, Nightingale, and Nuthatch, the period of protection is extended to between the 31st of January and the 1st day of September. Other birds are protected over the usual period, viz., March 1st to Aug. 1st. In this reply, please note, we have selected for mention only birds which are of interest to bird-keepers.

LOCHGELLY BIRD-LOVERS' SPLENDID DAY.

The members of the Lochgelly C.B.S. held their first annual ramble on July 16, through Raith Estate, by the kind permission of the Hon. R. Munro Ferguson, M.P. At Shawsmill we were met by one of the keepers, who had been kindly detailed off to guide us. We struck along an old cart road leading to the farm of Lambswell, then we turned to the left, past an old ruin where the Starlings were busy. In a hollow at the side of the woods the camera man tried his wiles and arts on us to make us look our best. Then the "top of the town boys" had to get theirs taken in their own way of posing, much to the amusement of the others. Skirting alongside some beautiful woods, J. Petrie was the first to get a find—a Thrush's nest with three young and one egg. A. Muir found a Blackbird's shortly after with one egg and two young. A lot of empty nests were located, the majority bearing signs of having contained broods. After about a mile we came to a drive, the left hand side of which presented a beautiful appearance, a high sloped bank covered with bracken, foxgloves, and other wild flowers. At Croupie Craigs, where we halted to admire the falls, surrounded by rocks, covered with ivy and ferns, I noticed a young Yellow Wagtail flying from bank to bank. A little further on we came to a nice spring of crystal clear water, known as the "Wishing Well," and nearly all of us had a refreshing draught from it. How many wished that they might have a champion or two for the coming show season I am not going to tell. A little further along we came to the top of the lake, and had a lovely view of a stretch of water of about three-quarters of a mile long and a quarter of a mile broad, with various kinds of reeds and willows round the edges, the whole encircled with lovely trees, all looking at their best. We saw a pair of Bullfinches and some Whitethroats, Wrens, Coots, Waterhens, and various Ducks with young with many Swallows, Swifts, and Martins flying overhead. A pair of Teal Ducks with five young were on the curling pond. After a short rest we went along to Kirkealdy, where, at Morrison's, we had tea and did ample justice to the splendid fare provided. We arrived home about nine, after having spent a splendid day. All are agreed that we will have it earlier next year.—W. Grewar, secretary.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of Cage Birds have written to say that they would like to join Cage Birds' League, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the League, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of Cage Birds' League, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the League. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS! USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same.

Training a Kitten Not to Touch Birds.

Sir,—Can any reader kindly tell me how a kitten may be trained not to go near birds in cages? She must be kept in same room to keep down mice which get into the cages.

Bird and Cat Lover.

To Fanciers in Bargoed.

Sir,—The next meeting of the Bargoed and Dist. C.B.S. will be held at the McDonnell Hotel on Wednesday, Aug. 21, at 7 p.m., when we hope to meet all fanciers who have promised to join us, and any others who are interested in the cage bird hobby. Fanciers have not yet attended the meetings as we should like, although they say they should like to see a society formed here. There is a good opportunity for them now. Trusting they will turn up at our next meeting to enable us to get to real business.

E. J. Chisholm.

Uddingston's Newly-formed Cage Bird Society.

Sir,—At the Reading Rooms, Uddingston, on August 8, a large extraordinary general meeting was held, and it was unanimously agreed that we separate entirely from the poultry, pigeon, and cat sections, and call our society the Uddingston and District Cage Bird Society. We now ask all fanciers to send their entries to us on November 23 (the date of our open show) with confidence that they will be well looked after by experienced men. I may also state that we will have fifty-four open classes, comprising five Scotch Fancy, four Yorkshires, eight Borders, thirteen Norwich, and twenty-four British and foreign.

Jas. Cosgrove, Secretary.

Greenfood Changes the Luck.

Sir,—I followed the kind advice given me in Cage Birds when my young Canaries died, with the result that in this last round I have raised seventeen birds out of twenty, which cannot be complained about. All my trouble was that I was not giving sufficient green food—it seemed extra hard on the birds, for it is very easy to get all kinds here, as we are quite in the country, and have a large garden. The birds very much appreciated your advice, except they do not like groundsel. Only in one nest did I see anything of my old trouble—but not very much— and I raised all the birds. I wanted to thank you for the trouble you took, but waited until I could give you the full result. I am most grateful for the help you gave me, and next year I hope to get the full benefit.

The Novice Question at the Shows.

Sir,—In answer to the letter from Mr. Long in your issue of August 10, I must say that I was disappointed that no fresh points had been brought out. The discussion seems to be developing into a useless controversy. Mr. Long says "perhaps I am satisfied with the Norwich classes," and hints that the Yorkshire men are not satisfied with the classification provided for them. The point is, if the Yorkshire men are not satisfied they are always in a position to alter the conditions by attending the meetings. I cannot quite follow the drift of Mr. Long's remarks. He seems to hint that there should be more prize money for novices. Can he tell us how to get more than twenty shillings out of a sovereign? No society can pay out in prize money more than the amount of members' subscriptions added to the entry fee for the show, less the expenses attached to the running of a show—at least, not without some hope of eventually finding itself in "queer street." Or perhaps he means that the novices are not treated as well in this respect as the amateurs and open members. By the way, to which grade does Mr. Long refer when he mentions "professionals"? I fancy he can find professions in every grade. I think it would take a very clever man to prove that the amateurs in Ardwick Society are treated better in the matter of prizes than the novices. Mr. Long says why not have three grades—novice, amateur, and professional (by which he probably means open or champion) in Ardwick Society? Perhaps he has never heard of the old recipe for jugged hare. It begins, "First catch your hare." I suggest that Ardwick Society first catches its champion or open members. If Mr. Long would try to get down to facts instead of generalising so much, we might be able to come to some point where we have views in common. In conclusion, let me say if Mr. Long is referring to the shows in general, let him come out with a scheme to improve the lot of the novice. I for one will back him up to the best of my ability. If he is out to cause friction inside the Ardwick Society, the proper place is at the meetings of the society (why wash dirty linen in public?). But if the idea is to work up trouble between the two societies he mentions in his letter, then I am not prepared to take any part in it whatever.

E. H. Fulcher.

Sir,—I would like to have a word in reply to Mr. A. E. Long as to why shows do not pay. It is lack of support in entries (he was one of the non-supporters). It is not so easy to get out of the novices as he says. The rule says three firsts with three competitors. It puzzles me to know what he really does want. "More classes in the novice section"—I think there are quite enough classes provided to secure competition. What is the use of showing if you are going to have more classes and no competition? I think the society alluded to caters very well for the novices—a special value 30s., to say nothing of others at the first feather show. This proves every consideration is given this section of the Fancy. As a committee man, I claim we have a fair average attendance of novices, and they are quite satisfied; if they were not, they would soon voice their feelings on the matter. If they are, then why not Mr. Long? Is he trying to "get at" some particular member? If he is, why not come to the meetings and speak out? I am glad "Ardwick Novice" reminds him that it is the members who provide these classes, not the secretary. Re the tale he tells about the professional in Yorkshire wanting to join in December and his subscription to cover the next year, I have made inquiries from the secretary, and he informs me there is no truth in the statement. The objection was that the proposer wanted to run him though in one meeting, to be eligible to show; this was against the rules, and was why the objection was laid. I challenge Mr. Long to prove otherwise. Harmony prevails at the meetings, and why should one be absolutely different outside? would like to remind Mr. Long to be fair, show the white light, couple up, and be one of the satisfied.

A Committee Man.

Affairs of the Yorkshire and C.B.S. of Ireland.

Sir,—Seeing a notice that Mr. Holley has resigned the hon. secretaryship of the above society, might I ask who fills the position of ring steward. Seeing that Mr. Lattimore is appointed hon. secretary, also, who is the present hon. treasurer? Assuming Mr. Hawkins to be president, it would be information for many to know who is vice-president and also who is to be responsible for the arrangements of the forthcoming show, seeing that Messrs. Stewart and Holley have severed their connection with the society. Perhaps Mr. Busse and Mr. Gillen, as old fanciers and committeemen of the above society, could give the information asked for?

Railway Company Cast in Damages.

Goldfinch dies owing to delay en route from show: Owner recovers its value and costs.

Sir,—I enclose a report of my case against the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway re delay of a bird on the return journey from Blackburn Show. The lawyer for the defence contended that Rule 7 on the consignment note signed with North Stafford Railway Company at Ashbourne, on the outward journey, covered the return journey too. As an ordinary parcel waybill was used at the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway station on the return journey, there was no signed contract with that railway. The judge found that delay occurred on the return journey, and, there being no signed contract with the L. and Y. Railway, he said they could not shield themselves behind that made by the N.S. Railway. It will be useful for all fanciers to notice the above point, on which the judge's decision hinged. I conducted the case myself, and I owe no thanks to the secretary of Blackburn Show, to whom I wrote asking for a few particulars that I thought might help me in the case, for he did not take the trouble to reply. Will you please publish this letter along with the account of the case?

J. M. Williams.

REPORT OF THE CASE.

John M. Williams, chemist, Ashbourne, sued the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company for the sum of £2 2s., the value of a prize Goldfinch, which plaintiff alleged died through the negligence of the defendant company.

Mr. H. E. Daniel (Manchester) represented the company, who had paid 5s. into court, with proportionate costs.

Plaintiff stated that he was an exhibitor of cage birds, and on December 14 he dispatched a Goldfinch from Ashbourne station to Blackburn show. The delay complained of occurred on the return journey from Blackburn, in consequence of which the bird died.

For the defence Mr. Daniel submitted the consignment note of the North Staffordshire company, signed by "C. Burns," plaintiff's agent, on which the conditions were printed. Amongst these was the clause that the company were not common carriers of live stock, respecting which there were two rates, and also a clause to the effect that in the case of loss or damage the company would not be liable beyond the sum of 5s., except it was proved conclusively to be due to the negligence of the company.

Mr. Williams pointed out that the consignment note referred to the North Staffordshire Railway Company, but he was claiming from the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, who were the contracting carriers on the return journey.—Mr. Daniel said that the conditions also applied to the return journey.

Mr. Williams said the bird was on the return journey for 26 hours. It was not sent back by the same route as it went; nor by the route it was ordered to be sent. It was conveyed to Stockport, where it remained from Saturday evening till Sunday afternoon, and in consequence of this delay the bird died.

His Honour held that the company had admitted liability through their payment into court, and they could not limit it to 5s. or defend it by depending on a contract entered into by the North Staffordshire Railway Company, who were not their agents.—Judgment was given for the plaintiff for the full amount claimed with costs.—"Ashbourne Telegraph."

Are the Members of the Barnsley and District C.B.S. "Gone Dead"?

Sir,—I have been instructed by our worthy chairman, Mr. W. Rapson, to ask through Cage Birds if the members of the Barnsley and Dist. C.B.S. are all "gone dead," as we have been unable to have a meeting for two months owing to members not attending at headquarters. Like our worthy chairman, I think it is time something was done. I sincerely hope this will catch the eyes of our members and remind them that it is too bad on their part to keep the officials waiting on meeting nights from seven to nine o'clock, only to have to go home disappointed, which is not very encouraging to us or to our host, Mr. Waite, who is always ready to help the society. There is always a comfortable room for us to hold our meetings in private, and I think it is a great pity that we do not appreciate this gentleman's kindness more by attending the meetings. I appeal to all the members to attend the next meeting on Saturday, September 7, at 7.30 p.m., when something definite will have to be arrived at.

How I Rear Linnets by Hand.

Sir,—The Linnet is one of our sweetest singers, and the song is always beautifully varied. The young taken from the nest just as the feathers peep through their sheaths are easily reared. After being removed they must be put in a warm, roomy artificial nest, and covered with a bit of cotton wadding, and fed every two hours from sunrise till evening, on moistened white bread mixed with a little hard-boiled egg and well soaked rape seed. They will soon get their feathers and be able to hop about and feed themselves. Then their food, to keep them in health, must be varied. Canary, teazle, and rape seed must always be within their reach, but hemp seed is too fattening unless they are permitted to fly about the room. A little green food, such as chickweed, shepherd's purse, groundsel, etc., should also be given. Three things Linnets ought always to have in their cages: a bit of chalk, which instinct will teach them to peck at if diarrhœa comes on, a little box of sand, and a water bath to clean themselves in, the two last-named articles being frequently changed. The males have more brown on their backs than the females, and on stretching out the wings the white on several feathers extends back right up to the quills—proof that the bird is a male. Linnets ought not to be confined in close, hot, stuffy rooms, else they are liable to asthma.

Ghostly Music Piped by a Thrush.

A "Creepy" Story.

Sir,—The imitative powers of a Song Thrush are both interesting and curious, judging by the following story, told to the writer of an old work by a friend at Manchester on whose veracity he says he can rely. There lived on the outskirts of the city a thriving woodchopper. He had a capital business, employed several hands, and his workshop adjoined his dwelling house. He was a particularly cheerful man, and from morning till night the din made by his chopper and the choppers of his men was rivalled by his incessant singing and whistling. One day, in spite of his thriving business and his cheerfulness, the woodchopper committed suicide. To the surprise and dismay of his wife and his workmen, he was found hanging to a beam. The woodchopper's wife was a woman of business, therefore, after having the husband's body removed to the house and allowing the workpeople an hour or two to discuss the calamity, she set them to work again. It was a sultry summer afternoon, and what with the heat and the sight of the ugly beam and the thought as to what had so shortly before been hanging there, the choppers rose and fell very languidly indeed, and the men and boys spoke to each other in whispers. Suddenly every mouth was agape with terror, for pealing through the place was heard the familiar tune, "William at the garden gate," in the unmistakable whistle of the dead woodchopper. The men and boys rushed from the place and went and told the widow. They returned all together, and, just putting their heads inside the door, listened. With the exception of blocks and choppers and billets the shed was empty. Still from invisible lips issued "William at the garden gate," clear, shrill, unearthly. Neither for love nor money would man or boy venture within the shed to split another billet. The place was haunted. Sometimes the most profound silence would reign in the shed for hours, and then would come a sudden burst of ghostly whistling, scaring away listeners from chinks and keyholes. The widow advertised the business, but no man was found bold enough to buy it. So passed on three months, and the poor woman was fairly on the road to ruin. One day, however, while seated at her window, she saw a bird fly from a neighbouring copse, alight on the roof of the deserted shed, and immediately pipe up the now dreaded tune. Thus the mystery was cleared up. It was a Thrush who, attracted by the woodchopper's music, has listened until he had learnt it, and, proud of the accomplishment, returned to the same spot every day to publish his scholarship.

Breeding and Training Roller Canaries.

The writer rears 106 young and describes the methods which have brought him success.

Sir,—I thought your readers might be interested to know that from sixteen hens and eight cocks I have reared 106 young, all living and on hard seed. My method is as follows:—Two hens to one cock, run in sixteen double breeding cages, with partitions removed. I use earthenware nest pans, brown linings and charpie. A clean nest is given when the young are twelve days old. I run a cock with one hen till she has laid three eggs, taking away each egg as laid, and substituting a dummy, replacing eggs the evening the third egg is laid. I then take the cock back to singing room, till the young are three weeks old, then return till the third egg is laid again, allowing each hen to have three nests. When the young are four weeks old they are taken to the singing room and run in three large flights, till all the cocks are picked out. All young hens are returned back to breeding room and run in a very large flight, till required for breeding. For training I have a room fitted up with sixty-six shutter cages. I train with Queck organ and best schoolmasters. The young are kept in open cages for the first few weeks, then I begin to draw down the blinds a few hours each day. When I hear the youngsters rolling nicely I close the cage shutters, but allow the shutters to remain open on very dark days. My feeding is as follows: When breeding I use best Roller rape and canary mixed, crushed hemp and groats ad lib. and egg food three times a day; one egg to a round of plain loaf, one inch thick, passed through egg mill. All young ones get this diet, with rape steeped in cold water till well on hard seed; with green food every day (lettuce, watercress, young rape). My cocks after moult have all rape as staple food, egg food and mixed seed alternately every second day. The mixed seed is maw, gold of pleasure, white millet, niger, hemp, teasel, groats, winter rape, and canary.

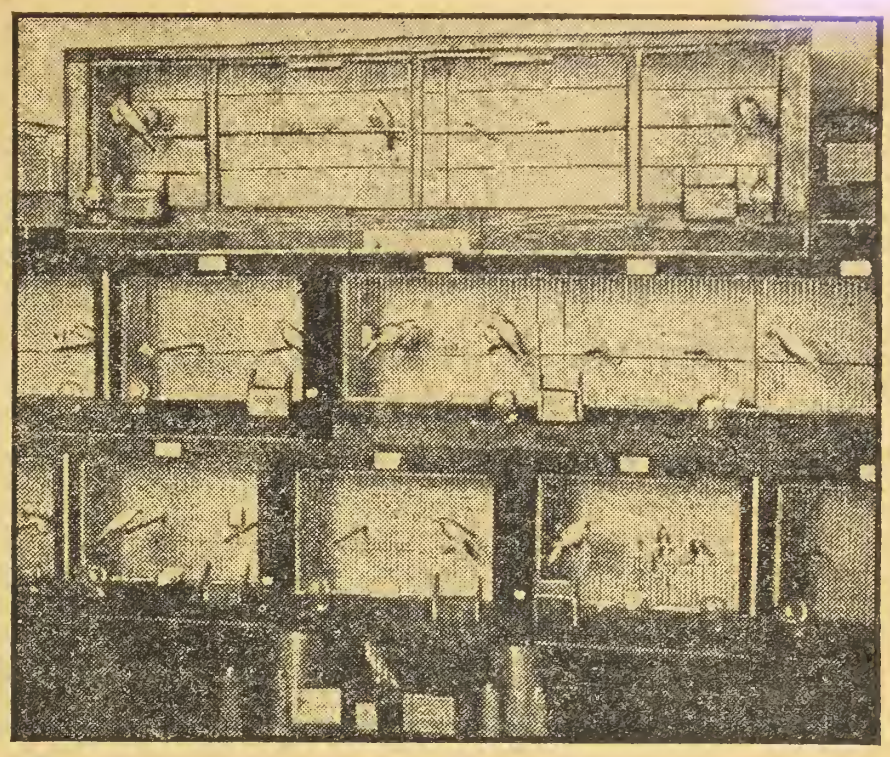
My First Experience of Mule Breeding.

Some "Ups," and a Few "Downs."

Sir,—A few years ago I read an article in Cage Birds on Mule Breeding, which fired my enthusiasm. The following autumn I bought two Goldics—one a proved Muler, the other a splendid songster, but very wild. In February I noticed the latter was feeding a young buff hen of my own breeding (I had him in a flight with several hens), so towards the end of April I mated them up in an ordinary 20in. breeding cage. A double one would have been much more convenient, but I did not happen to possess one. This Goldfinch would sing to his hen like a Canary, and on May 8 my first Mule was hatched—only one, but how pleased and excited I was! Of course, I took the Goldfinch away after the third egg was laid in this and succeeding nests. The hen was a good feeder, and in three weeks the youngster could do for itself. I always keep up the egg food for several weeks, till the young are well on seed. This pair of birds had four young ones altogether, all ordinary dark Mules and very wild, with an abominable habit of twirling, which they inherited from their father. At the same time that I mated my first pair I put the proved muling Finch with a beautiful large clear Norwich yellow hen. I left them together some weeks, but she never laid a single egg, and must, I think, have been an old or worn-out bird. Next I mated the Goldie with a good large buff Sib.-bred hen, from which I had previously taken a nest of Canaries. She hatched out two good-sized dark Mules. The Goldfinch seemed so tame and domesticated that I left him with the hen while she was hatching the next lot of eggs, but with sad results, as about three days before they were due to hatch Mr. Goldie put his beak through every egg—and they were all fertile! I did not trust him a second time. Next I paired him with a young yellow cinnamon hen, and got the only decent mule of the lot—a very prettily marked cock with deep yellow head and breast, but, unfortunately, his claws were deformed, which spoilt him. This hen sweated her chicks, and the only other birds I bred from her—two Canary hens—had also deformed claws, though not so bad as the Mule. It was now getting late in the season, when a neighbour offered to lend me a hen Canary she kept as a pet, and which was most anxious to nest, and from this bird and the tame Goldie I had two Mules, one a very good songster. All the Mules from the last-named Goldfinch were easily tamed—a contrast to those bred from the other. This same season I paired up a Linnet several times—house-moulted and very tame—with a small yellow hen, but although the Linnet used to feed his mate on the nest, and they appeared a most devoted couple, I did not get a single fertile egg. The same hen afterwards had a nest of Canaries, so I suppose the fault lay with the Linnet. I fed the Goldfinch and Canary pairs on hemp, teasle, canary, and German rape, with egg food and greenstuff, chiefly chickweed, and out of the nine young Mules I bred I did not lose one. I do not think it is wise to overdo the niger, as I believe it causes egg-binding in the hens. I may say that I kept my birds in a conservatory, where they were undisturbed, and I fancy this had a good deal to do with my success.

Novice the Second.



A peep into the birdroom of Mr. C. H. Hill, of Wiveliscombe, who is an enthusiastic breeder of Yorkshire Canaries.

A Hybrid Breeder's Perplexity.

Sir,—I have had a 1911 hand-reared hen Bullfinch and a 1911 Norwich cock Canary paired, and have had close on thirty eggs from her this season. The Canary fed her, and mated with her, and I thought I was all right for some Hybrids, but after wasting my Canary's time sitting the eggs, I did not get a single fertile one. Can any fancier tell me if I tried the same pair another season whether there would be any likelihood of success? I might say that they were not always friendly; sometimes she would go for him "tooth and nail."

Perplexed.

To Protect Birds which are Being Colour-fed.

Sir,—This curtain rod will be found very useful to most of your readers who keep their cages in a rack. They must first have made two pieces of iron twelve inches long by one inch deep, with three-quarter-inch ridges in from about half-way. These iron rods should be fitted on the outside top corners of the rack. Then get an ordinary curtain stick about six inches longer than the cage rack, and fasten some thin muslin or calico with curtain hooks to the curtain stick according to the measurements of the rack. This is very useful during the moulting time for keeping off the rays of the sun, which destroy colour in birds.

C. Oates.

The Clashing of Shows in Ireland.

Sir,—In your issue of July 27 your correspondent "Semper Idem" seems to think there are only two shows clashing, viz., Holywood and Lurgan. I may point out to him there will be about a dozen shows in Ireland this year, yet six of them are to be held inside ten days. The following list should explain the situation:—Dundalk, Nov. 13 and 14; Derry, Nov. 14; Bangor, Nov. 14 and 15; Belfast N.C. and Y.C.C., Nov. 16; Holywood, Nov. 22 and 23; Lurgan, Nov. 22 and 23. For some weeks past letters have appeared in Cage Birds re Holywood and Lurgan shows. Would it not be advisable for the secretaries of these and other societies affected to take advantage of the correspondence columns of Cage Birds and endeavour not to have shows clashing, and so benefit exhibitors and societies alike? The committee of Lurgan C.B.S., I believe, do not intend to change their date. Mr. Secretary, is this correct? If it is, their show will be an utter failure, as, although a few old fanciers in Belfast may support them, the sympathy of the principal exhibitors in Ireland is with Holywood, as they had their show date fixed and their judge appointed before Lurgan fanciers thought of holding a show. If Lurgan has not yet appointed their judge, they can save the situation, as Holywood are determined to hold their show on the date fixed.

Interested.

An Appeal for a Newcastle Fancier.

Sir,—I thank you for inserting the appeal for help last week for the late Mr. C. Eastop's widow and children. Up to the present I have received nothing from outside our own district. This poor fellow never missed a week without Cage Birds, and while in the hospital undergoing an operation he always looked for me taking him a copy, which he always preferred to any other paper. I sincerely hope we may still be able to get a few donations so as to help his widow, if only ever so small. The Newcastle and Gateshead members have responded liberally to the appeal, and have stuck to their motto, "May the wings of friendship add new feathers."

Adverse Weather Causes Severe Loss.

Sir,—All prize money which was won at Newport Pagnell Show, held August 7, is paid; if anyone has been overlooked I should be glad if they will apply for same. I am sorry to say that owing to the very bad weather on the shew day we have lost over £60, which, added to similar experiences we have had this last two years, leaves us bankrupt. Through the generosity of my committee, who have lost a lot of money, they have paid full prize money within forty-eight hours.

HOW WINNING YORKSHIRES ARE BRED IN SOMERSET.

By C. H. HILL (Wiveliscombe).

I HAVE been a great lover of birds always. Since I was a schoolboy I have kept a bird or two, but not until four years' ago did I make up my mind to go in for a certain breed of birds. Then I fixed my thoughts on the Yorkshires, which I thought the pride of the Canary family. Having a spare bedroom, with good light, I turned it into my bird-room, first taking off the paper, and having it whitewashed out, and half covered with oilcloth on the side the cages would be placed.

I had four double-compartment breeders made so as to admit of easy separation of cock and hen when necessary (48 in. long, 19 in. high, and 12 in. deep); also two flight cages 5 ft. long, all with loose wire fronts. They were made by my brother, a cabinet maker, to my own designs. All sand trays are fitted with runners, so that they can be drawn out quite easy; they are then above sand and sawdust if any should work over the sides; also there is a free passage of air, and it keeps the sand trays fresh and dry.

I have my cages resting on sweet tins 10 in. in height, so that mice cannot climb up and get into the cages. All cages are painted black outside, and with light blue distemper inside. I use three-ply wood for the cage backs.

Six Firsts at Six Visits.

At the bottom of the photo is seen a Yorkshire that last show season I sent out six times, bringing back six first, six specials, and silver medal for best in show. I thought he deserved a place in the photo.

Canary breeding is a most pleasant hobby for either old or young. I have spent many pleasant and happy hours in my bird-room. I can recommend it to anyone who is looking out for a hobby for pleasure or profit.

Sawdust I use for the bottoms of cages; sand I keep in a tin that is hung on the bottom rail. I make a practice of cleaning out all cages once a week. I also do not forget to keep a piece of cuttlefish bone between the wires for birds to peck at; it is useful in many ways. Jeyes' fluid is a fine disinfectant to mix with water when washing out bird-room; it leaves a sweet smell. Cleanliness must be one of the first considerations in a bird-room. Let your motto be "Fresh"—fresh air, fresh water, fresh seed, etc.

I like to pair up the first week in April, if birds are ready. A little egg food with a little maw seed will soon get them into condition; also give a fresh dandelion leaf now and then. I remove the first three eggs as laid, putting back a dummy egg each time I take the hen's own egg away, replacing all three on the evening of the third day, and well dusting the nest with Keating's insect powder. I remove the cock-bird while she is sitting, and give plain Canary seed, with now and then a pinch of mixed seed, just for a change.

On the morning the young hatch I give a little yolk of egg with a little powdered Osborne biscuit. As they grow I increase the biscuit until it is six biscuits to one whole egg. On the third day I supply in a separate vessel a little whole hemp and rape seeds, and also give a good supply of fresh leaves of dandelion. This I continue until the young leave the old ones. When by themselves I give Spanish canary seed, hemp (crushed a little), and rape seed, but instead of giving egg food I get them on to cod-liver oil food, which I think is better for them. Be sure there is no stale food about for the young birds to pick up, as that will soon upset them.

The Winter Menu.

As a rule, I find the hens are just about ready for another nest by the time the young are about and starting to pick up for themselves. Then I place the cock with the hen again.

Throughout the winter I feed on best Spanish Canary seed, with once a week a little mixed seed put into finger drawers; also once a week I give all birds a little cod liver oil food with a pinch of rape, maw, salt and sugar mixed together, then made into a crumbly state with a little warm water. When cold I give it to them, and they do enjoy it.

I may here say that I have learned much from Cage Birds, my weekly paper, and I look forward to it as much as I do my dinner.

On Saturday I look it through before I have my dinner, and the wife has often said to me: "Your dinner will be cold before you eat it if you don't put down our Paper." "Our Canaries" is a grand book. I have just had the 16 parts bound, and I am more than pleased with it; it is so useful, and the print is clear and big. Again, there is Cage Birds Annual, which is worth having; a very cheap book. I hope all your readers have had a good breeding season.

AMAZING VIRTUES IN THE SHELL OF AN EGG!

A Story from the States.

By way of America comes the gratifying announcement that two eminent scientists of Munich have discovered that egg shells, consumed in proper form and proportions, lengthen human vitality, increase the power of resistance to the withering blight of time, add weight to the body, activity to the brain, and strength to the heart, destroy injurious bacilli, prevent inflammation and disease, and lend courage and energy to the human being. In other words, egg shells will do as much as is claimed for any of the patent medicines now on the market!

A physician who was invited by a representative of "The Daily Chronicle" to express an opinion on the matter, said: "I don't think poultry will be any dearer on this account. There is no mystery about the composition of an egg shell. It is formed principally of carbonate of lime, and, in addition, phosphate of lime and magnesia are present. Also, in the case of those rich brown breakfast eggs which some people prefer there may be—unless their tint is due to being boiled in coffee, which I understand is frequently the case—a trace of hæmoglobin or red colouring matter of the blood, with which birds are supposed to colour their eggs.

"Carbonate of lime and phosphate of lime and magnesia have recognised medical properties, but I have never heard claimed for them the surprising list of virtues which is enumerated here. Medical men will want to hear more about the discovery before they put their patients on an egg-shell diet."

In their experiments the scientists fed egg shells to four pairs of white mice, and within a given time fifty-four offspring were added to the colony, whereas the progeny of four other pairs of mice which had to do without the stimulating egg shells amounted to nine only. It was argued from this that a diet of egg shells will conduce to fecundity and prevent depopulation.

The Norwich Plainhead.

A Lecture by Mr. H. Bell, before the London and Counties A.C.B.

Meeting, August 10, at Headquarters, Earl Cathcart, Osnaburgh Street, N.W., Mr. W. Shakespeare in the chair. Among the correspondence was a letter from Mr. Ayris stating that he was in the Middlesex Hospital with a broken knee cap. A paper was read by Mr. H. Bell on the Norwich Plainhead.

Mr. Bell said: I have been a breeder of the Norwich Plainhead for about thirty-four years, and during that time I have never been without a pair, and am not tired of it yet. I find I keep learning more about them every year, and I can say a Norwich Plainhead has always been my fancy. Now, this bird is frequently described in Cage Birds, which I cannot see how a fancier can do without. I am pleased to get my Cage Birds to look over and see how things are going along in the Fancy. The writers tell you what an ideal Norwich Plainhead should be, but the thing is getting it bred right. At times you will get a bird with a nice round head and good chest, but long in the flights and tail; and that spoils the look of it. On the other hand, you get a bird with nice short flights and tail but it will very likely have a long, thin, narrow head; and that will spoil it again. The only way is to keep on breeding to get them right; once a man sees one or two birds coming along about right, it gives him a good heart to keep on trying.

Making a Start.

Suppose a man is going to make a start; if he is able to buy two good pairs he should go to a fancier he knows has some good birds and has done some winning and get one pair from him; then get another pair from some other good breeder. If he rears some young from both pairs, and then crosses them, he will very likely get on all right if he mates them carefully. I am not, however, one who believes in inbreeding too much.

Of course, a man must start according to his pocket. If he has a few pounds to spare, the bigger the price he pays, the better the birds he ought to get; but I do not want you to run away with the idea that if a man cannot pay a big price for his birds he must not make a start. Pay the best price you can afford and chance your luck. Even if you have what you think a bad year at the beginning, do not be downhearted and think your birds are no good; keep them and moult them and very likely you will be surprised to see how well they look. If you have a good bird that you are expecting to throw something first-rate, and do not get it the first year or even the second or third season, never give up until the bird is dead, as you will often find a good old bird prove better than a young one. I have a cock bird in my place now that I bred four years ago, and he has done better for me this year than all the other years put together.

A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Bell was proposed by Mr. Shakespeare and seconded by Mr. Pretty, which closed a very pleasant and instructive meeting.—G. G. Stubbs.

GLOSSOP, HADFIELD, C.B.S.

At the usual monthly meeting of the above society, it was decided to provide five natural colour classes at the back end show, in December next, viz., Cr. Yell. Nor., Buff, Nor., Yell., Yorks., Buff, Yorks., and A.V. Canary. Next meeting, September 24.—E. Thompson, Sec.

BROUGHTY FERRY C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held in Baker's room, Aug. 7. President R. Carmyllio chairman. The report of the Secretary showed that arrangements for the open show were well forward, and patronage of the Scottish Crested Canary Club had been granted the Society, and along with the valuable challenge cup presented by F. S. Weinberg, Esq., for best Crest, the success of this section is assured. Next meeting Sept. 4, when final arrangements for open show will be brought up.—R. Whitton, Sec.

ANNFIELD PLAIN AND DISTRICT F. AND F. C.B.S.

Meeting held Aug. 3. Moved that we accept terms re hire of schools, also terms of our boys' and girls' pigeon club. I must impress upon birdie fanciers to attend next meeting to have Canary classes settled. We have a lot to do, and I wish to have the schedule arranged as early as possible. I must again remind members to return duplicates and unsold tickets, also cash, by the 24th latest. Next meeting Aug. 24, at the Ox Inn, Oxhill, 7.30.—J. W. Chilton, Sec.

WALKLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held St. Philips Mission Room, Westmorland-street. Mr. T. Ridal in the chair. Resolved that a deputation be formed to visit the Sheffield O.S. to consider the novice rule of local societies. Messrs. Ridal, Butler, Tomlinson, and Scott were elected to serve on same. Will members please note September meeting, arrangments open show. The winners of points for table shows are now about equally divided among the novices, so it should make competition keen at later ones.—C. Tomlinson, Sec.

ANFIELD, EVERTON & DIS. C.B.S.

General meeting held headquarters, Aug. 12, Mr. W. Bell in the chair. Resolution passed thanking Mr. R. B. Wright for having worked up one of the finest nest feather shows in the district for several seasons past. It was decided that those members who did not show at the nest feather show, and also any new members joining before the end of October next, will be eligible to compete for all cups, specials, and other prizes at the next show, November 16th. (Night show down for 11th November is cancelled.) We have been granted the N.G.M.Y.C.C. patronage for our show, Boxing Day, Dec. 26th; several additional specials will be given to the G.M. classes, in order to induce the Yorkshire men to send as many birds as possible. We shall also allot some very fine specials to the four open clear Yorks. classes. Decided that Secretary and Committeemen pay a visit to all members of the society at a later date. Our next and last ramble takes place Sept. 8th (Sunday) when a big muster is expected. Mr. J. W. Cutmore gave his lecture on the evolution of the Canary, its origin, etc.—R. B. Wright, Hon. Sec.

PARTICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held Trades Halls, August 2. Owing to regrettable absence of Mr. Henderson, the popular secretary, through indisposition, his duties for the evening were taken up by the President, Mr. Park. Mr. Anderson, vice-president, occupied the chair, and with a good attendance of members, the business was agreeably carried through. The books showed a very satisfactory return from the monthly and F.F. shows. Points specials gained at these were fixed, and the awards paid over to the following: Canary section: 1, Maxwell; 2, Walker; 3, McRobbie; 4, Park. British: 1, Park; 2, Webster; 3, Aikenhead; 4, Priest. The Chairman called the attention of the meeting to a report of the Glasgow West End Club meeting, held July 5, and which appeared in the Fancy Press the following week. We fanciers in the Partick and District Club having before us the rule bearing on the winning of the rose bowl at Glasgow and Dis. open show in January, were pleased to accept that society's decision, that we (and not the "West End" Club) had won the bowl, as the rule did not debar confined classes, and Partick is certainly not a specialist club. Further, we would be slow to think that report conveyed the feeling of the members of the West End Club, or was authorised by their meeting, and if it should be only the mind of individual member or members, it would be well dismissed. Partick won the bowl with honour, the West End having the honour of being the runners-up.—J. F. Park, Acting Secretary.

NORTHERN B.B.M. AND F.B.C.

Meeting held July 24, in Lockhart's, 65, Grainger Street. Mr. C. Petterson presided over a fair attendance. Patronage was granted to Chopwell, Newcastle, West Hartlepool, Carlisle (Border City), Gateshead, and Sunderland. An invitation from the Northern Crest Club was read, re joining with them to have a show on New Year's Day, and, after a deal of discussion it was decided to decline same. Members please note that subscriptions are now due. Fanciers in the following counties are eligible to join: Northumberland, Durham, Cumberland, and Westmorland. For further particulars apply W. Curry, 60, Grosvenor Gardens, Newcastle, Secretary.

GRIMSBY & CLEETHORPES R.C.S

Monthly meeting held July 29th, at club-room. Mr. Ives presided over a fairly good attendance, and after formal business was got through, Mr. Rawcliffe gave his paper on "Training the Roller Canary." This was a splendid success, proving both interesting and instructive. It was very nicely put together, and took us by stages from the birth to the contest. At the conclusion the hon. sec. moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Rawcliffe, which was heartily responded to. A friendly discussion followed on the subject of the paper. I think everyone present left the meeting well satisfied with their evening's entertainment and discussion.—H. Mason, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW (West End) C.B.C.

Monthly meeting held in Co-operative Hall, St. George's Cross, August 9th, vice-president, Mr. R. B. Gibb, presiding over a good attendance. Various business relating to the forthcoming annual members' show was transacted, and other business was left over pending estimates. A letter from Mr. A. Forrest, sec. Scottish Roller Canary Club, asking if arrangements could be made to hold their first Roller Canary show in conjunction with Glasgow West End, on November 16th. Decided to appoint a small committee to confer with Mr. Forrest and his committee regarding same. Prize cards and specials for first feather show were paid out to each of the winners, as were also points specials counting over two monthly shows and F.F. show. I again ask members to note that the remainder of annual subscriptions for 1912 is now past due, and I should be very pleased to have remittance at earliest convenience.—W. Proudfoot, Sec. and Treas.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Special meeting held August 10th, Mr. Jas. Fotheringham (vice-president) in the chair. A letter was read from Border Fancy Club granting us their patronage. Stewards for open show were appointed as follows: Scotch Fancy, A. Cowan and J. Inglis; Bords., J. Anderson and J. Duff; Yorks., J. and S. Cargill; Crests, W. Brown and D. Kirk; Plainheads, T. Barclay and A. Ramsay; British, A. Anderson, J. Cordery and A. Strachan. It was also thought advisable to appoint extra stewards for packing up time, and the following were appointed: Messrs. D. Moffat, W. Purvis, and F. Johnstone. A schedule committee was also appointed as follows: A. Cowan, J. Anderson, A. Anderson, J. Veitch, T. Barclay, J. Cargill, and president and secretary. J. Veitch was appointed to assist secretary on show day. The delegates to the West Fife League were then instructed for next meeting. The following were accepted as members: G. Fisher (Jamphlars), A. Wilkie (South Glencraig), W. Laing and T. Rankine (Kelty). The meeting was closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman, whom we were glad to see amongst us again after his severe illness.—A. Dickson, Sec.

The Shows.

WOODLANDS (Doncaster).

Show held Aug. 5, in connection with the Woodlands Allotment Holders' Horticultural Show and Carnival. The members of the Adwick-le-Street, Doncaster and Hemsworth C.B. Societies are to be complimented on the way they came forward with their exhibits. Seeing that this was the first venture in conjunction with the above, I hope the fanciers of the surrounding districts will rally round and try and make this an annual event. The principal winners were:—YORKS.: Hunt, Trueman, Tomkinson (Doncaster), Graham and Gillings (Hemsworth). NORWICH: Grainger (Woodlands), Trueman (Doncaster), Graham (Hemsworth). CREST: W. Baxby and Wilks (Woodlands). MULE: Grainger and Blanchon. BRITISH: W. Lee (Woodlands), Pogmore, Trueman and Blanchon (Doncaster). Mr. W. Lee and Mr. H. Clayton staged a fine display of foreign birds. Judging was in the hands of Mr. C. Presley, of Bentley, and his awards gave every satisfaction.—G. H. Robinson.

ABBOTS LANGLEY.

Show held Aug. 5th, in conjunction with the annual flower show. The birds were staged in a separate tent in a very attractive way. A good attendance during the afternoon was much appreciated by the fanciers who were responsible for the arrangements. Mr. Charnock made an admirable secretary, and valuable assistance was also given by Messrs. Willis, Lowe, and Ginger. Special for best in show went to Mr. Ginger's Crest; the runner up was a nice yellow Yorks., shown by Mr. Willis. A choice collection of foreign birds (not for competition) was staged by Mr. R. J. Watts, of Watford, who also placed the awards, which were well received. CRESTS: 1, 2, 2 spls, spl. best in show, Ginger; 3, Walters; vhc, hc, Charnock, Cox. YOUNG CRESTS: 1, Walters; 2, Charnock; vhc, Stopley. C.B.: 1, 2 spls, Charnock; 2, Walters; 3, Ginger. YORKS.: 1, spl, 2, 3, Willis. CANARY (Songster). 1, spl, Miss McLeod; 2, spl, Ashby; 3, Woodwards. BRIT.: 1, 2, spl, Willis, good colour Bullfinch and Goldfinch; 3, Chipman, nice Linnet, rather small. PARROT: 1, spl, Tiffen, good Sulphur-crested Cockatoo; 2, Mrs. Coomber, nice Grey Parrot; 3, Ginger.

CARNARVON.

First open show, Aug. 5, held in the Pavilion, a wondrous place for an open show. Being about the worst time of the year to hold a show of cage birds, owing to the moulting season, it was marvellous to see such a collection together, no doubt brought about by good advertising. It would pay to put in the guarantee list of shows in future. The cage bird section was well looked after by Messrs. E. Jones and R. E. and Griff. Griffiths, who are adepts at catering for the Fancy. The secretary, Mr. R. Jones, was kept very busy, and had things in A1 order; he received valuable assistance from Messrs. J. W. Parry, J. and R. Hughes, and J. Jones. The attendance was immense, over £30 at the gates without tickets. Sir Charles and Lady Asshcton Smith honoured the show with their presence, and took a great delight in the cage birds. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool) judged, and we did not hear a grumble.

NOR.: 1, 2, 3, spls, Owen, a rare team, leader clear yell., topper for shape, colour, and size, clean cut, 2nd variegated, grand size and quality, not so good in colour, 3rd clear buff, fine body and type, a wee bit pinched in head; r, W. H. Williams; vhc, Badley. NOR., BRED 1912: 1, r, Owen, stormer, should moult out a champion, bold head and neck, sweet carriage and rare size; 2, Bradley, looks like a yellow hen, if so, real good 'un, bonny head and neck for a yellow, well staged; 3, W. H. Williams, wing mkd., rare skull and front, crosses wings a bit; vhc, G. Jones. YORKS. YELL.: 1 2, Herbert Jones, leader straight as a gun barrel, well filled in, exquisite feather, full of swank; 2, variegated, another good one, but breaking up; 3, W. Nolan, round as a bottle, good head and neck, afraid of showing his legs; r, hc, R. Angel; vhc, Sergeant Evans. BUFF: 1, hc, Herbert Jones, variegated, grand back and wings, pipe tail, well staged; 2, Sgt. Evans, smart exhibit, all type and quality, bit on the small side; 3, r, vhc, Nolan, a neat team, put down in style. DITTO, BRED 1912: 1, Nolan, eye marked, a stormer, not a fault, will be heard of again; 2, W. J. Jones, neat wings and tail, nice front, a bit soft when taking notes; 3, Sgt. Evans, very small, but smart, full of quality, a bit more size next time Sergeant, with the same type; r, vhc, hc, J. Jones. A.V. NAT. COL.: 1, 3, W. H. Williams, dark crest, fair centre and radiation, wealth of feather; 2, Border, very jaunty, takes perches well, trille lacking in quality, so essential in this variety; 2, Nolan, eye mkd. buff Yorkie., a smasher, hard lines to meet the Crest; r, Sgt. Evans; vhc, Green. BORD.: 1, 3, Herbert Jones, leader cap mkd. buff, an absolute gem, neat head and beautiful contour, silkiest of feather, staged, 3rd Cinnamon, nice depth of col., and rare pencilling; 2, r, Rob. Jones, variegated, full of swank and quality, fit as a fiddle; vhc, J. Jones; hc, W. H. Williams; c, Williams and Green. LIGHT MULE OR HYB.: 1, spl, R. E. NOVICE: 1, Mrs. Owen, nice pair of Conures, put down in form; 2, Miss Owen, Blue-fronted Amazon, lovely feather, chatty; 3, Pritchard, Norwich, fair size and shape; r, hc, O. Thomas; vhc, Butler; c, J. Williams.

NEWPORT PAGNELL.

Unfortunately most of the classes had to be cancelled at this show on August 7th, notwithstanding that full prize-money was guaranteed in all classes which stood, and there was no amalgamation. Of course, this was accounted for by the fact that nearly all cage birds are in moult at this time of the year. There was, however, a brilliant show of foreigners. Mr. Timeans brought a very fine team, all in perfect condition, and Mr. Davies' Eclectus Parrot was also in prime order. Mr. J. C. Wilmot was judge, and his awards were well received. YELL. NOR. (6): 1, T. Millard, nice compact bird, in good condition; 2, G. Hall, excellent type, but just a bit rough through moult; 4 birds absent in this class. MULE OR HYB. (7): 1, 2, 3, vhc, H. Andrews, first, light Goldfinch Mule, just dropping into moult; 2, lovely Siskin Mule, in prime condition, 3, very fine large dark Goldfinch Mule; hc, c, G. Notley. FOR., Small (6): 1, 2, 3, Timeans, grand red-headed Gouldian, feathered like wax, a pair of Ruficauda Finches, in perfect order and a charming Racket-tailed Whydah, either of these three birds might have won; vhc, Andrews; hc, Davies. LARGE (5): 1, Davies, a superb Eclectus Parrot, in grand fettle, 2, 3, Timeans, very charming, glossy Starling, with plumage like satin, and a grand pair of Black-faced Spectacle Love Birds; res., Page; vbc, Reed.

BEAUMARIS.

Annual fixture, held August 5, the cage bird section being benched on top of the poultry benches staged at a nice height in a large marquee on the Castle Grounds. The show was patronised by the gentry and visitors. Various parts of the Island had spectators some part of the day or another. Norwich were the best specimens here to-day by far. Few decent Yorkshires put in an appearance. Mules were a nice lot; Goldies very fair, the best of the latter in moult. The cage bird section deserves more attention here with such well-known exhibitors in the locality, and surrounding districts. We should be very pleased to see a class added, A.O.V., for Canaries, as there is only one provided for Norwich; also the same for Yorks. The best birds went for the money and better classification to-day in the same circuit. Mr. J. Kershaw judged, and gave universal satisfaction. Mr. Jones held the secretarial reins once more—the right man in the right place.

The Critique

YORKS. (9): 1, W. Nolan, long and shapely clear buff, good style and quality, in rare form; 2, Gallichan, another clear buff, good length and position, neat head and eye, shade thicker; 3, P. C. Jones, variegated. Buff, good col. and feather, good stock bird; res., hc, Hughes; vhc, Williams; c, Roberts. NOR. (6): 1, sp., W. H. Williams, good shape and quality, varieg. yell., nice round head, good wide entrance, rich colour throughout; 2, 3, J. Jones, both varieg. yells., former in good condition, typical birds, shade small in head; res., P. C. Jones, wing tkd. buff, nice stamp, fair condition. MULE OR HYB. (6): 1, 3, Roberts and Pritchard, lightly varieg. Goldio Can., medium size, full of quality, typical, and well finished; 3, Goldie Greenie, plenty of size and substance, just slackening in feather; 2, Gallicban, dark Goldie Can., good size, grand type, showing parentage, well on both size; res., Donaldson. GOLDFINCH: 1, 3, Evans and Roberts, typical youngster leading, rare blaze, and colours well defined, good polish, 3, good square blaze, grand body, good under colour, nice tan and markings, starting to moult; 2, W. H. Williams, nice medium size, good tan and markings, lustrous colour, rich blaze: res., Hughes Brothers; vhc, Sergt. Sloane; hc, Donaldson; c, Roberts. LINNET OR BULLFINCH (4): 1, W. H. Williams, good sized Bullfinch, dense black cap, good broad head, rich breast col.; 2, Roberts, another Bullfinch, good type, plenty of size, not so rich in colour as the winner; 3, Hughes, paler in breast col. SELL., 12s. 6d.: 1, W. H. Williams, good Norwich hen; 2, Evans and Roberts; 3, Roberts; res., Donaldson. A.O.S. BRIT. (6): 1, W. DUBMIRE (Workmen's Club) C.B.S

Second annual N.F. show, held August 10, in the large building adjourning the Workmen's Club. A very poor breeding season was not conducive to a large entry, yet between 40 and 50 birds were staged, and the quality of the exhibits amply made up for what was lacking in numbers. The season being so far advanced, several very promising birds showed signs of colour feeding, which was rather unfortunate for the owners, as the judge was instructed to put back all such birds. Mr. W. Holton secured the special for best in show with a very nice clear yellow Norwich. In Mr Barras Robinson the society possess a most effieient secretary, courteous and obliging, and he had all the arrangements carried out in fine style. He was ably supported by a fine set of fanciers, comprising the chairman, Mr. D. Hann; vice-chairman, Mr. J. Fenton; treas., Mr. J. Henderson; assist. sec., Mr. G. Lynn, and Messrs. R. Lindsay, T. Stokeld, W. Holton, F. Bilton, R. H. Dixon, H. Fenwick, M. Dixon, and W. Wood. The society is well supported, and the members are evidently determined to make it one of the most influential societies in the district. Mr. W. Reid (Sunderland) judged.

NOR., CL., ETC., YELL. (6): 1, hc, Holton, very shapely, full fronted bird, nice col. and quality, fine carriage, clean cut, takes special for best in show; 2, vhc, Fenton, scarcely so compact as leader, yet very promising; 3, Patterson, not far behind; c, Bilton. BUFF (6): 1, 2, Bilton, two nice type birds, good carriage, neat wings, leader excels in finish; 3, Fenwick, very young, should make out well; vhc, Holton; hc, Liddle. TKD. OR VAR. YELL. (5): 1, Liddle, varieg., grand size, nice col. and quality; 2, 3, Holton, tkd. and varieg. respectively, scarcely the same substance as leader, yet very promising; No. 1 and 2 debarred. BUFF (7): 1, Fenton, varieg., all there for size, splendid quality, nice shape and col.; 2, Liddle, a baby, should make out well, good col. and quality, grand carriage; 3, Fenwick, another baby, very similar to 2nd, but hardly so neat behind; vhc, Bilton; hc, Lindsay; c, Robinson. YORKS., CL., ETC. (3): 1, Patterson, slim and stylish, nice col. and quality; 2, Fenton, longer than leader, but scarcely so well finished; 3, Liddle. TKD. OR VAR. PLUMSTEAD & WOOLWICH C.B.S.

Young stock show, August 1, at the club room, when a good number of exhibits were staged. J. Hazell, Esq., judged, and his awards were well received. During the evening the members and friends were entertained by vocal and instrumental selections, under the musical directorship of Mr. G. E. Hartland, our vice-president. Special mention should be made of the way in which Mrs. Roulton and Miss Mead were received. Many thanks are due to all the artistes that gave their services for this occasion, and they promised to again favour us with au entire evening when the time can be arranged. Miss Somers was the pianist. The members who were not present lost a great treat. Catalogues with awards were on sale in a few minntes after judging. Will members please note that the next meeting will be held in September.

LIVERFOOL B.B.A.

Third and last night show, August 8th, when over 80 birds were put through by Messrs. Handley and Richardson, whose awards were well received. Mr. W. Jones, the Birkenhead crack, had a field-day in Yorks. Mr. W. Whiteside ran him very close with some smart youngsters. In the Green Norwich, Mr. Rumsley again fairly held his own; we expect to see him after the G.C.A. novice cup this season. Mr. J. W. Cutmore once more put down a rattling team of clear Norwich. There was a grand attendance, eight new members being enrolled. We anticipate great things at the old show, and hope to top the record held by the bird breeders of 225 at young show, run by Mr. F. Hawkes, and 578 at old show run by Mr. S. Hadwin, when Mr. Joe Bexson left his dinner rather than miss the train. Secretaries Eccleston and Lloyd inform us they have something up their sleeve for the novices this season. Class 1 (8): 1, 3, hc, W. Jones; 2, Crowe; vhc, c, Whitside. Class 2 (11): 1, 2, hc, W. Jones; 3, c, McMahon; vhc, Crowe. Class 3 (5): 1, 3, Pullman; 2, vhc, hc, Bell. Class 4 (9): 1, 3, W. Jones; 2, Bell; vhc, Pullman; c, Maxwell. Class 5 (5): 1, 2, Cutmore; 3, L. R. Jones; vhc, hc, McMahon. Class 6 (6): 1, 2, Cutmore; 3, c, Rumsley; vhc, McMahon; hc, L. R. Jones. Class 7 (4): 1, Rumsley; 2, 3, Tarbuck; vhc, McMahon. Class 8 (3): 1, Rumsley; 2, McMahon; 3, Brotherton. BRIT. AMALG. (6): 1, Bell; 2, McMahon; 3, vhc, hc, Pullman; c, L. R. Jones. Most points in show, champion, W. Jones, 35; Cutmore, 22; Rumsley, 12. Novice: McMahon, 23; Pullman, 20; Bell, 18.

PENKETH C.B.S.

Young bird show was held Aug. 10. Unfortunately, owing to many young birds being in moult, and others not quite ready, there was only a small entry. A good young Norwich Green took special in the open young Canary section, and a very large Grey Parrot in the other section. Some nice Borders were shown, and a nice class of Novice Yorks. Mr. A. Hampson was cage bird secretary, and Mr. Chas. Houlton judged, and his awards were well received. NOR.: 1, 3, Tomlinson, a pair of very cobby birds, first good type, colour and condition; 2, Andrews, pretty silky feathered varieg., only just beaten in head a little; 4, Higham. GREEN: 1, 2, Johnson, a rare good young self leading, takes special for best young Canary, 2nd, foul thigh and tail, nice colour and type, very good feather, etc.; 3, Andrews, good type and strong coloured self, well up to leader. BORDERS (6): A nice young lot. 1, Higham, four-point yellow, very nice type, colour and feather; 2, vhc, Johnson, green Borders of nice colour and type; 3, Andrews, four-point buff, rare type, etc., only beaten in fullness of feather; hc, c, Hampson. OLD CANARY (5): 1, Andrews, very fine yell. Nor. cock, grand build all over, rare colour, etc.; 2, hc, Hampson, a pair of very nice Borders, in rare good condition; 3, Higham, foul green, nice condition; vhc, Tomlinson, good nat. col. Nor. Mule: 3, Ray, foul throated buff Gold Canary; c, Goulden, hen buff foul throated Gold-Canary. BRIT. FINCH: 1, Jones, nice Linnet; c, Ray, Goldfinch. FOR.: 1, sp., Ambler, very fine Grey Parrot; 2, Hampson, also good Grey Parrot, shade smaller. NOV., YOUNG CAN. (6): 1, 3, Higham, very finely drawn yell., and a big strong buff Yorks., former best all round style, position, and condition; 2, hc, Ratcliffe, cinn., varieg. Yorks., nicely rounded, bit shorter than winner; vhc, Darlington. A.O.V. CAGE BIRD (2): 1, 3, Bishop, good dark buff Gold-Canary, and a fair sized Linnet.

Singing Contests.

LEIGH.

Globe Inn Linnet Club third club contest August 10th, when the birds sang for eight prizes. Quality: 1st, Barnes (Wigan); 2nd, Randells (Warrington); 3rd, Page (Leigh); 4th, T. Statham (Leigh). Time: 1st, Poole (Leigh); 2nd, R. Statham (Leigh); 3rd, 4th, Brown (Leigh). General meeting will be held at headquarters on August 16th, when every member is expected to attend. Also there will be a consolation contest on August 17th, when every member that has not previously won a prize is eligible. —R. Holcroft, Sec.

SALFORD.

Contest held on August 10th at the Boat House Hotel. Ten birds entered; some very poor singing was done, many birds going in the moult. J. Green won first prize, no points being awarded to the merit prize. Timekeepere, E. Hickman, A. Marshall, and H. Coates; tappers, E. Evans, J. Cresswell; birdkeeper, W. Wilson. After the contest 15 members sat down to a splendid tea, and after full justice had been done to it, the surprise of the evening was the president, Mr. Coates, making a presentation of a handsome timepiece to the secretary, Mr. B. Wharton, for his services to the club. We again added two more members to the list, which is increasing splendidly. Next meeting and special evening, August 25th. Members kindly attend, when new business will be dealt with. F. Hickman, Asst. Sec.

CASTLEFORD.

Weekly Linnet contest, Aug. 10. 22 good birds sang for three prizes, and some very good time was done by most of the birds. Winners: 1, E. Smith, 84; W. Nelson, 69 and 65. Also Aug. 11, 13 birds entered for three prizes given by Mrs. Parker, but only one bird sang anything like its true form. Winners: 1, 2, W. Nelson, 75 and 28; E. Smith, 25.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS.

Open contest, held old bird house, King's Head Shannon Street, August 5, when 24 of the best picked birds in Yorkshire sang for four good prizes given by Mr. Wm. Tillotson. 1, Ward; 2, Butler; 3, 4, shared by Richardson and Stead. Judges, S. Hardcastle, W. Naylor, C. Biss. Also Aug. 10, when 14 birds sang for 3 good prizes. 1, Richardson; 2, Farrar; 3, Bott. Judges, S. Hardcastle, W. Sissons. Also August 11, when 12 birds sang for 3 good prizes. 1, Bott; 2, Kelly; 3, shared by Ward and Richardson. Judges, S. Hardcastle, W. Naylor. Open contest will be held at the above house August 17, when Mr. Wm. Tillotson will give half tea service 1st prize, flower pot and 2 good prizes for runners-up. First pair hung at 3.—Walter Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Has its Book in the "Cage Birds" Series.

Does all you eat agree with you?

You know it if it doesn't, anyway!

Wisely fed birds are healthy birds, and healthy birds do you service. Avoid all errors of diet in feeding them, therefore, will help you to feed them properly. It is especially valuable at this season when wild foods are to be had in such abundance. merely for the gathering.

There are many sketches and a splendid coloured plate of all the best known wild plants.

THE SCOTCH FANCY CANARY.

THE ONE-TIME "KING OF THE FANCY."

THE foul-marked bird (on the left) is the property of Mr. A. Steel, of Kelso, and winner of 3rd prize at the Crystal Palace Show, among other honours. The clear bird (a yellow hen) is a well-known winner belonging to Messrs. Thompson Bros., of Berwick; it stood 1st at the Palace in 1910, 3rd in 1911, and has done a lot of winning both in England and Scotland.

low prices do not always mean cheapness, but when you get lowest prices and highest quality combined you have the essence of cheapness. So confident am I of the superior quality of my goods over that of other makers that I invite every intending purchaser to have any of my goods on approval, and if in their opinion the goods are not of highest value obtainable to smash them up and I will willingly refund their money. Clap nets made from specially knitted ¾-mesh fine thread netting, 3 yards long, 5½ feet deep, and 4 feet fly, 4/- pair; ditto 4 yards long, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. All clap nets have two nets to the pair, each guaranteed of above stated size and all fitted complete with all pegs, poles, and lines ready for immediate use. These are the only nets on the market that are properly armed or geared all round. Loose netting specially knit from 60's 3-ply thread ¾-inch mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; ditto, 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12 feet deep, 5d. yard; extra stout netting for use on rough ground, ¾-mesh, 10 feet deep, 5d. yard. Lark netting, 1½-inch mesh, 12 feet deep, 4d. yard; all netting post free. My netting is the only netting on the market having a plain single selvedge, thus doing away with all cut edges. Sparrow nets, fitted on 17 feet bamboo poles, 5/6; ditto on 19 feet poles, 6/6 complete; self acting spring net traps, 24 by 18 inches, 1/2 each; three 3/-; ditto, 18 by 14 inches, 10d. each; three, 2/3 carriage paid. These net traps can be used with call bird inside if desired, and can be baited for hardbills and softbills at same time. Genuine Japanese bird lime, guaranteed strongest lime made, will stand all weathers and hold birds in pouring rain; ½lb. 6d., ¾lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6; sample 3d.; all post free. This lime must not be confused with that sold by others as Japanese. If you do not buy from me, rest assured that you are not getting the real thing, as I have no agents. Single trap cages 6d. each, 5/- dozen; double ditto 1/- each, 9/- dozen; treble ditto 1/3 each, 12/- dozen; all with separate compartment for call bird, in addition to traps stated. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (Reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Real Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun, free from snarl and strong as boat lines, 1/4 each post free. Bird calls for imitating call and song of any bird, 2d. each; twelve 1/- post free. Flirt pegs and lines, stave poles, and everything required by catchers in stock; send stamp for full descriptive list, which also gives hints on net making. Remember, all the leading professional catchers purchase their appliances from me, so follow their lead and get yours from the man who knows exactly what is required for successful catching. All on approval, and if not satisfactory, you smash them up and I refund money in full. (Imitators, please copy.)

thoroughly healthy, reliable birds that are guaranteed properly on hard seed before being sent? If so, give me a trial. I send all on approval at my risk on receipt of cash or deposit system of this paper, and return money in full if entire satisfaction not given. Genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect condition, 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 6/6, twelve 12/-; specially selected large cocks, for moulting for show, muling, or song, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 8/6. Two-year-old cock Goldfinch, call bird, 2/6; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-. Splendid lot cock Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- each; handsome lot cock Brown Linnets, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 3/0. Specially selected cocks for show or singing, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6. Goldfinch, Linnet, and Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 5/- dozen. Lark Runner cages, 4/-, 5/- dozen. Please note: All birds are guaranteed properly netted in county of Worcester by catchers employed solely by myself and are not sent out until feeding thoroughly well on the usual seed mixture. This latter is a very important item during this wet season, as it takes weeks to wean birds from the rain-sodden seeds they are now feeding on in wild state. This also explains why I have not previously advertised birds for sale, as they were not then on hard seed. To avoid disappointment, patronise the man who has 21 years' reputation to uphold. No connection whatever with any other advertiser.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Real German Rollers, the best in England, singing grand, a treat to hear, with quality notes, 4/6 each; taught by the winner of over 50 1st prizes; everybody delighted with them. Try one house-moulted Lark, singing daylight and gaslight, and a sure winner for the show bench, 3/6; very large house-moulted Linnet, just through the moult, real Norwich type, beautifully pencilled, ready at once for the show bench, can win under any judge, 10/6, he can also sing, worth £1; Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world. They make the gamest Linnets ever carried to a contest; for length, turns, and form they stand aloue, and for voice they have no equal. This class of bird has won the English Derby and all the English championships, and the world's greatest contest. All the world's greatest judges say they are equal to the finest German Roller. They are at working men's prices, 1/-, 1/6, and real toppers 2/-. Linnets taught by the champion Linnet of the world, singing a treat, with show cage, 3/6; and a few extra specials, right for catching with, that cannot be beaten, 4/6. Exhibitors, try my A1 specials for the bench. These are the largest Linnets in England without a doubt, 2/- each; testimonials every part. Hundreds of British and foreign birds in stock. Only honest dealing done with me. P.O. before birds; so send to your old friend: Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40 Beckett-st., Leeds.

CANARIES.

Border Fancy.

HENRY BENNET, Border Fancy Aviaries, Kelso, having bred upwards of 160 Borders, offers 18 singing cocks, 3/6 each, sell cheap one lot.

BORDER Fancy, I have to dispose of, owing to business, the whole of my stock, namely, 10 pairs and 20 youngsters, all guaranteed to be bred from prize winners, and from E. R. Roberts', North Wales, and H. Bennet, Kelso; am keeping none of them; the best offer for the lot gets them; all cages, etc., to be included; will sell at great loss, as I cannot afford time for same; this is absolutely genuine: Ivor Morgan, Tydian, Penygraig.

NOT long since few shows had classes for Border Fancies, but now few open shows would think of making up a schedule without a good number of classes devoted to this very popular variety. The chief beauties of the Border, and those which count far towards show points, are smallness and daintiness. To breed winners you should have guidance, and much valuable information on the general management and preparation for show of the Border Fancy is offered in "Nutshell No. 23."—Publishers, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. 2½d. post free. Can be had from our agents (see list frequently published) for 2d.

Crests and Crestbreds.

THERE is no more lovely seed-eater than the popular Gouldian Finch, which, however, is very difficult to establish. This trouble can be overcome, and the variety kept successfully. But you must follow the hints given in "Nutshell No. 14," from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C., post free for 2½d. From agents (see list frequently published), 2d.

AVADAVATS, for their beauty, vivacity, and readiness to adapt themselves to the conditions of cage or aviary life, are favourites among foreign bird-keepers. Wesley T. Page, an authority on foreign birds, tells you all about them in "Nutshell" No. 16, post free 2½d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Call at any of our agents and get it for 2d. You will find a list of agents on another page.

THOUGH they can often be purchased for the modest half-crown, Pekin Nightingales are very beautiful in plumage, have a fine song, and make ideal cage or aviary birds. Some very helpful information on this variety will be found in "Nutshell No. 19," the author of which is Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. Get it at once. 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

WAXBILLS! (Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey, and St. Helena). Than this interesting quartette, which can be purchased at from 2/6 to 7/6 a pair, there are few more charming foreigners. They can be successfully kept, too, with little difficulty if you will follow the hints given by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutshell No. 20," 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Call at any of our agents and get it for 2d. (list frequently published).

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

PARROT AVIARIES, MORECAMBE

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

A Southerner on Moulting and Exhibiting the Yorkshire.

Some Useful Timely Advice by A. Burtenshaw, of Worthing.

WHEN the young birds are about eight weeks old, the best I cage by themselves to make sure that they do not get plucked by the others. The second best birds are caged in pairs, and so on, according to the size of the cages. It is good to moult a lot in a large flight cage, it saves a deal of work where you have a number on colour food. I am in favour of sawdust for the bottom of the moulting cages, as it keeps the birds nice and clean while they are on colour-food. A vessel containing some sharp grit is placed inside the cage.

Feeding for Colour.

There are many systems of colour-feeding; I have good results from the following. I give the usual seed during the time they are on colour-food, and towards the end of the moult give linseed two or three times a week, also a slice of boiled carrot between the cage wires, as it tightens up the feathers splendidly. Also I give the birds while on colour-food the red marigold flowers, also the flowers of the nasturtiums; they seem very fond of them and they help to improve their colour.

Give the colour-food in the strength of two teaspoons of tasteless pepper to one hard boiled egg and slice of home-made bread, rubbed through a sieve, and add a teaspoonful of brown sugar (known as raw sugar), also 20 drops of the following:—Put two drachms of hay-saffron into four ounces of best rum. Let it remain for seven days, then strain off and keep well corked up. Mix well together and prepare this colour-food fresh every day. Three times a week place one or two drops of solution of iron in the drinking water, enough to just colour it.

It is well to keep the birds from the sun while the moult is in progress. I myself, like a sheet drawn right across the fronts of the cages, about four inches from the cages and coming down to about one foot from the floor. You then can get a current of fresh air between the two and it is easy to draw the sheet backward and forward at will when you are doing anything to your birds.

Training the Young Birds.

To train young birds, I place seven or eight Yorkshire show-cages close together, put between each cage a thin piece of board or cardboard that will come up to the topmost cross-bar, then place a small piece of apple between each two cages, on the top, when the birds will draw themselves up to their utmost to get a look at their neighbours, also to get a peck at the apple. They will soon get used to the show-cages. Spend what spare time you have in handling your birds; it is time well spent to get them used to the show-cages and steady.

Clean Birds and Clean Cages.

One must send birds and cages as clean as possible to the shows. But with care during the moult there will be no need at first for anything beyond the washing of the bird's legs, tails and flights, if they are sprayed twice a week. I myself am not in favour of too much washing. Run the birds into a show cage, which will answer for a spraying cage. Lay two thin pieces of board on the bottom perches, the top one for the bird to stand on while you are spraying it. Place the cage in a foot-bath on a chair, as it saves wetting the bird-room floor. Use a little pure glycerine (one teaspoonful to a quart of water) for the spraying water, shaking it well up. Afterwards run the birds into clean cages or your trouble will be in vain.

Have your show-cages, also the perches, spotlessly clean, and well blacked, should they want it, as well as the water fountain. So keen is the competition now at our shows that one cannot, and must not, forget to see to this; not that a cage is judged, but there are times when two birds of equal merit meet, the better staged one of the two I should say ought to win.

Sending Out to the Shows.

When you receive your schedule from the show at which you are going to exhibit, read the show rules, so as to save any trouble 'twixt the show officials and yourself. Send your birds off in good time, with the bottoms of the cages covered with plain canary seed only. Send them in a box or basket that gives no trouble, either in the unpacking or the repacking for the return journey, cages tied in paper are not only dangerous to the birds, but a great nuisance to the show stewards and packers, while canvas wrappers are not a great improvement on the paper. Get a good outfit to begin with.

Should you happen to be one of the "unfortunate" exhibitors, do not pull the show officials and the judge to pieces because you are unsuccessful; but take your losses like a man and try again.

Foreign Bird Keeping.

The Lesson of a Year's Experience.

By W. J. Green (Aintree).

MY first year in aviculture has just closed, so before proceeding with my essay, I wish to say that it is written only with the endeavour of providing a little instruction for the beginner, which a more experienced fancier might consider unnecessary, but which, I think, had I read it a year ago, would have enabled me to have had a more successful breeding season, and have saved me from some vexatious losses.

I will commence by describing my aviary: It consists of a shed 6ft. by 8ft., and an outer flight of 10ft. by 8ft., height 6ft. The shed is of wooden construction, with large glass windows at each end, back and sides being well furnished with perches and twigs, in which are various nest-boxes and husks. The shed is provided with a door, which I keep closed in winter (except occasionally on suitable days), and take away altogether in the warmer weather. The outer flight is constructed of boards to the height of 3ft. (laid on two courses of brickwork as foundation) with the exception of the North side, which I have boarded up to the full height of 6ft. The remainder is half-inch wire-netting. I have not a part of my outer flight covered in, as is usually recommended. Possibly this would be an improvement, but I think the aviary I am describing is, for all practical purposes, suitable for the keeping of the commoner Foreign Seedeaters, with which I propose to deal. The flooring of the shed is wood—about 2in. in thickness—which I occasionally sprinkle with sand. In the outer flight I have a grass plot, various shrubs, ornamental grasses, etc. The constant drip from the wire-netting overhead in wet weather, however, tends to render the grass plot somewhat dilapidated, so I purpose doing away with the grass.

A Modest Commencement.

Having described the aviary, I will now proceed to the birds themselves, and give my experiences with the few I have possessed. After studying Mr. W. T. Page's excellent booklet "Foreign Birds for Beginners," various price lists, etc., and obtaining the advice in the query columns of Cage Birds, I purchased pairs of Cutthroats, Grey Java Sparrows, Silverbills, and Avadavats (so-called) and, later, pairs of Chinese Painted Quails and Budgerigars. I put the first lot of birds into the inner compartment on arrival, and on visiting them the next morning, found that one of the Javas had killed itself, by flying against the window, the glass being then unprotected. (Moral: Always have glass windows protected inside by wire-netting.) I replaced the loss, and patiently awaited the breeding season. I allowed them in the outer flight about April, shutting them in the inner flight for the first few nights. I continued giving the food and water in the inner place, and I think this is one of the chief causes of my failure to breed the birds successfully.

The Danger of Interference.

The Cutthroats were the first to begin nesting. This event took place towards the end of April. They chose a cokernut husk as a site, and soon deposited three eggs therein. Being only a novice, and not respecting the advice to leave the birds as much as possible to themselves during the breeding season, I at once began interfering, lifting the husk down occasionally when the hen was off, "just to see what was going on," etc. The consequence was that, though they sat the full period, no young were hatched.

Soon after this, my Silverbills started laying on a bare shelf, without having made any attempt to construct a nest. I procured a Hedge Sparrow's nest, made same look as natural as possible, in a flower-pot, and placed the eggs therein. This, however, was of no avail, as they took no further notice of them. In the meantime, the Cutthroats had again laid, and this time one youngster was hatched. This only had about two days of life, but whether it passed out of the world naturally, or received a helping hand, or rather beak, from Mr. Cutthroat, will never be known. Things were now quiet in the aviary till August. I then discovered the Silverbills had built a nest behind some ivy in the outer flight. This I left severely alone, so much so, indeed, that I never knew whether any eggs were laid or not. However, I think, if it had happened earlier, some young would have been hatched. As it was, nothing came of it Found Drowned.

The birds I had bought for Avadavats were birds of a greyish-brown colour, lighter underneath, with red beaks and red patches on the rump, and turned out to be Common African Waxbills. When I bought them, I thought they were Avadavats out of colour; and indeed, after having had them some weeks, imagined that the red patch underneath was growing larger, and only discovered that they were not what they were sold for on seeing a coloured plate of the various Waxbills some time afterwards. One died soon after arrival. I replaced same, but this killed itself later, and the other was "found drowned" in its bath. They were interesting little birds, however, and as I only paid 2s. for them, do not consider I lost much, even though they were wrongly named. They made no attempt at breeding, nor did the Java Sparrows.

THE LETTER FROM THE R.S.P.B.

A League Hon. Sec. Replies.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. G. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. Cushny, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; MAURICE AMSLER, Esq., M.B., Eton; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., M.A., Baron's Court; E. BAKER, Esq., Cowes; M. THOMSON, Esq., Dunedin, New Zealand.

In the League columns of Cage Birds of August 3, I recorded the fact that Miss Gardiner, the secretary of "The Royal Society for Protection of Birds" had written to the Somerset papers protesting against the action of the Education Committee for Taunton in accepting the offer of Mr. W. H. Grant, local hon. sec. to Cage Birds League for Taunton, of prizes to the children for the best three essays on "Feathered Pets." In her letter, Miss Gardiner described the act of the Education Committee as "a retrograde step," and took the opportunity of making the usual mis-statements about Cage Birds League.

To my remarks in Cage Birds, a marked copy of which was sent to Miss Gardiner, that lady has vouchsafed no reply. This was nothing out of the way, for one does not expect the paid secretaries of "humanitarian societies" to do more than present to their own subscribers and sympathisers, and to others who know nothing of the subject, the views, mistaken as they are, of their own societies.

I learn, however, that Mr. Grant has addressed a letter to the newspapers in which Miss Gardiner's letter appeared, and this letter is reproduced below. It will be interesting to learn whether Miss Gardiner will extend to Mr. Grant the courtesy of a reply.

Children and Caged Birds.

Sir,—As local honorary secretary to Cage Birds League, I cannot allow the mis-statements of Miss L. Gardiner in your issue of July 22nd to pass unnoticed. In the first place, it is utterly untrue to say that Cage Birds League "was started to promote the caging of birds." Its chief object is the enlightenment of the thousands who keep birds in a state of domestication upon the best and most humane methods of following their hobby. There are thousands of people in this country whose views on the caging of birds are diametrically opposed to those of Miss Gardiner and her friends, and surely these people's opinions are worthy of equal consideration. For its members Cage Birds League acts, it is true, as an association of defence and protection, but to assert, as Miss Gardiner unblushingly does, that its interests are of a purely trade character is utterly false, and no one knows it so well as she. Miss Gardiner belongs to that large army of humanitarians who cannot see that Nature, left to herself, is one of the cruellest and most pitiless forces in a bird's life—that hunger, the predatory instincts of other animals, adverse climatic conditions, etc., are all aspects of its existence which the real bird-keeper studies but the so-called bird protectors ignore.

There is also an economic side to the matter. The interests of the farmer and fruit grower are of no account to these psendo-birdlovers so long as the shallow sentiment which animates their attitude can be tickled. Sir Walter Gilbey has pointed out the danger to the agriculturist of prolificacy in birds, and of too great a licence for bird "protectionists." Miss Gardiner must give the men of Somerset credit for as much love of bird-life as she has herself, and attribute to them a sufficient measure of common-sense to treat birds as birds, and not as the Egyptians did their cats—make them objects of blind insenate worship. It is easy to read between the lines of Miss Gardiner's letters, and to see that her remarks are instigated not so much by a genuine regard for the welfare of the birds as by irritation at the fact that Cage Birds League has taken a step which is opposed to the interests of the society she represents.

We have fixed Oct. 26 for our open show, writes Mr. J. Bunn, sec. Nottingham and Dist. Permanent O.S.

To colour feed cage birds for the show bench, feed only on Ramsden's Pure Peppers—the Peppers that hold the Palace Record.—(Advt.)

Mr. Hendry has resigned the secretaryship of the Kent County C.B.A., and Mr. H. Wood, of 36a, Snargate Street, Dover, has been elected in his place.

Will Mr. Cutter, Salem Avenue, Sunderland, who advertised in a recent issue, let us have an address that will find him. We have a letter for him.

Mr. W. Williams, of Rose Cottage, Black Rock, near Abergavenny, would be glad if some reader would send him a specimen of the plant called purple loose-strife.

I have always found the information obtained from CAGE BIRDS sound and reliable, writes Mr. W. H. Williams (Llangoed), and I have been a constant reader for the last eight years.

Sandiford's Colour Feed is used by every leading exhibitor in the world. Mr. Sam Cook (Manchester) and Mr. Aitchison (Edinburgh) both write, and scores more, to say what a lovely colour they are getting. Order at once. See advertisement.—(Advt.).

I should be glad if Mr. E. H. Williams, who gave a drawing of a portable hot water device in your last Palace Show Number (Feb. 10), would be kind enough to communicate with me, writes Mr. G. Dix (3, Warwick Terrace, St. George's Road, Yeo Vale, Barnstaple).

Mr. A. M. Baird, sec., Scotch Fancy National Derby O.A. (Glasgow), writes that the judges at the forthcoming annual show are Messrs. J. Watson (Glasgow), A. Paterson (Edinburgh), A. Borland (Galston), and J. Price (Barrhead). The society numbers 111 members—a few less than last year.

Special Notice.—R. A. Newley, the well-known bird cage specialist, will be glad to receive additional names and addresses of breeders of various types of Canaries, etc. View, purchase of stock for the coming season. Transactions straightforward and for cash. All communications treated in strict confidence.—Write, giving particulars and prices, to R. A. Newley, 24, Stockwell Green, London, S.W. Genuine.—(Advt.)

I shall be glad if you would kindly announce in your next issue, writes Mr. G. H. Wharam, hon. sec. Derby C.B.S., that our schedules for open show are not yet ready. I have received several applications for same, and will forward them as soon as printed. Our classes will be: Norwich, 11, 3; Amateur Class Crests, 5, 2 novice classes; Yorkshires, 6, 1 novice; Any Other Variety, 1; Mules and Hybrids, 3; British classes, 7; Foreign, 1; Selling Classes, 2. A special prize will be given in every class.

Societies desirous of having our patronage and have not yet applied, writes Mr. W. Curry, 60, Grosvenor Gardens, Newcastle, sec. Northern Counties Norwich Club, must do so before Aug. 31, as we are having our meeting that night to grant same. We require six classes for champions and one or more for novices. Members please note change of meeting night, as we decided at our last meeting to hold it on a Saturday to give the country members a chance to attend, and have a say in the granting of our club patronage. For meeting place, see "Club Notices." Fanciers interested in the Norwich Plainhead Canary will be given a hearty welcome. Annual subscription 2s. 6d.

"Cage Birds" in China.

Mr. Moore, of 22, Lambeth Road, London, S.E., writes that he received an order, through advertising in CAGE BIRDS, from a Mr. Grain, of Shanghai, but unfortunately that gentleman's letter has been lost. Mr. Moore will be glad if Mr. Grain will write to him again.

How the Bird Laws Vary.

While in some counties only the birds scheduled in the Wild Birds Protection Act of 1880 are protected, and those only from March to July inclusive, yet in other counties many birds are protected between other dates, and some all the year round. Recently the Surrey County Council have declared it illegal to take or kill at any time throughout the year any of the seventy named species. Among these are included the Wren, Linnet, Owl, Swallow, Nightingale, Wagtail, Goldfinch, Robin, the Tits, etc. Those who contemplate the catching of a bird or two during what they think is the open season—August to February—should enquire at their local police station whether the schedule of the Act of 1880 has been extended in respect of their locality.

White Hedge Sparrows.

It may interest readers to know, writes Mr. A. McLean, that two pure white Hedge Sparrows have been caught at Swinhill, Lanark, one by myself and one by Mr. Kelly. They are young birds. The parents are normal coloured birds. They had two nests, but only one egg in each.

Does Experience Run Second?

In a letter to us the other day, a well-known Canary breeder of long experience writes: "To be a judge nowadays one must be a member of all the specialist clubs, or one is not eligible to officiate. It seems to me that experience counts for nothing so long as one is a member of the various clubs."

A Kingfisher in Trouble.

As two ladies were boating on the Thames at Goring recently, their attention was aroused by a terrible noise, which was evidently being made by a bird near at hand. Pulling into the bank, they saw a Kingfisher evidently in great trouble, and on looking round saw another Kingfisher nearly choking in attempting to swallow a bleak which was too big for it. One of the ladies took the bird in her hand and pulled out the fish, and then released the bird, which, with the other bird—which remained during the operation—flew away, none the worse for its escapade.

OBITUARY.

Fanciers and friends of Mr. Teddy Fitton, of Oldham, writes Mr. Jas. Cope, sec. Oldham and Dist. C.B.S., will learn with regret that he has had the sad misfortune to lose his daughter Edith on Wednesday night, Aug. 14, at the age of 24, after being ill for some time. I can assure Mr. Fitton and family that the sympathies of each and every one of our members are with them in their bereavement.

Mr. E. J. Causton.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. E. J. Causton, of Caversham Bridge, one of the oldest members of the Reading and District C.B.S. At one time he was a very prominent exhibitor of Norwich Canaries in the South, winning many prizes. Latterly, owing to increasing business and great age, he was unable to spare the necessary time. His age was seventy-one, and he leaves a widow, four sons, and six daughters to mourn his loss.

The St. Kilda Wren.

The St. Kilda Wren is a resident on the islands whose name it bears. There are no trees or bushes on these islets, but the bird hops about the rocks and the face of the sea cliffs, and haunts the rough stone walls and sheep shelters. It pairs for life, and makes its home in the same spot year after year.

Risked Life for His Canaries.

The "Daily Sketch" reports that during a fire at a Widnes brush warehouse on Aug. 13 the manager rushed into the burning building to rescue some Canaries which he kept in the principal warehouse. With great difficulty he got the birds safely out, and his action was loudly applauded by the onlookers. He received severe burns and injuries to his arms and face.

The Rook of "To-day."

It is generally agreed among farmers that the Rook of to-day is much more destructive than formerly. At one time he was called the "farmers' friend," but now he plunders corn stacks and potato clamps, and digs up sown grain. They destroy acres of turnips by pecking holes in them, which collect rain water, and eventually rot the roots. They are also destructive to birds and eggs.

Averted a Flood.

A Parrot belonging to Miss Constance Ussher speaks Spanish and English, and sings a pretty song all about herself. "The other week," writes her owner, "we had terrible rain, and one of the drains got choked up. The Parrot noticed the water accumulating and shrieked out 'Oui rico bano' (what a nice bath). We were in another room at tea, and had Polly not called out, and so set us wondering, the house would have been flooded!"

The Ringing of Wild Birds.

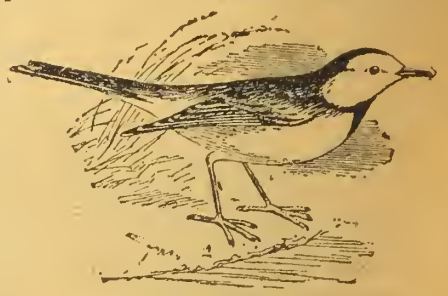
An Appeal to Catchers and Others

No doubt most catchers of birds, dealers, etc., will know by reason of the letters, etc., which from time to time have appeared in our pages, that numerous wild birds have been rung (metal rings placed on their legs) with a view to throwing light on the mysteries of bird migration and distribution. This object can only be attained by all those who chance to catch any bird wearing one of these rings sending particulars at once to CAGE BIRDS (for publication) or to the authorities concerned—the officials of the University, Aberdeen, or Messrs. Witherby and Co., High Holborn, London. The particulars required are: (1) Name of bird; (2); place where caught and date; (3) the number and other marks stamped on the ring. We trust that our readers will assist in this excellent work whenever the opportunity comes their way; unless the captures are properly and promptly recorded, the labour of ringing is, of course, rendered so much waste of time.

Wild-Bird Life.

In the Corn Fields.

By the cutting of the corn the reaper has changed the aspect of the country-side. Instead of the wide sweeps of golden grain stretching away over hill and valley, the view is now broken up; with here and there patches of corn still standing dotted among the numerous stacks dotted over the fields everywhere. The removal of the tall wheat has made a vast difference in the daily life of the wild birds in the district. Previously the pretty Turtledove sank gracefully among the stalks, securely hidden, and took his fill of the noxious wild seeds growing around. Now he must settle in the open, and feed with watchful care, looking upon every heap of sheaves as a likely hiding place of one of his enemies. The flocks of



THE PIED WAGTAIL.

Sparrows and Finches that played such havoc with the wheat growing at the edge of the field, are doing much less damage now; the reaper has knocked out bushels of golden grain while cutting and binding the sheaves, and one can plainly see the corn lying thickly upon the soil, and the farmers' little enemy, the Sparrow, is now doing yeoman's service in clearing the fields. The birds have increased enormously, and flocks of hundreds are common everywhere, a fidgety, flighty throng, taking wing at the slightest sign of danger. The movement of half-a-dozen of these in seeking a fresh patch to feed upon, is to the others a suspicious sign, and quite sufficient to put two or three hundred birds into the air at once. Wheeling round, they settle again, or if near the edge of the field, crowd together upon the hedgerows or convenient bushes. From here they make their way in driblets, once again to the feeding ground. Sometimes it is several minutes between the flight of the first bird, and the departure of the last one, and frequently a fresh cause of alarm will put the whole flock to flight before they have joined him. When the corn has been too wet to carry, the farmer's team has commenced to turn the soil for a fresh planting. Upon these rich brown furrows the graceful Wagtails flit about; so dainty and graceful are they that one can almost imagine them to be huge butterflies. Their flight is peculiar, undulating, and with a few rapid flaps they float off in graceful curves. These birds are partly migratory, and there is generally quite an influx in the writer's district in the early autumn.

The Blue Tit's Other Names.

The Blue Titmouse has many names, one of which is "Pick-cheese," but why, no one has yet been able to explain. He lives almost entirely upon insects, and does not evince any particular partiality for dairy produce.

Wild Birds Massacred.

The French, says a correspondent in "Madame," make holocausts of birds of all sorts. This is so true that the forests of the country are almost entirely silent; Lark, Thrush, and Blackbird are conspicuous by their absence from their natural haunts, but you may see their poor little corpses heaped high on market barrows at special seasons of the year.

Twenty-five Years of Outdoor Canary Breeding:

By W. COLE (Harlow).

Success of simple methods described; and one or two uncommon experiences are also related.

THE life of the private bird keeper, breeder, or exhibitor is to-day a very different thing from the life of the private fancier when I first took up bird breeding 25 years ago. Then the obtainable information was meagre, and in many cases unreliable; it required constant personal exertion on the part of the hobbyist in visiting other fanciers' rooms, and so on, to keep oneself acquainted with the latest type of exhibition bird, and to get some little idea of the style of bird to breed for. Now that is all changed, thanks to CAGE BIRDS, with its splendid ordinary and double issues, and its splendid coloured plates, depicting the best examples of birds extant; also thanks to CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, which always contains a wealth of information no fancier can afford to be without if he inteuds to be "in the running."

My first venture was the purchase of two Norwich Plainhead cocks and four hens, which I turned into an aviary I had already prepared for them, bearing in mind the axiom "Get your cage before you get your birds;" and, as I expected to succeed and to increase my stock, I provided accommodation in advance, making the aviary 18ft. long, 12 ft. wide and 8ft. high. The back and two sides were formed by existing 9in. brick garden walls; the front, facing due South, was covered with ¾in. mesh wire netting. The front half of the roof was of glass with ventilator in centre and the back half with ¾in. deal floor boards, well tarred.

A Paper Roofing Lasts Twenty Years.

I then obtained some thick sheets of brown paper, with which I covered the boarded part of the roof, laying one sheet flat on the roof and tarring the upper side, then reversing the sheet and placing it in situ, and tarring the other side; and so on until the whole surface was covered, taking care to well lap all the edges, and commencing at the lower part of roof and working upwards. When this covering was partially dry, I applied another covering in the same way until there were three thicknesses of paper over the boards. This roof was perfectly water-proof and lasted 20 years.

The interior I divided into three parts by means of wire-panelled folding doors, to open or close at pleasure, which I found very convenient for cleaning purposes, also during the breeding season. The floor I laid with turf cut from an old pasture, leaving a path down the centre; and I provided a large sand-tray, 4ft by 3ft. and 3in. deep, raising it about 3ft. from the ground which sand bath the birds enjoyed immensely. There was a good supply of perches of various sizes, and also a hanging trapeze suspended from the roof by a swivel, which gave the birds a good deal of amusement.

Flower Pots the Best Nests Ever Used.

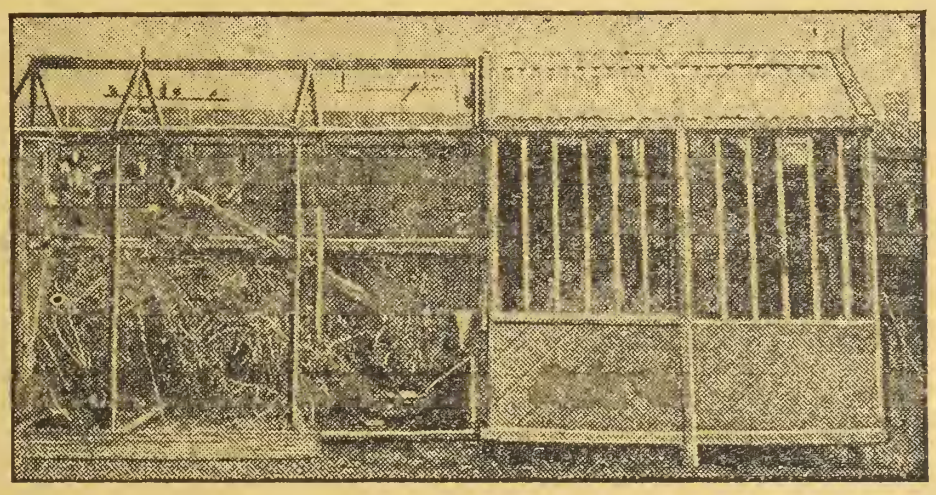
For nests I used clean 4½in. flower-pots, half filled with fine dry hay, and suspended in iron rings fixed to an upright post in the most retired part of the aviary. These were the most successful nest pans I ever used, and I have tried many different kinds in my time. But it is very necessary to see that the rings fit the pots, otherwise accidents may happen, as in the following case.

One Sunday morning about 10.30 o'clock, having occasion to pass the aviary, I saw to my great distress that one of the upper pots had fallen into a lower one which was directly under it, and apparently crushed to death a splendid Crested hen (which was at the time sitting on five eggs), as her poor little head was immediately between the edges of the upper and the lower pots. Believing that death must have been instantaneous, I left the wreck until the next morning, when I removed the top pot, and took the "mangled remains" in my hand. As I stood mourning over them the bundle of soiled feathers, that bore not the slightest resemblance to a Canary, sprang out of my hand on to a dove cot in the Aviary, where (being called away on busines) I left her trying to regain her balance. On returning about half an hour later, I was more surprised than ever to see her sitting close on her nest again, and about a week later she brought off five beautiful youngsters, which all did well. When I think of the incident I have never ceased reproaching myself for not releasing her at once, and probably never shall.

Studied Simplicity of Diet.

The way I prepared my soft food was to take a stale loaf and grate it very fine, then place it on a dish and put it in a hot oven until it was baked to a light brown colour. This, moistened with water until of a crumbly consistency, makes a very nourishing food by itself; but for a change, a hard boiled egg grated fine, and mixed with about half a pint of the baked bread is very beneficial. Some carrot grated fine and mixed with the food I also find a very good change for the birds. For green food I have always considered water-cress hard to beat, but here again a change is beneficial, and dandelion leaves, chickweed and groundsel make good alternatives. A few plantain stalks now and then are also much relished.

A plan I adopted when other green food was unobtainable was to grow mustard and cress in boxes with a couple of perches fixed over them, and place the boxes entire in the aviary. The perches being fixed over the cress prevented the birds treading it down and wasting it.



AN AUSTRALIAN OUTDOOR AVIARY.

This useful structure is owned by Mr. A. G. Boardman, of Sydney, a well-known lover of birds, and breeder of several rare hybrids.

Fresh from the Rabbits.

But to return to the fitments of the aviary. In the breeding season I supplied a bundle of dried grass, moss, etc. By-the-way, for lining purposes the birds often used to help themselves to the fur of the rabbits, of which several had the run of the aviary. It was very curious to see them perched on the rabbits' backs tweaking out a beakful of wool and flying off to their nests with it. A fellow fancier who knew of this advised me to introduce two or three cats for the same purpose! Needless to say I declined the suggestion, with thanks.

One great advantage of keeping the birds in this approach to a natural state is that I never have had a case of red mite, or of any disease amongst the stock since I started.

With regard to the feeding of the first young, I had no trouble, as, strange to say, an old Bullfinch took that duty entirely upon himself, going from nest to nest in rotation. It was very amusing to see him, when the egg food failed, carrying small pebbles or bits of stick, and offering them to the young Canaries, which, I am glad to say, had the good sense to refuse such indigestible stuff. "But past is all his fame; the very spot where many a time he triumphed is forgot."

I omitted to say that at the end of the aviary I wired off a compartment with a small door to it, and over the door left a 2in. hole for the birds to pass in and out of. This arrangement was for catching any bird I wished to handle, for when the desired bird passed in at the hole I closed a small sliding shutter and took the bird out through the door.

The Value of Method.

In conclusion, my experience teaches me that a hearty interest in his stock is indispensable to the bird-keeper's success, and that this, coupled with scrupulous cleanliness, regularity of feeding, and frequent change of diet, will do more than anything else to bring him to his desired goal. If beginners in the Fancy would but work on more methodical lines, making the best of the great advantages they possess at the present day, no doubt the great number of queries re ailments, etc., that have to be answered in CAGE BIRDS would grow beautifully less, until they would practically vanish. I have always had excellent success in my outdoor aviary by proceeding on simple, straightforward lines.

An Irish Fancier's Favourite Quartette.

By R. Cobain (Crawfordsburn).

The Siskin, the Redpoll, and Yellow and Reed Buntings.

WITH this treatment the Yellowhammers soon commence to fend for themselves. When they do so, the nest and the moss should be taken away, and sea-sand put in the bottom of the cage. In addition to the above food, they should be given at this time, oatmeal, which should be given dry, and also a little crushed hemp and canary seed. A bath should be given at least twice a week, as these birds bathe freely, and there is nothing better for keeping them in good health and feather.

Wild caught Yellowhammers will eat very little but plain canary seed when caged. In time they will commence to eat other seeds also. Hemp seed they soon acquire a taste for, but very little of this should be given, as it darkens the colour. A good stock food is canary seed and insectivorous food, with a little mixed seed once a week, and a good supply of ants' eggs and mealworms, and such small insects as one may be able to find; also oatmeal. This treatment need not be changed during the moult, except if one wishes to exhibit, when they must be colour-fed. This is easily given, as the colour food may be mixed with the insectivorous food.

Improving with Age.

The Yellowhammer never gets its full colour until after the second moult, and will improve even after this. The leading points of an exhibition specimen are: size as large as possible; bold appearance, with a rich clear body colour; a distinct V-shaped mark on the crown of the head, and a horse-shoe mark on each cheek. Hand-reared Yellowhammers make splendid pets, as they become very tame. I believe that these birds will become greater favourites as time goes on. If a cross from the Yellowhammer and Canary could be got, it would surely be a beautiful bird, and I feel sure some one will produce it before long.

The Reed Bunting is also a beautiful bird, smaller in size than the Yellowhammer. The colours of a Reed Bunting are: breast whitish, with dark pencilling; back and upper parts of wing brown, with dark markings; wing flights and tail black, with white feathers to the sides of the tail; black cap on head extending down over the eyes, and a white mark on each cheek extending round the back of the neck; the legs and beak are darker than those of Yellowhammer. The hens are easily distinguished from the cocks, as they have no head markings.

The Reed Bunting's Nest.

The Reed Bunting goes to nest about the same time as the Yellowhammer, the nesting-place usually chosen being in the reeds or long grass at the root of a hedge, sometimes out in a meadow or in a bunch of rushes. The nest is always well concealed, indeed I know no bird which can conceal it better, except it be the Sedge Warbler.

Anyone who would try to find a Reed Bunting's nest had better be careful, or he may tread on it without seeing it. The best plan is to watch the birds going out from and into the nest. If a Reed Bunting is flushed from its nest, it will flutter over the grass as if unable to fly properly. By so doing, it tries to draw one's attention from the nest, and if one sees a Reed Bunting acting in this way one may be sure he is not far from the nest. The nest is composed of much the same materials as that of the Yellowhammer, but is rounder in shape and neater, with less loose straws about. The eggs are four or five in number, and very dark in colour; the ground colour is brownish, with dark brown spots and lines, somewhat resembling the eggs of the Chaffinch.

The young resemble the mother until after the first moult when the cocks get the black cap and the white marks on the head. Their natural food is similar to that of the Yellowhammer. These birds are not to be found so much about farmyards as the Yellowhammer; they keep more to the open ground. Their song, like that of the Yellowhammer, is short and plaintive, but the notes are entirely different.

In my opinion, the best birds are those which have been hand-reared. Their food and treatment in captivity may be similar to that described for the Yellowhammer. As an exhibition bird, the Reed Bunting is not such a success as the other Buntings; although, in my opinion, in beauty of colour and markings, it equals any bird on the show bench. As a pet, a hand-reared specimen stands second to none.

CONTINENTAL "SPORT."

How they Destroy Larks in France.

In "The Field" appears the following answer to a correspondent. We are sorry to find that such "sportsmen" are apparently to be found in England as well:—The "lark glass" or "twirler" is better known in France than in this country. There it is, or was at one time, very popular. It may be described as a wooden mushroom-shaped implement, the head of which revolves and is studded with bits of looking glass inlaid. It is worked with a long string by the shooter, who lies in wait for passing Larks at the distance of five-and-twenty or thirty yards, when the birds, attracted from curiosity by the glittering glass, hover over the "twirler" and are shot. A long illustrated article on "Lark Mirrors" appeared in "The Field" of March 4, 1882, and will be found reprinted in "Essays on Sport," published at "The Field" office. In some parts of France they make quite a business of shooting Larks in this way for the market, and in French books relating to shooting this branch of the art is sometimes described. At the moment of writing we have before us a little French manual on the subject, undated, but bought in Paris in June, 1889. It is entitled "Le Chasseur d'Alouettes au miroir et au fusil," and three or four different patterns of "lark mirrors" are figured. The author's name Neree Quepat, and the publisher Auguste Goin, Rue des Ecoles, 62. In reply to our correspondent's question, he should be able to find Larks on the big stubble fields in any part of Sussex mentioned by him.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

KEEPING CANARIES OUTDOORS (A.B.C.).—Sorry that your query has been accidentally delayed. It will be answered next week.

MILLET FOR CANARIES (F.H.G.G.).—Yes, a spray of millet as a change now and again is very good for Yorkshires, or any other small slender breed, as it gives them a wholesome change without much risk of making them fat. As a rule, however, Canaries are not very partial to millet when a sufficient supply of other seeds is available. Maw seed is a very acceptable and wholesome tit-bit for them.

BARE SPOT ON BACK (Avi).—Are the three young birds caged together? If so they are certainly plucking each other, although you may not have noticed them indulging this wretched habit. Cage the birds separately, and slightly smear the bare spots once or twice with castor oil or lanocylin. Allow an interval of two days before anointing a second time. Give the birds a half-ripe plantain stalk daily for a time to occupy their attention.

CITRATE OF SULPHATE (T.H.H.).—If you have not misread the words you quote, they are undoubtedly a printer's error, which escaped notice, but which was corrected in a later edition of the book. What edition have you? I have referred to a copy of the "fourth edition," and find the sentence reads: "citrate or sulphate of iron," which is quite correct, and the original meaning. Citrate of iron and sulphate of iron are two different preparations of iron, quite distinct from each other. The author means that either of them may be employed for a given purpose. Any chemist worthy the name stocks both preparations, and you should have no difficulty in procuring one or the other.

INJURED LEG (M.G.B.).—You might show the bird to any veterinary surgeon, and ask his advice. Had you given me more particulars about the case, and said how it happened, I might have helped you better out of the difficulty. It is not unlikely the leg may be broken, and if given a fair chance Nature frequently restores these injuries perfectly. Keep the bird in a moderately small cage, with perches quite low down, and arrange seed and water in such a manner that bird can reach it without the least straining. If necessary place them in small shallow vessels on the floor inside cage. Then keep bird perfectly quiet. Do not disturb or flutter it in any way until it begins to resume its active condition voluntarily. A light cover over front of cage will help to keep it quiet if disturbed by seeing people moving about.

WHEEZY YORKSHIRE (Singing E.M.—McIlanka). The best thing to get for the Yorkshire cock would be a new respiratory system, but as these are not on the market, you may try what the following treatment will do towards patching up the old one, though I cannot promise you certain unqualified success, only complete rejuvenation would insure that result. First see that the bird is kept in a healthy place, quite free from draughts, and extreme fluctuations of heat and cold, yet well ventilated, and not exposed to foul air or fumes from burning lights in the evenings. Give a staple diet of plain canary, with a pinch of summer rape separately every second day, and on the alternate days a little sponge cake, as advised to "A.S.," for a fortnight. Also give the same additions after this time to the staple diet as are advised to "A.S." In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny piece, for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of the following mixture two days in every three for a fortnight. If not cured in that time omit mixture for a week, then resume it, and go on with it for two, three, or four weeks, as may seem necessary. Give the hen the same diet as above, but in her case reduce the frequency of the "extras" one-half for the first month. Give the rhubarb and soda aperient as above every second day for a week, and in the following week add four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid to the water every second day.

SNEEZING (A.S.)—It is merely a symptom of a cold generally, and not a complaint in itself, so you are not likely to find it dealt with as such. Keep the birds out of draughts, and in addition to the usual seed diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed, every day for a week, and add to the drinking water 20 drops of whisky, six of oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, each day for three or four days, or until sneezing has disappeared. Give the Canary, in addition to its staple diet, a pinch of summer rape every second day, a small teaspoonful of mixed seed twice a week, a morsel of bread and milk, or egg-food, or crushed sponge cake, once or twice, and a spray of green food three times a week.

SINGING HEN BARE ROUND BEAK (E.T.).—It is quite a trifle uncommon but by no means rare for a hen to sing more or less—generally it is less, and the efforts limited to a mere twittering. As regards the bareness around beak, you should thoroughly examine the cage to see if it is infested with red mites, and if any are found, thoroughly overhaul cage and exterminate them. Remove bird to a temporary cage, and, after cleaning this one superficially, saturate it with paraffin and stand in the open air to dry. Then wash out with a fairly strong solution of Jeyes' Fluid, and when again quite dry re-distemper, paint, etc., if necessary. Slightly anoint bare place twice a week for a month with boracic ointment, and allow bird to bathe freely when it desires. The bareness will probably disappear when the bird moults, which should be very soon.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

STARTING ON SAFE SIDE (Hopeful).—November is about the best time to procure stock for breeding next season—that is, as soon as the birds are quite over the moult, and in perfectly fine plumage. But any time from October (assuming the birds in view are through the moult) to January is a very good time. You should get a nice pair of stock birds for the sum you name, but must not expect first-raters. Sorry I cannot distinguish between individual breeders. The person you name is a breeder of good stock, and I know nothing at all to his discredit. More I cannot say. It would be a good plan to write him or any other breeder you may choose and ask for a quotation for a pair or trio of healthy young birds, unrelated, to start breeding. You might say you cannot afford high prices, or name the amount you are prepared to spend, and rely upon their judgment in selection. Could you not get someone to see the birds on arrival.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

SAWDUST, ETC. (Robin).—(a) I do not like sawdust, and never use it. Use a gritty sand and a small turf (such as is given to Larks), renewing this when necessary. (b) No, nothing other than the gritty sand referred to in "a." (c) Yes, but the front of the cage should be covered up at nights; a good protection is a wood and glass sliding shutter, which can also be used during periods of driving rain.

WHAT PARROT? (Levenshulme).—Your bird is one of the Ring-necked Parrakeets, which one I cannot say, as your description is too vague. If there are red patches on the bend of the wings it is an Alexandrine, if no red patches, it is the common Ring-necked Parrakeet. All talk, more or less, but this talent is very variable in individual specimens. As soon as it is steady, and not scared by the proximity of members of the household, keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation, etc.; it should get plenty of petting, and no teasing; it should then soon respond and utter many words and mimic calls which it hears. Also teach it by the constant repetition of words and short sentences.

YOUNG GREY PARROT (Lady Jane).—Continue to give the sop as at present, but spot over the daily supply 10 drops of Parrish's Chemical Food and allow it to soak in. You must not make any sudden change in the diet, but gradually bring it on to the treatment advised in the booklet—soft food must be continued till the bird is cracking seed freely. At the same time, tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food, must not be given. There is no talking cage; train it as per booklet, and it will soon prove more or less responsive. I should say its age was about 12 months. Fine sleek plumage, in fact, perfect condition, no missing claws, etc., would be the points that would tell for exhibition. Keep up a constant supply of food, the soft food must be prepared fresh daily. Yes, but the first moult will, I expect, prove a very protracted one.

WEAVERS (C. H. S.). The distinctions are so minute, while out of colour, that it would be quite beyond our space to describe it here: Napoleon Weaver, black and yellow, centre of abdomen black; the cock shows more of a yellowish tinge in its plumage when out of colour than the female. Orange Bishop: Fiery orange and black, out of colour but little brighter than the female. Common or Reddished Weaver: This bird is golden-brown, with a rosy sheen over the lower surface and a black mask, covering the forehead, front of face and chin; out of colour very little different to the female. Atlas Weaver I shall not describe, as the name is given by dealers to more than one species. Full-mark is also another fancy name. The Black-headed Weaver has the head black, upper surface green variegated with yellow, below bright yellow. The Half-mask is similarly clad, but a little smaller; but it has the front of the crown chestnut and the mask is confined to the side of the face and throat, rather more yellow in its plumage than Black-headed. The males in undress are similar to their mates, but are larger and rather more brightly coloured. Paradise Whydah: Whole of the head, shoulders and tail black; wings brown and black; rump white; back and sides of neck and breast chestnut-mahogany, remainder of under-surface buffish-white. In undress the male is similar to the female, but is larger, and a little darker coloured. Pin-tailed Whydah: A gaily variegated species with plumage of warm browns, pure white and rich blacks, with red beak and feet. Your Weaver appears to be the Half-masked (Hyphantorius vitellinus).

WHAT BIRD (W.T.B.).—I am still of the opinion that your birds are young Quaker Parrakeets; the tail feathers certainly point that way. I am assuming that "Bluish-purple wing" only applies to the large feathers. If it changes in colour materially after the moult, send me the description again.

STOCK BIRDS (Fancier-Senghenydd).—Stock birds are the birds reserved by any Fancier for breeding or "stock" purposes. As you name no particular kind of birds, I can only say that the age at which birds mature (they are mature when in adult plumage) is very variable, and that they should not be put up for breeding till they have donned full adult plumage. You had better repeat query with fuller details next week.

WINTERING BIRDS (Bulneck).—The aspect of the aviary, N.E., as bad, and for the winter months I should put roofing felt over the whole of roof wire netting of flight, and also a strip right along the N.E. front, 18 inches deep. With this precaution (your county is not given) I think you will be able to winter safely all the birds you name, but I think you would be wiser, unless your county is a southern one, to cage the Cordon Bleus and keep them in one of your living rooms for the winter. If you are very far north you had better cage the White Javas, Orange-cheeks, and Avadavats—though the latter would probably survive.

AVIARY QUERIES (E. E. Law).—(1) You could keep in your aviary 2 pairs Budgerigars, 1 pair each Cockatiels, Grey Java Sparrows, Red-crested Cardinals, and Madagascar Lovebirds, but this would leave your space fully occupied, and young birds must be got rid of as soon as able to fend for themselves. (2) Canary and white millet in equal parts. A second mixture of hemp, oats, paddy rice, and sunflower seed in equal parts; green food, fruit, and three mealworms or other insects for each Cardinal daily. Grit (not sand) and cuttlebone must also be supplied. (3) Javas often prove troublesome, but would be quite in order with the species named above. The editor will be glad to get your photo and notes.

AVIARIES AND BIRDS (Avic.).—Birdroom: For ventilation, the bottom inlet is better with a casing inside, so that the air cannot blow in in a current, but must filter out at each end, and a narrow slot about one inch wide at ground level. The best roof vent is a cowlpipe one, but it must be well cowled, so that a down draught is impossible. Your arrangements re the aviary (first plan) should prove satisfactory, all the plants and bushes you name are wholesome. Utmost accommodation for breeding, one foot frontage for each pair. You must of course not put any birds out into the aviary at this time of year; if you do the bulk will die during the winter. They should have gone out at least two months ago. Not knowing your county it is difficult for me to speak of wintering outside, but broadly speaking put out in the spring all your foreigners should weather any ordinary winter out of doors (see reply to another querist re N. and S.).

BUDGERIGARS, ETC. (New Reader).—(1) I should advise 2 pairs Budgerigars, 1 pair Cockatiels, and 1 pair each Madagascar and Blue-wing Lovebirds. This will make a nice show, and will be better than mixing Finches and Parrakeets together, with probable disaster. You could add a cock Red-crested Cardinal and a pair of Java Sparrows, as these are usually able to look after themselves. You must part with any young that are reared when they can fend for themselves. (2) It does not matter that they remain outside at present; later on you'll find they'll seek the shelter. Fixing one-inch mesh wire netting, say 9 inches, above the roof proper, will safely guard your birds against, and protect from undue scaring from cats.

GREY PARROT (J. Park).—Unless you consult a vet., who might operate, you can only aim at keeping the bird as fit as possible. Give a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful in the usual supply of drinking-water—every third day, but if the voidings become watery-loose you must then lengthen the period between the doses. When not giving the magnesia, put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water, and continue this treatment for fully a month. If you can handle the bird, foment the swollen nostril with a hot (not hot enough to cause discomfort) decoction of camomile flowers daily dry well and anoint, only lightly, as the plumage must not be greased to any extent, with a little cooling ointment (from your chemist); after 14 days' fomenting please report progress and describe the swelling and its condition as closely as possible; try by gentle pressure if it is soft, and any signs of pus. Give the bird the usual diet—seed, fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, green food, grit and cuttlebone, but do not give any tea, coffee or milk sops, table scraps or any kind of animal food whatever. Keep it where it can get plenty of light and air without draught.

All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154,

AILING BUDGERIGAR (E. M. Musgrave).—I cannot give you date of previous reply, but it would appear within a week of the date of your query. Give the bird, for a week, one drop of Dinneford's Magnesia, by same method as you have given the whisky, every other day, and then for another month two drops every fourth day. In between, supply Parrish's Chemical Food in the drinking water, and a spot or two on rusk. Foment the legs and feet daily with hot water (not hot enough for discomfort), dry with a cloth, and then paint with neat whisky; continue this for a month and then report progress. While you must keep it strictly free from draught, it must also have light and air. At this stage there is a possibility that the trouble has become chronic, and if there is no improvement in a month, it would be kindest to have it painlessly destroyed—the bird has evidently been in a bad way for some time—it is very possible the trouble is constitutional, in which case nothing can be done. Nutshell Booklet, "Budgerigars," would give all details as to food and general treatment, 2½d. post free from our Manager. Give us full particulars a month hence, and I will then give an opinion as to whether further treatment will be of any use.

CHEMICAL FOOD, ETC. (Green Amazon).—Chemical food will answer quite well, but as it has a constipating tendency you must keep the bowels regulated by an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia. Continue to use both the above and the sulphur for some time yet. A Parrot ought to get a bath once a week, choosing a warmish genial day for the purpose, and keeping strictly out of draught till it is dry. If it is tame enough to come out of its cage, let it have a bath in any shallow vessel, but if it shirks the bath, then you must spray it, using a mist sprayer. The bird will be the better for it, and should have a bath, though these can be less frequent during the winter, and omitted during exceptionally severe periods.

FOR EXHIBITION (Foreigners). — Gouldians, Masked, Grey, Golden-breasted, and Orange-cheeked Waxbills; Tiger Finches, Pintail Nonpareil, Pekin Robin, Paradise Whydah, Cape Canary, and Green Singing Finch. You must choose according to competition; at large shows the rarer birds, if in condition, usually score. Soft-bills: All the following are good: Gold-fronted Green Fruitsucker, Silver-eared Mesia, Blue, Maroon, Scarlet, and Palm Tanagers. Some swear by cages for hybrid breeding, but if I were arranging a programme for myself, I should put an odd lot of birds into an aviary by themselves, taking care that there were no pairs of any one species among them—some result would be very probable. Budgerigars and Javas can be kept together. Greenfood and fruit you can give as much as birds will take. All insects named can be given in any quantities. Your query is too cumbersome to be dealt with properly, and Canary, British, and Foreign queries should not be written in one letter, but should each be on a separate piece of paper. Mr. Weston will answer you re British birds next week. If anything overlooked, repeat query next week.

Answered, this week, by H. J. FULLJAMES.

THE "TAILER" (Two Joes).—The Goldfinch has quite a long list of local names, and among these are "Proud-Tail" and "Proud-Tailor." You are right therefore in assuming that "Tailer" (as you put it) and Goldfinch are the same bird. The egg of the Starling is very pale blue, almost a "French grey."

TO GET COLOUR IN A HAWFINCH (Bird-keeper).—The only rational way to get the plumage to show at its best the colour natural to the individual bird (some birds could not be made a good colour by any method), is to feed the bird somewhat as he would feed himself in nature. Hawfinches feed largely upon berries, and a supply of these, such as you may get from now onwards will do more to improve the colour than any quantity of colour food. For the seed portion of its diet, provide sunflower, hemp, canary, rape-seed, beech nuts, and a little linseed; the latter will tend to put that polish on its plumage which goes so much in favour of a show specimen. Remember also that, like many seed-eating birds, the Hawfinch in liberty eats a good many insects. A mealworm or two, a smooth caterpillar (these latter are plentiful enough just now in the cabbage patch), and a good fat spider now and then will all help to keep your bird in good health, and, consequently, in good plumage.

HAND-REARING SWALLOWS (G. Coates).—It is, as you surmise, an unusual thing to undertake the hand-rearing of young Swallows, mainly because, excepting to those who are prepared to give them the full scope of an outdoor aviary, and to take the trouble to provide insect food for them, such a task would have no object. Swallows have been kept for a considerable period as cage birds, but only by experienced and indefatigable bird-keepers. In an outdoor aviary, with proper feeding, they have done well with some. Apart from the inadvisability of attempting to keep in a cage a bird of such wing power as a Swallow, whose food in nature consists entirely of tiny insects captured while the bird is darting at express speed through the air, a Swallow has no value as a song bird, and very little as an exhibition specimen, for many judges would pass such as being undesirable as a cage bird. For instance, the Swallow is excluded from the list of the National British Bird and Mule Club, and is not qualified to compete for any specials offered by that club. It is to be presumed that any judge who was a member of the N.B.B. and M.C. would "pass" a Swallow whether or not his club's patronage were given to the show at which he was judging. In your aviaries there is every possibility of the birds which you have been successful in rearing doing well, especially as you say "they are in lovely condition at present," and it will be interesting to hear of their progress. In any case, it would seem from the photograph you kindly sent that the birds are too young to get away on their migratory journey if you set them free. If you succeed in keeping the birds in health, the Editor will be glad to hear from you again, and to publish the picture in one of our special numbers. It would not reproduce satisfactorily in an ordinary issue.

CHAFFINCH NOT "TIGHTENING-UP" (Wag).—Glad to hear that you found useful the advice re Yellowhammer. I think you are not feeding your Chaffinch sufficiently well. Mixed Finch seed is very well as an extra, but the bird needs a stock mixture made up somewhat as follows: Canary seed one pint, German rape, half a pint, teazel one pint, and charlock half a pint. Give it also, occasionally, not all at once, linseed, maw-seed, sunflower, broken walnuts, hemp, thistle, beech kernels, and any wild seed you may be able to obtain. Sprouted turnip, or rape, or radish seed is greatly relished. Success in bird-keeping depends upon varying the diet of one's birds, not in giving mixed Finch seed and cod-liver oil food twice a week as you say you have been doing. Further, the Chaffinch in nature lives upon insects as long as he can get them, and in captivity a good insectile mixture is a necessary addition to the seed diet. Try your bird with any insects, or grubs you can procure, gentles, smooth caterpillars, spiders, etc. You should get Nutshell No. 13, which gives not only the proper food for a Chaffinch, but much other information regarding the bird.

MULES WITH "FLESH COLOURED" SKIN (A. Dudley).—It is difficult to imagine birds with any other than "flesh coloured" skins. What other colour do you think the Goldfinch Mules should be? Glad to hear that your birds have done so well, but the Goldfinch-Canary cross is quite an ordinary one, and your birds would have no especial value unless they are good enough to hold their own in strong competition. This you may easily find out for yourself by entering any show. It is not in our province to name any "likely customer." Put your own price on them, and advertise them on approval in CAGE BIRDS if you wish to part with them.

THE COLOURS OF SHOW CAGES (W.J.M.).—This is mainly a matter of individual taste, plus a consideration of the tone of colour of any individual bird. Two birds of the same species would not look equally well in the same coloured cage, and you must use your judgment in each case. Speaking generally, the best colours for the birds you name would be Chaffinch and Bramble, holly-green, not too deep; Greenfinch, French grey, or white with the slightest dash of pink; Bullfinch, pale blue; Siskin, royal blue; Linnet, Redpoll, Snow Buntiug and Ortolan Bunting, dark holly-green, very dark for the Snow-Bunting, especially if he has plenty of white at the time of showing. By the way, an Ortolan Bunting is not sufficiently often a visitor to us to be considered a British bird, and most judges would "wrong class" such a bird, or at least pass it. They do win under some judges, so you may take your chance if you choose.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS

should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A. Wright.—Communicate with Mr. J. Dewhurst, 52, North End Road, West Kensington, London, W., who we think would fix up the matter for you.

Identity of Bird (E. E. Saw).—It is quite impossible even to make a guess at the identity of the bird without fuller particulars. It may be a British bird or an escaped foreign bird. If you will give more details one of our experts will doubtless be able to identify the bird for you. You do not even state the size. Glad to hear that you find our paper interesting, and we shall be pleased to receive the photograph mentioned and to publish it if suitable.

The Open Season for Catching (F.B.).—Under the Wild Birds Act of 1880, the catching of certain wild birds named in a schedule is prohibited between March 1 and August 1. Local authorities, upon application to the Secretary of State, stating reasons for their application, may be granted power to extend either the schedule or the close time, as concerns their own districts, and practically every county, and, in many cases, parts of counties, have so extended the schedule or the close time. You should apply to the police authorities of any county in which you are interested, or to Messrs. Wyman and Co., Fetter Lane, E.C., for particulars goveruing any individual district. The price of these local orders is one penny each, plus postage. If you would like further particulars as to scope of the various Wild Birds Acts passed from 1880 onwards, you should write to Messrs. Trower and Co., 442, Caledonian Road, London, for "The Bird Dealers' and Catchers' Guide," price sixpence.

Close Season for Co. Dublin (Bird Fancier).—See reply to "F. B.," above. So far as we can gather, there has been no extension of the Act of 1889 which would apply especially to the county of Dublin, but you may discover this for certain on application to your local police authorities. If you enclosed a stamped addressed envelope with your letter to Messrs. Wyman, we cannot understand the reason of their not replying to your communication.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

A LOVER OF ALBINOS.

The Breeding of Freak Birds at Newport.

Mr. Bush, the headmaster of the Art School at Newport Technical Institute, has been concerned in rearing freaks or curiosities for something like thirty years, says "The Western Mail." He probably has had the largest collection of any person in the kingdom of white birds whose normal plumage is black or brown. Mr. Bush has studied Mendel's system of heredity, and he finds it works true in bird life. Mendel apparently did not experiment with birds. Mice and plants were his subjects. Mr. Bush has at present a dozen white Ring Doves, nine white Thrushes, one white Blackbird, three white Sparrows, and two cinnamon (light yellow) Sparrows, and one cinnamon Blackbird. Within the recent past his collection also included white Jackdaws, Starlings, Magpies, Jays, Linnets, and Robins. The white Jay was believed to be the only one living.

"Yes, I have verified Mendel's system," said Mr. Bush, "especially in the case of Ring Doves, which breed freely. A white freak bird is put to mate with one of normal colour—brown or black. The product are birds that Mendel speaks of as 'F1.' To all appearances they are all true to the normal type. But there is a trace of the albino in the blood of probably all of them. If you follow the experiment a stage further you get what Mendel calls 'F2,' and out of a hatch of, say, four, you will find three apparently normal and one quite white bird. But of the three apparently normal one only is a quite common bird. And if you could determine which one that was, exclude him and follow up your experiment with the others, you are pretty certain to get white birds. But you cannot determine which is the commoner, and so you must go on till you get a white stock.

"Here is a cage of 'F1' Sparrows (pointing to four chirpy little fellows) from a cinnamon and a common Sparrow. I expect to get one cinnamon from them in time. Yes, the freaks seem to be quite as strong and healthy as the common birds. What is their money value? Oh, it varies considerably. I never sell any of mine. I have bred a good many, and I buy others. It is a very interesting study. But neither Mendel nor anyone else has told us where the first white Blackbird or Sparrow or Jay came from or how he came to be so abnormal."

An Indictment of the Bullfinch.

Every grower of fruit or vegetables knows that the birds which frequent his garden take very considerable toll of his produce. Whether birds compensate for this toll by destroying insects which would, if left to themselves, do as much or more damage to the summer crops is a debatable question, and arguments on both sides are perennial. Perhaps there is no bird which has given rise to so much difference of opinion as the Bullfinch. In the spring the Bullfinch is probably the busiest bird of any among the budding fruit trees. Fruit-growers accuse the bird of eating large numbers of the buds and destroying many others, while the out and out defenders of birds claim the Bullie only takes buds which already contain insects which would prevent the development of the fruit, and that, therefore, the damage that the bird does is absolutely nil. The latest light on the question is furnished by Mr. W. E. Collinge, the editor of the "Journal of Economic Biology." In that journal Mr. Collinge states that he made an analysis of the contents of the stomachs of 308 Bullfinches which were killed at different seasons in five counties. As the result of this analysis, it was found that from January to May the food of the Bullfinch "consists largely of fruit buds and fruitlets, and in addition to those which are eaten, an equal, or even larger, number are wantonly destroyed by this bird." Mr. Collinge further states "that the Bullfinch is for quite half the year most destructive in fruit orchards, causing considerable losses to growers, which far outweigh any little good it may do in keeping down the spread of weeds. Indeed, its value in this respect is extremely doubtful, for it certainly helps in the distribution of such seeds as dandelion, dock, groundsel, ragwort, charlock, etc."

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same.

Is there a Fumeless Lamp?

Sir,—Can any kind reader tell me how I could make or where to buy a fumeless lamp for lighting purposes in a bird room?

The Breeding of Skylarks in Captivity.

Sir,—In a recent issue of your valuable paper I read with interest of a fancier breeding Skylarks in captivity. Being a lover of these birds, I, with other fanciers no doubt, should be delighted if Mr. Marsh would kindly give us a few details on the subject. It is to these old hands of many years' experience that we novices must appeal for information, which I have no doubt will be forthcoming, and will be appreciated by many readers, like myself.

Holders for Twigs when Using Birdlime.

Sir,—Some time ago I noticed a reader enquiring about holders, or butts, for use with limed twigs. He should take a strip of strong paper (about two inches wide and six inches long) and roll it round one of the twigs he is going to use, then glue or gum the paper together into a solid roll. When set, draw out the twig, and cut the paper tube into pieces one inch long, then you have real good twig-holders, and easily made.

A Word from the Ex-Hon. Secretary.

Sir,—I beg that you will kindly allow me to notify the County members of the Kent County C.B.A. that owing to my departure from Dover I have handed over the duties of hon. secretary to Mr. H. Wood, Snargate Street, Dover, and I am sure the association will benefit by having a permanent resident as secretary. I take this opportunity of thanking all the members for their kind assistance in the past, and especially in the present, for I am glad to say that owing to several local members consenting to take over a few of my birds I will sustain little loss and be enabled to continue in the Fancy. Wishing the association the success which it deserves and the best of show seasons to the members, I beg to remain a brother fancier,

A Hybrid Breeder's Perplexity.

Another Perplexed Reader Asks the Same Question.

Sir,—I was pleased to read "Perplexed's" letter in your last issue on the subject of "unfertile eggs," as I, too, have had a very disappointing season with my Bullfinch hens and Norwich cock Canaries. I have had 51 eggs from three pairs, namely, British hen Bullfinch and cock Canary, 19 eggs; Siberian hen Bullfinch and cock Canary, 7 eggs; and British hen Bullfinch and cock Canary, 5 eggs. All the eggs were unfertile, although I have had the hens since 1910, with the exception of the Siberian hen, which I bought last December. The cocks are two years old. I may add that I keep the birds in double breeding cages, that they agreed well, the cocks fed the hens and mated many times, so I thought I must have good eggs. I shall be very glad if any of your numerous readers will kindly give me a few hints, and say if it will be any use trying the hens next year with the same cocks, especially the Siberian hen, which is a beauty.

Are Red Mite Unavoidable?

Sir,—Almost every week I read in our paper, Cage Birds, of the troubles of bird-keepers through the plague of red mite, and it would seem that these pestiferous insects are looked upon as an unavoidable accompaniment of cage bird keeping. It is never "Are red mite ubiquitous?" It is always "How can I destroy them?" I know that it is a doctrine with many bird keepers that where there are birds there are red mite, and Cage Birds scarcely ever comes out without some advice as to how to destroy them. Paraffin, soap, wax, petrol, creosote, and messy and smelly things without end are recommended, doubtless with good, if temporary, results. My object in writing this letter is to reply to my own question stated above, viz., "Are red mite ubiquitous?" The answer is "No." They cannot exist without crevices, for if there is nowhere for them to hide during the day they cannot live. They do not stay upon the body of the bird, but only come out of their hiding places to prey upon the unfortunate bird at night, when it should be sleeping. I therefore earnestly advise the bird keeper to look to his cages? This applies very particularly to the keeper of just a bird or two, one who perhaps does not know that such a thing as a red mite exists, and who, when he sees his Canary puffed out and miserable during the day, and wanting to do nothing but sleep, writes to Cage Birds detailing the sorrows of the bird, and asking how he may doctor it. Most of such birds are Canaries, and these are mostly kept in "all wire" cages. These cages are fitted with a wooden boss, by which they are hung to a chain. Let the owner of such a cage unscrew this boss, and I will promise him a sight that will surprise him. He will find the underparts of it smothered with an impalpable dust like the finest flour. This dust represents the excreta of thousands of red mite, and the wooden boss is their sleeping place. The body of the poor bird is their nightly hunting ground. The remedy is obvious; destroy them in their haunt. If you must keep your bird in such an entirely unsuitable cage as the all-wire "parlour" cage, periodically unscrew the boss and thoroughly scald it. These cages, also, are frequently covered over at night by a cloth "to keep the bird from draughts," and such a cloth becomes peopled with hundreds of red mite which are invisible to the naked eye. A cloth used for such a purpose should be scalded each morning when taken off the cage and dried for the next night's use. The ends of the perch or perches also provide retiring places for red mite, and these should be dipped daily in boiling water. People who keep many birds, and who are frequently renewing their stock, have red mite, more or less, always with them, for a new bird, or its travelling cage, may import hundreds into a room, but the owner of a pet bird or two should never be troubled with them.

A Catching Query.

Training a Kitten Not to Touch Birds.

Sir,—I notice a correspondent asks how to make puss dislike a bird in a cage. Take the bird out of the cage. Put the cat in. Bind round the cage a piece of string, leaving two feet to spare, with a loop at the end, which loop you hang over a nail. Spin the cage round like a top. Then open the cage door. Out puss will flop, and bid good-bye to a bird in a cage for evermore. She won't look at one, much less go near it.

The Affairs of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland.

Sir,—In replying to "Provincial's" communication of last week, I can assure him that everything is going on in apple-pie order with our society's committee of management. The small responsibility attaching to ring steward is held in conjunction with the vice-chairmanship by our new hon. secretary; he has a good grasp of things generally. The treasurership has been finally pressed upon Mr. Power, who has reluctantly accepted the responsibility. "Provincial" cannot assume that Mr. Hawkins is president; his letter to the Fancy Press precludes that assumption. The vice-presidents are Mr. Rooney, a one-time exhibitor, and a gentleman from Dundalk, who is a good exhibitor. The arrangements for forthcoming show are being well looked after; already several new innovations have been adopted, which will help to keep birds at home. The new scheme of hanging birds around the walls and producing catalogues without advertisements does not appeal to more businesslike fanciers. It is wrong to believe the society is on the down grade because Messrs. Holley and Stewart are no longer in office or that Messrs. Gillen and Birse and a few others who did not attend committee can give you any information about matters affecting the society's welfare.

Extraordinary Charge Against Magpies.

Reader Says They Eat Six Weeks Old Ducks and Chickens.

Sir,—The destructive Magpie has been playing sad havoc in the poultry yards in North Hunts during the past season. Within a radius of about half a mile three Magpies' nests have been found with young ones in them nearly ready to fly. One nest had five young, another seven, and the other six. Only fancy what these young at that stage could consume, and they are not at all particular what they go for. As there are not any young Pheasants or Partridges about in these parts, they confine their destruction to the poultry yards. One yard lost a fine brood of young Duckling, six weeks old, before one of the culprits fell to the gun after hours of vigil. It had been thought that stoats or weasels or rats had been at work, but the watcher saw the Magpie in the act of taking one away. The nests were then sought and the young taken to be brought up by hand. Probably some of them may one day grace the show bench. Other poultry keepers have lost young chicken as well as ducks, but the preference seems to have been for the young Ducks. No doubt young of other birds have been destroyed in like manner, and all this near a town. The keepers and game preservers have probably driven them from the woods, where game is preserved, for I cannot remember ever hearing of so many breeding pairs being about as this year. The only other explanation I can assume is that boys do not do so much birds'-nesting as they used, or the nests would have been found and the eggs taken. The destructive but pretty Magpie may be easily brought up and trained, and makes a desirable pet for anyone who has plenty of room to keep such a large bird and make a pet of it, and teach it to talk.

Novel Style of Nest Box Highly Recommended

An Irish reader claims many advantages for a box hung outside the end of the cage.

Sir,—Being a constant reader of your valuable paper, Cage Birds, I wish to give its readers a hint as regards the nests they use. I have tried several styles, and have found the nest of which I send diagrams by far the best. It is hung on the outside of the cage. It has many advantages, amongst which are (1) if anything goes wrong with the eggs or young, or you wish to examine the nest, it can be taken off easily with the minimum of disturbance to the birds; (2) the young never leave the nest until fully fledged; (3) the nest pan being made of tin, perforated with square holes, the nesting material keeps in it firmly, and at the same time there is ample ventilation the eggs and young being "well aired"; (4) the nest being outside the cage, I find does away with the danger of the cock bird breaking tho eggs or pulling the material about. Amateurs would do well to try this style of nest. My father has used it for over twenty years with great success, and at present has a good number of young, all doing well. The large sketch shows the boxes hung on a single breeder 3ft. 6ins. long, 18ins. high, and 10ins. wide. One of the small sketches is of the complete nest box, 9ins. by 5ins. by 4½ins., the actual nesting place being 3½ins. square. The third sketch explains the construction of the metal nest pan, 3½ins. square by ⅛in. deep, with two flanges ⅜in. wide. By the latter it is screwed to a nest-board (A), 9ins. long and 4½ins. wide, under a circular hole (B) 3½ins. across, cut out towards one end; this "nest-board," it will be seen, forms the floor of the nesting cage. I think the sketches, with this explanation, will make all clear.

Bread and Milk for Canaries.

Sir,—I am writing to tell you of my experience with a pair of Norwich Plainheads, and of how I proved the value of bread and milk. The hen went to nest and hatched out some nice healthy chicks. She fed well for a few days, but then let them die. The second nest fared the same. I was using singlo breeders, and feeding them on egg and biscuit, or egg and bread crumb, with plenty of seeding weeds, such as chickweed, dandelion, etc., and mixed seed. After the death of the second lot of chicks I thought, as my birds were all fond of milk sop, I would try that. I got a thick slice of stale bread, put it in a plate, poured some boiling water over it, just enough to soak it through, then poured some cold milk over it, left it a few minutes, then pressed it gently with my hand to squeeze out most of the moisture, being careful not to break the bread, but keeping it in the slice. After sprinkling a little soft sugar over it, I broke a small piece off, put it in the egg drawer, taking away all the egg food, but gave the green food and seed as usual. I found the birds ate it greedily, fed their young on it entirely, leaving the seed and green food, and reared the young well. This pair of birds never had any egg again, and the young birds never had any, even when they were doing for themselves. They were quite as strong as any reared on egg food. Of course, my birds were all used to sop, having had it every week during the winter, and I believe it would be quite easy for anyone to do without egg if they liked. Hoping this may be of some use to a few who have had bad feeders, or who do not want to use eggs, I send these few lines.

A Bird Lover.

A Tale of a Novice.

Sir,—Having read Cage Birds since January and noticing what a lot of good reports you publish, I thought it would be a change to have a bad report to comment on. My luck seems dead out. Early in the year I bought a cock and two hen Norwich Plainheads, also "Canaries for Beginners," ordered Cage Birds every week, and made two double breeders and fitments, etc. Like all beginners, I expected great things. But, as the prophet says "blessed is he that expects nothing, for he shall not be disappointed." I tried the cock with one hen, and after about three weeks she laid four eggs, which she didn't half sit on. Still, it didn't matter much, as they were clear. Tried No. 2; she laid four eggs, sat splendidly, and hatched two, which she would not feed. So you see it was a case of "As you were." Now, what I cannot understand is this: I tried the cock first with one, then the other, all through the season, and all I got afterwards was three eggs, all clear, at long intervals, weeks in between each egg. I might say one egg was a green egg. I am told that is a rarity. The birds came from a thoroughly reliable source. They have built dozens of nests in a sense, and that's all. I got so tired of it that I put the whole three together in one breeder and let them take their chance. But the same old story—two lovely nests and nothing in them. One hen has now been sitting on an empty nest a fortnight. I reckon she will sit there till Christmas if I let her. I fed on Canary in hopper, and, for mixed seeds, one lot millet, niger, gold of pleasure, maw, and another rape, hemp, linseed, and teazle, which I changed about every other day. Greenstuff, cuttle bone, sand, water, and proper attention. I thought perhaps I was feeding too well, and so knocked the mixtures off. But there was no improvement. The cock has sung all summer and looks in good condition now. Also the hens. What shall I do? Clear them out and have another try, or keep them for another year? I might say I have given them Parrish's Chemical Food, Epsom salts, and wormwood in drinking water at different times to try to make an improvement, but all to no purpose. Can any reader give me any advice where I am wrong? No mites or draught, room faces west, and perfectly clean. So endeth the tale of a bird-keeping failure.

Bending Cage Wire.

Sir,—I am a novice very fond of cage-making for the birds I keep, and I would be glad if any wire-working cage-maker would tell me how they make the fancy turns and twists in all-wire cages, and also how they bend wires for the square top cages to have them all one size.

NOVICE.

The Escapade of a Three Weeks Old Canary.

Sir,—While cleaning out breeding cages a few days since I was taking out the sand and seed husks which had got below the sand trays of one compartment in which there was a Norwich hen and four young three weeks old. One of the youngsters darted out of the cage and flew outside into the fruit trees of a garden some dozen yards away, and it spent the remainder of the day flying from tree to tree and over the housetops. I gave it up for lost, until, in the evening, a friend suggested trying his double-trap cage, into which I put the hen and placed it on the garden hedgerow. The first call of the hen was answered by the youngster, and it made frantic but futile attempts to get into the cage to be fed, never going on to the top, only flying on the sides of the wires, and occasionally getting a bite or two from the hen. Then darkness came on, and it spent the night in the trees. The night was cold, with a heavy dew, and I did not expect it to be alive the next morning, but I rose early and hung out the trap cage containing the hen on a nail in the wall of the house. I had barely got back into the house when out of a pear tree straight into the cage it flew, and, with a click, down went the trap. It was speedily transferred, along with the hen, to the breeder, and then the fun began. "Hungry" wasn't the word! It was a full half-hour before its appetite was appeased, after which it was none the worse for its adventure.

JOHN WATSON.

The Novice Question at the Shows.

Sir,—I see I was misled in my statement re a member joining in December, and I apologise for the mistake. What do I want, Mr. F.? Why, a section for novices at open shows. No one, I know, can get more than twenty shillings out of a sovereign, but my contention is this: Put a section on for novices at open shows, and what is lost in the amateur section would be regained in the novice, for I am certain more novices would enter. Are open shows run for the advancement of the Fancy or to be paid in honorariums for services rendered by different members? I know a man is worthy of his hire. What I am fighting for I know is appreciated by many, yet they sit on their heels and let others do all the fighting, and they do all the grumbling. I bear no member malice, quite the reverse. If I were to stay in the Ardwick Society for another twenty years at the present rate with my fancy, I should still be a novice. I cannot show amongst novices in open shows. Why was I a non-supporter at our late show? For the same reason as others, I had no F.F. to show. Why don't I couple up and be satisfied and attend the meetings? No one can say I have grumbled whatever the judge's award has been to my entries, and if every member would put in as many attendances as I do with my different turns of duty, there would always be a room full. I often attend at personal inconvenience not only to myself, but to others (others beside my fellow-members will understand me when I say others). I have been accused of saying there are no sportsmen at Ardwick; quite the reverse. Now come, novices, if you want this section put on, let the different societies see that you mean to have bread and not a stone, and they will meet you one way or another.

To Combat the Cat.

Some Drastic but Effective Methods.

Sir,—I have watched with interest—as a sufferer from their depredations—the correspondence re the cat nuisance. I think the last letter, descriptive of the trap, an admirable one, except that the cat in the trap might attract the attention of its owner, and lead to reprisals which might inflict further annoyance upon the man who has dared to erect an aviary upon his premises. Whether such an ingenious contrivance could be effectively used is largely a matter of the situation of the house. May I record my experiences "pour encourager les autres"? As a preliminary measure, I took the trouble to affix wire 2½ft. high from the bottom of the fence, and some a similar height above it, all round my garden, threading a clothes line wire through the top to prevent sagging. The "outfit" cost close on £1, but did that prove a barrier to felis domesticus? Not on their nine lives! They swarmed up the supporting stakes, and, dropping upon the roof of the shelter, used to "chivvy" the birds up and down by running over the wire roof of the outdoor portion. But I must not kill one, so I resolved to do it by deputy, and I achieved my object in one instance to my certain knowledge. I procured some tar, and, mixing as much hot grease with it as I could, I smeared the roof of the shelter to half an inch in depth. The cats landed all right, but on making contact with the greasy tar they "greased off," taking plenty with them. Such a mess did one old brute make in his own home that the owner killed him to save his carpets and furniture! When renewing the tar, let some days elapse after the first lot has dried, and scatter some cement on it. If marks of cement appear on the wire roof it will show that the pussies have forgotten the last dose and will be ready for another. Another wheeze: Attach some very tiny fish-hooks by the catgut to the top of the wire. When the cat scrambles over, the hooks will remove sufficient fur to stop it coming again—till it has grown some more, at any rate. The minute hooks will not seriously injure the cat but make it the object of inquiry round the neighbourhood as to how it hurt itself. Again, get a few "breakback" rat traps at about sixpence each. Either place unbaited where the creatures walk or bait and place near their entrance. A cat which treads upon it or smells it will receive a crack on the foot or nose which will expedite its movements towards its own place. As these traps are not sufficiently strong to hold a cat, it does not stop to prove where it was trespassing when retribution befell. A bloater laid under some cayenne pepper on the shelter roof also acts as a deterrent, as if they smell this substance they do not as a rule stop to describe the sensation. I once saw a "fall" made with four strong springs which were forced into catches by being pulled down with a rope which reached the ground. On the trespasser alighting upon the board, it released the springs, and as the board was covered with greased zinc "puss" was shot off into space. The contrivance being fixed near a pigeon loft, the cat got "a drop too much," if it sought to destroy one of the splendid racers kept there. I am reckoning to be classed as a brute by a certain section of the community, but I can bear this as long as the law demands that a person must sit up day and night to see a cat destroy a valuable bird, and then only secure the right of suing for damages at the price of the life of an innocent feathered pet.

JUSTICE.

A Question for Hybrid Breeders.

Should We Make More Use of the Hen Britisher?

Sir,—Now that the breeding season is over, and breeders are comparing realisation with anticipation, the time seems opportune for asking the question, Do Hybrid breeders make enough use of the hen Britisher? Most breeders like to put up a pair or two for Mule and Hybrid breeding, in the hope of getting a special "hit," and not depending solely on all their pairs for a chance result. Even if you get the eggs there is many a slip between the cup and the lip, and eggs do not always mean young birds. I have had a bitter experience of this—two nests of nine good eggs from the Redpoll-Bullio cross, and could not raise a bird; also fertile eggs from the Siskin-Bullie, which I have placed under Canaries, but failed to raise one. My object in writing this letter is to get fanciers to launch out a bit, and go in for the hen British bird, and give her as great a chance as the cock bird has had. Many a time I have got eggs from the hen Goldfinch, Linnet, Greenfinch, Bullie, Siskin, Twite, and Redpoll, even without a male bird of any kind being with them. Why should not these birds be used as much for Hybrid breeding as the cocks? The hen may not have so much to do with the beauty of plumage as the cock, but she certainly has a little. The hen Chaffinch, which was once considered not to be worth its keep as a cage bird, has produced something to bring its name before Hybrid breeders, and stimulate them to go "one further," and so might some of the other hens if given a proper chance, especially if a large aviary could be used. If not, an aviary a good large cage out of doors might suffice. Then, again, any of these birds might be used paired to their own species. For instance, a pair of Goldfinches or Greenfinches might be put together out of doors in large suitable cages, and encouraged to breed, so as to get some young, and these would come in very useful another year for Mule or Hybrid breeding. A case came under my "ken" last season, wherein a young fancier put up a cock and hen Greenfinch in quite a small cage (he thought they were Linnets, so his knowledge of birds was not very high), and he had no trouble at all in raising a nest of young on ordinary seeds. As soon as some one told him they were "green Linnets" he let the lot go in disgust. Now, if the hen Greenfinch was paired to a good large Norwich or Lancashire Plainhead, a good Mule might be bred; not a clear one; one could not expect such from this cross, but a good dark one might be the result, and that would be worth getting. The hen Siskin, also, breeds very readily in a cage, and, mated to a good Norwich or Goldfinch, might breed a useful bird. The hen Bullie has now been used in so many crosses that it is perhaps needless to name her with any particular bird unless it be that hitherto impossible cross, the Chaffinch one; but I still have hopes, and expect it will come, that the cock Chaffinch paired to a Bullfinch will prove a parent. She might be tried with the Siskin, as I believe this cross has not been got as yet; also with the Twite or the Bramblefinch, this hen Bullfinch will come to the front ere long, the same as the hen Bramble has done. There is also the hen Mealy Redpoll, a very interesting little bird, and one which most readily takes to cage life. This bird should produce a very interesting Hybrid if paired either to a cock Goldfinch or Siskin, or even a Greenfinch. I should always advise anyone to be on the look-out for any pied or rare-feathered hen Britishers, as it plainly shows that they are given to "sport," and it is from the "sport" that we often get something good. What to say about the hen Yellowhammer I must confess is not much, for I have never been able to get an egg from her, but where I have failed others may succeed. She might "hit" probably with some of the other Buntings. If this letter has the effect of getting some of our Hybrid or Mule breeders to give their opinions, I am sure that an interesting discussion would result.

ONE OF THE OLD ONES.

The Sparrows' Annual Combats.

Town Birds Fight Country Cousins for a Place in the Corn Fields.

The annual summer Sparrow comedy in the country cornfields has now begun, says a writer in the "Daily Mirror." It is really a kind of sparring or pecking contest between two types of Sparrows—the desperate little London Sparrow on his holidays and his fat, bucolic, dull-witted cousin of the country. Every minute of the day there are exciting one-minute fights, conducted without anyone to call "Time!" save perhaps Farmer Larkins' man, who carries an ancient gun, and sometimes is so annoyed at the number of the noisy combatants that he fires into the heart of the fray. A rather unsporting referee! But then both camps of Sparrows are robbers, marauders, attracted to the fields of corn by the ripening wheat ears or the sweet, swelling barley.

Tired of London Courts.

Trust the London Sparrow to find good things to eat! Tired of the dusty London courts and streets, where hungry cats are ever on the prowl, the Sparrow annually migrates into the country, where he hopes to obtain a nourishing and restful holiday.

"My dear," chirps the cock Sparrow to his wife, as they soar over the chimney-tops, "I know a field where there are thousands of wheat ears that we can eat all day to our hearts' content."

But the town Sparrow is not the only one fond of ripe corn. His arrival is watched with a jealous eye by the country Sparrow.

A Challenge to Fight.

Thus the bird comedy begins—the great sporting contest between clumsy strength and nimble sharpness born of the streets.

With dialogue running something like this:—

Country Sparrow (shrilly): Hullo! Who are you?

London Sparrow: Tut, tut! I am here to do a little harvesting. By the way, who are you?

Country Sparrow: Like your cheek! These are my wheat ears. You just get out.

London Sparrow: Get out yourself! I can come here if I like.

Naturally, this sort of thing ends in a fight. With his town experience of dodging stones and taxis, the London Sparrow is used to fights, snubs, and insults. He pecks with shrewd blows, and easily gets the upper hand of the slow-moving villager, who ends by being chased away, glad even to escape to the quietude of another field.

But in the end the country Sparrow scores. He knows nothing about town life, but he does understand farmers and guns, and the Cockney Sparrow doesn't know the difference between a gun and an umbrella. That is why so many town Sparrows never return after their summer holidays. The comedy ends in tragedy, and that is why there are so many empty, ragged nests in the eaves of London houses.

Dummy Eggs from Acorns.

Gather as many acorns as you think fit and pick those nearest the shape of eggs, then get a penny sample tin of varnish paint, stick a pin into the acorns and paint them all over. When dry you will find you have a nice lot of dummy eggs that look well, and will not damage the real eggs that the hen lays.—J. Pratt, 29, Astor Street, Bramley, Leeds.

For Fresh-caught Bullies.

When arriving home rather late with fresh-caught Bullies, before you go to bed get a cup of water and a pot with some hemp in. Then hold the bird in one hand, dip your little finger in the water first and then in the seed pot. The seed will stick to your finger. Hold it to the bird's beak, which in none cases out of ten they will open and feed for some time, and you rarely find any thick in the morning. —H. C. Ainge (Melton Mowbray).

Brimstone Removes Red-mite.

Get a pennyworth of brimstone from the chemist's. Take your cage into the yard and remove front, etc. Get two or three red-hot cinders, place them on the ground, put one good dessertspoonful of the brimstone over them, put cage upside down over the cinders at once, and leave for a quarter of an hour. Then wash cage and leave to dry, and you will find it perfectly clear of redmite.—G. Hunt (Doncaster).

Cleansing the Water Bottles.

I find the best thing to clean my water bottles, etc., is a half-teaspoonful of salt and four or five drops of vinegar; shake the bottle and it will fetch all grime and sediment off.—J. F. Blackwell (Flint).

Pitch in the Bird-room.

During the hot weather fanciers who use metal drinkers will find if the water is not frequently changed it becomes slimy. For years I have adopted the following device. Place a small piece of pitch inside tin, then with a hot poker dissolve same, turning tin so that the liquid will run all over the inside. Let it stand a few minutes, and you have got a hard and smooth lining. A wooden seed-box, or any tin that leaks, can be made watertight in this way.—H. A. Hayes (Aberkenfig).

For a Broken Leg.

Keep in the bird room a box containing a number of quills of different sizes; these are easily procured from fowls, geese, turkeys, etc. Also a small sharp pair of scissors and a reel of fine thread. When an accident happens, take a quill of the size required, cut to length desired, and split it down. Wrap the bird lightly in a handkerchief, lay it on its back in your left hand, leaving only the broken leg protruding, open the quill, and slip round the injured part. Twist a length of the thread round, and tie it securely. When the bird begins to use its claws freely you may snip the thread and release the leg.—Mrs. E. M. Sargeant, 78, Bransford Road, St. John's, Worcester.

A Cheap and Effective "Sun" Blind.

Now that moulting is in full swing and birds require shading, perhaps this idea will be useful. Make some ordinary whiting into a paste with water and apply to the glass of the bird-room window with a rag. Whilst still wet, stipple this over with a dry brush (work the brush perpendicularly to the glass). The result will be effective, artistic, and easily be cleaned off.—R. H. Gardner, 5, Prior's Wood Terrace, Taunton.

To Avoid the Red Mite.

To avoid the red mite pest in box cages, treat as follows:—Melt thoroughly half an ounce of glue in a 2lb. jam jar and then add one and a half ounces of whiting and fill up with boiling water, stirring so as to well mix, and apply this to all the woodwork of new cages before painting. Use it as hot as possible, and allow it to run well into all joints. Be sure and use glue (not size), and have it well dissolved before adding the whiting. This coat will be dry next day, and should be rubbed all over with glass paper, and then all dust be brushed out. Now get 1lb. of zinc white, ground in oil, price fourpence, and thin down with copal varnish and turps to the consistency of good milk, then take some powdered ultramarine blue and mix as much of this as would lie on a florin, with a little turps, on a piece of glass, with an old knife. Add this to the zinc white, and stir well in. This will give you a splendid paint or enamel. Apply with a brush, and, when the first coat is hard, lightly rub over with glass paper, and give another coat. I use wooden nest boxes also treated in this way, and the wood will wash like marble—it sets so hard. Be sure and get zinc white (not white lead).—Thomas Stanley, 212, Rookery Road, Handsworth, Birmingham.

IN THE BRENT VALLEY BIRD SANCTUARY.

Another nesting season in the Brent Valley bird sanctuary is now over, and has proved something in the way of a record. Not only have the visitors been more numerous, but the birds have proved tamer than in previous years, and have sat on their nests without disturbance in spite of the fact that they have been subjected to so much close-at-hand inspection. This gratifying circumstance, says a writer in the "Glasgow Herald," is largely due to the adoption at the beginning of the season of the new natural wood nesting-box, which practice had shown to be preferable to the old plain formal-looking box.

But the difference between the two types is not only that the new one, so closely resembling the limb of a growing tree, presents more of a natural attraction to the birds, but that it opens at the top instead of at the side, as in the old pattern, thus rendering it possible to make a close examination of the sitting hen without alarming her. In fact one Blackcap seated on her nest with all a parent's pride was easily inspected at intervals by as many as 150 visitors. It may be said that the Blackcaps' nests were present in larger quantities than usual. This year seven or more were found, all of which reared a numerous progeny.

Nightingales were to be heard in plenty, but the record was in Wrynecks. Eight of these strange birds were the outcome of the patient attention shown by the custodians of the sanctuary. The Wryneck, also sometimes known as the Snake Bird, derives its name from its habit of projecting its long neck out of the nest and moving it from side to side. Another snake-like characteristic of this creature is the hissing noise made by the young when they are disturbed.

A bird that is generally very shy is the Nuthatch, but the specimens in the Brent Valley underwent the gaze of prying eyes quite calmly in the new nesting boxes. The same fact was to be remarked of the Tits, which, in spite of their reputation for hard sitting, used to desert their nests under the old system in the sanctuary, but now found apparent peace and comfort under the new style, and continued to sit on the eggs or to rear their young undisturbed.

A curious case last year was that of a pair of Bullfinches. A Bullfinch's nest containing five eggs was discovered in one of the boxes at so late a period as August 25, which is, according to the normal reckoning, about two months late. The theory was advanced that the parents were a pair of that season's birds, but this was upset by the fact that their colours were too bright for there is a marked difference in the intensity of colouring between the older and the younger birds. The conclusion was, therefore, come to that it was probably a third brood. This year, on the other hand, the first Bullfinch's nest to be discovered was at an unprecedentedly early date.

MEMBERS OF THE SHEFFIELD O.S. IN DERBYSHIRE.

Fortune again favoured us on this our second ramble of the season on Sunday, Aug. 18. We were prepared for anything in the shape of weather, as we had not had a fine day for the past three weeks in the Sheffield district, and Derbyshire had followed suit, according to reports. But a transformation awaited us on wakening on Sunday morning; the sun was shining high up in a glorious cloudless blue sky. The birds on the housetops were all alive with delight and chirping merrily. The flowers and foliage in the suburban gardens all appeared to have adopted their Sunday garb, and were looking at their best, as if to welcome Old Sol after such a long absence. About midday the clear blue sky became overcast with dark ugly clouds, and everything pointed to a change, the glorious prospects which we had welcomed with delight earlier in the morning now becoming very doubtful and everyone became resigned to a repetition of rain. Fortunately, this was only a false alarm; the sun gradually became visible, the clouds cleared away in the distance, and we came to the conclusion that Fortune was going to favour us after all—and it did. We left Sheffield by the 2 p.m. train for our rendezvous (Grindleford). Unfortunately owing perhaps to the unsettled state of the weather our party was not so large as was anticipated, but those who decided to risk all things were well repaid before home was reached at night. Immediately on leaving the outskirts of Sheffield we beheld a young Magpie, as if to introduce bird life to us and welcome us on our birdy outing. We soon reached Grindleford, and after taking the road for about a hundred yards we turned off into the woods. Immediately upon entering we were welcomed by about half a dozen Blue Tits, we then beheld Blackbirds, Thrushes, Greenies, Goldies (old and young), in fact, almost every species known to this district came across our path. The first two miles of the route were through dense wood, and it was glorious to behold the rays of the sun streaming between the branches of the trees in their radiant hue, for although we are in the middle of August, they appeared as fresh and green as though the leaves had just burst forth. As we got further into the woods the birds became fewer in number; this we could not understand at first, but on getting into the open again we soon solved the problem. All the birds were in the fields amongst the seeding grass. It was surprising the number of Wagtails of all species we came across at this stage; the country was perfectly alive with them. Some of them appeared as though they would do credit to their lucky owner on any show bench. Blackbirds and Thrushes we saw here in great numbers, also a perfect shoal of Chaffinches and Greypates revelling in a field of what appeared to be recently cut grass. Tramping on, we were frequently coming across fresh species of birds, all of which were very interesting, a Robin taking our fancy greatly. We saw various nests en route, but owing to the lateness of the season the youngsters had all deserted the nursery for a higher sphere. We were now approaching the highway, where we were surprised to meet one of our members of the medical profession, who, after attending his patients, had commandeered his motor and set out after us. Of course, he was the first back at headquarters, the Royal Hotel, Baslow, where it was arranged we should take tea. We arrived about five o'clock, all ready for a rest and good tea, which we had set before us, and every one did justice. After tea we wended our way to Chatsworth House, the seat of the Duke of Devonshire. As we had to retrace our steps quicker than we really liked, on account of time, we chartered brakes to Grindleford Station, arriving back in Sheffield at nine o'clock. Everyone expressed the pleasure and enjoyment they had derived from the outing, and all are looking forward to the next. Owing to the success attending these rambles, another one may be arranged before the close of the season.—John A. T. Woodall.

Is it Courting Disaster?

A Wagtail has been known to nest quite close to a Falcon's eyrie, and a pair of Wood Pigeons have reared young in the lower branches of a tree inhabited by a couple of Hawks.

An Insect Preventive.

A reader found a House Sparrow's nest composed of the usual collection of straw, hay, leaves, pieces of string, feather, and hair, but conspicuous among this gathering was about a dozen leaves of the pyrethrum ("Golden Feather"), a strong smelling plant, which an old country woman says "insects can't abide." Did our friend the Sparrow take it to his nest by accident, or was it as an insect preventive?

Club Reports.

CHOPWELL C.B.S.

Meeting held August 17, in Club Hall. Mr. M. Simpson, in the chair. There was a fair attendance of members. Specials were allotted to members' classes. Decided to leave specials for open classes until next meeting, Aug. 31, at 2, in Club Hall. Now, members, let us have your specials in good order, and we will be able to get schedule printed. —W. Tomlinson, Hon. Sec.

SITTINGBOURNE C.B.S.

Meeting August 12th, Mr. G. Whalford in the chair, and a good attendance of members. The meeting was great, and also was the news that the secretary had received a letter stating that the society would receive the patronage of the Kent County C.B.A. on Nov. 27th and 28th. Final arrangements were made for this great event, which I am sure all fanciers of this district are looking forward to, and I think will prove a great success.—B. Tidy, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN BORDER & S.F.C.C.

Meeting held Aug. 12, 1912. Mr. W. Smith in the chair. An interesting talk on the Scotch Fancy Canary, re patronage at shows was then held. Mr. W. Harvey opening the discussion. Mr. Graham, of Newbiggin, was elected a member. The prize-drawing held over from the July meeting was then settled, the winning numbers being: 1st 2261, 2nd 89, 3rd 229, 4th 377. Members not having paid their subs. before August 31 cannot compete for any of the club's specials.—M. C. Potts.

OLDHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

At a meeting held Aug. 13, it was decided to have the same classification with the addition of a young Mule class at our back end show at headquarters, Textile Dining Rooms, Shaw Road, on Nov. 2. After going through our business, we had an instructive debate on any variety of Canary. A vote of thanks was accorded to our friends, Messrs. Fitton and Steeple, for the manner in which they opened the debate. It was decided to have twenty minutes at our meetings in future for questions suitable to the season, and that the subject for next meeting on Aug. 27 be on moulting and colour-feeding. James Cope, Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Monthly meeting held at headquarters, Rose and Crown Hotel, Aug. 13, the chairman, Mr. T. Down, presiding. In the absence of the secretary, Mr. T. Bishop, Mr. J. Woodall undertook the secretarial duties of the evening. There was a good turn up of members. The chief item of importance was the presentation of Fishing Club prizes. Afterwards, other important business was transacted. Don't forget next meeting, Sept. 3; this is very important. All members should attend, as arrangements will be made for All England Show, which will be the biggest show ever held in Sheffield. Remember, the committee have not all the brains; they want the assistance from the members.—John A. T. Woodall.

PELTON FELL C.B.S.

Meeting held at Mr. Enoch Waugh's to arrange for our annual show, Mr. J. Stanger in chair, and we had a good turn up of members. Decided that we hold only a members' show this year, and not an open show, as we have tried an open show two years, guaranteeing all prize money, paying on day of show or first post after, and we find it does not pay, so we let it fall through. Decided to hold members' show on December 7th. Mr. J. Riseborough (Sunderland) judge. Also that we again run our annual prize draw of Canaries. We give an invitation to any fanciers to come and join us at Pelton Fell, any radius, at 1s. entrance and 5s. per year subs.—Wm. Forster, Sec.

SOUTHERN N.P. CLUB.

At a committee held in July, it was agreed that the same specials be given as in year 1911-12. Also that patronage be given to six champion open shows and four novice open shows, which should be balloted for by voting papers being sent to the London and Provincial committeemen. Mr. F. S. Matthes, 31, Rotherhithe New Road, London, was again elected as hon. secretary; Mr. L. Richardson, Post Office, Rotherhithe, assist. sec. Two new members were elected by ballot: Mr. W. Palmer, Swansea, and Mr. A. E. Morris, Bank Fishguard. The result of patronage is as follows: Champion Section, L.P.O.S. 13 votes, L.C.B.A. 10, Clapham 10, Plymouth 9, Wimbledon 9, Cheltenham 8. Novice Section, L.P.O.S., 10 votes, Clapham 9, Wimbledon 8, L.C.B.A. 6.—F. S. Matthes, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

There was only a moderate attendance at the monthly meeting held at headquarters, "Crown Hotel," Hill Street, Aug. 7, many members being on holiday. Mr. Broadhurst presided. The prize money and special prizes won at the recent N.F. show were paid out, and two nominations for membership received. A resolution was carried rescinding the minute passed a few months ago restricting advertising, and Secretary was instructed to give the necessary guarantee to CAGE BIRDS to ensure our show date appearing in Dates Fixed column. A committee meeting will be held this month to draw up classification, etc., for young stock show for approval at next monthly meeting, Sept. 4, and we hope to offer a good list of special prizes for competition. If possible, the Secretary will have on view the oak cabinet presented for most points gained at N.F. and Y.S. shows. Open show business will also be dealt with next meeting night.—J. H. Jones, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Meeting held August 10th, when a good attendance of members turned up to hear a lecture on colour-feeding given by our worthy chairman, Mr. Mennard. The usual monthly business was gone through, two new members made, and several specials were promised for our open show. Mr. Mennard then gave us, in a very clear manner, his ideas and system of colour-feeding. The main points were: He did not use eggs, but soaked a slice of bread in water, squeezed it nearly dry, and then mixed the colour food in with the back of a spoon: he did not use any oil, as he thought it had a tendency to make birds loose. After a good half-hour of questions and answers, a hearty vote of thanks was proposed and carried, to which Mr. Mennard suitably replied. To Mr. Wilson, our secretary, unfortunately happened an accident whilst at his work the other day. He fell down a hoist, about 30 feet, and is now in bed with a broken rib and a bruised leg.—J. P. Moir, Assist. Hon. Sec.

GUILDFORD AND DIST. F.A.

Committee meeting held at Trinity Chambers, Guildford, Aug. 19. Secs. reported having written to a large number of fanciers and specialist clubs asking for support at the next show, Jan. 14. In the short time which has elapsed, the replies have been very favourable, and committee are making every effort to prove the fixture one of the biggest in the South. A manual is in hand, and will shortly be ready for distribution to members. Members please help the Association by sending your subscriptions in early. Two new members elected. Watch this column for notices. An auction sale was held at headquarters Aug. 6, when stock sent by members was sold. Half the proceeds went to vendors, the remainder going to the Association. The sale was a success, being conducted by the hon. auctioneers to the Association, Messrs. Folker and Horton, and resulted in a profit of £1 2s. 3d. being handed over to the Association. Membership now open to the whole of the United Kingdom. Next great annual show January 14, 1913. Members wanted, and support in any form for this big event. Subscription, 2s. 6d. per annum. Hon. Joint Secs., G. Russell-Cox, and E. Stevens; assistant Sec., S. W. Barter, 34, Quarry Hill, Guildford.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Monthly meeting held at headquarters, Sydenham Hotel, Small Heath, August 14, before a good muster of members, the chair being taken by J. Hughes (vice-chairman). Mr. Rees elected a member (five others promised to be present but did not turn up). The secretary read the report of the past young bird show. After judge's fees, printing, and other expenses had been deducted, the balance due to the society was 10s. This, with the profit on the June show, had resulted in 19s., a splendid effort, and gave all members good cause to be satisfied with the young bird shows. The half-yearly report was presented by the sec., and showed that the cash at bank and in hand was £12 6s. 8d. The winter programme was submitted to the members, and received unanimous support, with the hopes it would be carried out. September meeting, Mr. Burke will open a debate on, "The Preparing and Choosing of Birds for Show purposes." October, washing exhibition and competition, also young stock show. November, final arrangements for the December show. It was unanimously decided to have the show as before on Boxing day. (The secretary intimated that he believed the donor of the handsome tea service might give a dinner service at this show on certain conditions, which would be given at a later meeting.) January, elect new officials for the coming year. February, general meeting and pair show. Specials were presented, also prize money paid out.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

THATTO HEATH AND DIS. O.S.

Monthly meeting held Aug. 12, at the Railway Hotel, Thatto Heath; Mr. Enever in the chair. Prize money and cards were given out to the successful exhibitors at our Nest Feather show, after which we were entertained by Mr. H. Cutler (one of our members) with a very good and instructive paper on "Wild Seeds." At the outset Mr. C. said he did not wish to pose as an authority on the subject, and that he would only deal with it as from his own experience. He had gone to a good deal of trouble to procure specimens of the different plants producing wild seeds suitable for our feathered friends, and fully described each one in a very fancier-like way; also told us where they could be gathered, and for the small amount of trouble taken the birdies would be all the better for having what a good many are denied when kept in cages. At the close of the paper, Mr. C. invited questions, and those that were asked he answered and explained, after which a hearty vote of thanks was given him for having entertained us so well, to which he very suitably replied. Mr. R. P. Bixter, another member, kindly promised to give us a paper at our next meeting, September 2, on "Norwich Plainhead Breeding," when I hope that as many as possible will turn up, and bring a pal with them, for I'm sure we shall get something worth listening to. These papers are being given with the object of keeping up the interest in the Fancy, and also to try and instruct the younger members, and to encourage social intercourse amongst us all.—H. R. Macdonald, Hon. Sec.

PUDSEY, STANNINGLEY C.B.S.

The August meeting took the form of a most interesting lecture by Mr. H. J. Chittenden (Bradford). Those present had the pleasure of hearing one of the most interesting lectures we have had for some time; the subject was Colour-feeding Canaries. The lecturer brought with him several kinds of fruit from which the colour-food is made, including capsicum fruit, Natal pods, and several samples of colour food prepared ready for use. Mr. Chittenden commenced by saying that he always contrives to keep all young together that come from the same nests, being of the opinion that if so kept it prevents plucking to a larger extent than if the birds were strangers to one another. He commenced by giving the colour in a mild form at first, and gradually increasing same till he got it to the desired strength. He gets the colour well into the birds before they commence to moult, which usually commenced at about 12 to 14 weeks, with the first round youngsters, second round at about 8 to 10 weeks, and third about 6 or 7 weeks. He generally tells them when he sees the colour striking through on the breast, and when it shows on the neck and head he starts weaning them off the colour-feed so as not to get them too hot at the top end. It is the nice even colour that is wanted, not the patchy colour. He liked to give the bath about twice a week in fine weather, it being the finest feather tightener that he knew. After the lecture, Mr. Chittenden invited questions, and he was kept well employed till a late hour. A most enjoyable evening was brought to a close by a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer.—Hugh Ralstrick, Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting Aug. 8, at the Horse and Jockey, Mr. Havenhand presiding over a fair attendance. After the usual society business was gone through, the president announced the inability of Mr. Welbon to attend and give his demonstration in cage making. As a fair number of members was present, the classification, etc., of the annual show was taken instead, and by the schedule drawn up it is hoped we have a record show. Competent judges have been selected, and as the Society now have three silver cups for competition at their annual show, I trust members will do their best and make it a grand success. A letter was read from the Sheffield O.S. re novice rule of local societies. The following were elected to form a deputation to meet the other local societies: Messrs. Havenhand, Hailstone and Perry.—W. Hailstone, Secretary.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Maskell's Hotel; Mr. Whetton presided. The sec. stated that the club had secured the patronage of the N.B.B. and M.C., also the S.Y.C.C. Decided to give 11 open classes and four novice classes, both in Norwich and Yorkshire sections. We are this year trying a new venture by giving heavily-marked or foul green class in Norwich and Yorkshire sections: also a hen Mule or Hybrid class. Mr. Alf Shellam is again backing the Hybrid section by guaranteeing six of the seven classes. Hybrid exhibitors ought surely to appreciate this sporting offer of Mr. Shellam's; we are also increasing the Borders to 5 classes. It was decided to increase the open classes to 65; also to have 7 members' classes. In extending our classification and engaging three specialist judges, we are catering for the Fancy, who we trust will support us. Messrs. W. Morgan and D. Peterson, Cardiff, were enrolled members. I should be pleased to hear from any fancier desirous of joining our society. I also appeal to the members to attend next monthly meeting, as we have important business for them to deal with.—E. Thomas, Sec., 48, Craddock Street, Cardiff.

The Shows.

BETHEL.

First show held at Bethel, Carnarvonshire, August 17, in connection with the Poultry and Horticultural Show. Entries came up very well considering the time of the year, and some rare good birds were on view. Some had to be content with lower honours for not being ready. The arrangements were all that could be desired, especially for a first venture. Classification was very good. The committee seems a very hearty lot. The show was well attended in spite of all the weather. Chairman Mr. W. Winnard, Treasurer Mr. R. T. Williams, Secretary Mr. O. H. Jones, a very courteous and obliging official, here there, and everywhere; we must give him credit for meeting and returning the exhibits at Port Dinorwic Station in good time. The committee deserve every support as fanciers all round. Mr. E. R. Roberts, Penygroes, judged, and gave general satisfaction. Specials for most points went to Messrs. Lewis, Davies, and Pritchard. Norwich special, Mr. H. Parry; Yorkshire and Norwich first feather, J. O. Williams; Natural Colour, D. Parry; Mule or Hybrid, R. E. Griffith; Local, D. Parry.

August 24th, 1912.

CROYDON AND DISTRICT F.A.

Y.B. show held August 14, in St. Michael's Hall, West Croydon. Quite a nice collection of young birds were staged, and the quality was very good, Yorks. and Borders excelling. The management of the show reflects great credit upon the able and courteous hon. sec., Mr. F. W. Capell, who gave his undivided attention to the show while open. He was assisted by a practical committee (in the cage bird section by Messrs. G. Britton, C. E. Gunnell, and G. Lisney). The society is well patronised by the gentry and chief residents of the district, and is usually visited by a number of people. The special for best bird in show was won by Mr. F. Britton with a rare bodied yellow Norwich. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and his awards were well received. NOR. CL. YELL.: 1, sp, 3, Britton, the leader thick-set, grand depth of colour, silky feather, 3rd a bird of doubtful colour, got the benefit; 2, Lock, loses in head and neck, else good feather. BUFF: 1, Lock, best type, thick-set, nice wings, rump, and tail; 2, 3, Britton, both good quality. TKD., ETC., YELL.: 1, 2, Britton, the leader grizzle tailed bird, of rare size and glossy feather, good colour, 2nd good quality, loses a bit in size; No. 3 a buff. BUFF: 1, Lock, ticked, nice head, good quality; 2, Britton, variegd., plenty of feather. YORKS., CL. YELL.: 1, 2, Britton, the leader very neat and stylish, hardly so long as 2nd, but gets up well and shows plenty of leg, 2nd more length, very nervy, and should do well; 3, Lock, not quite so stylish or so good behind the leg, nice feather; res, vhc, Soper. BUFF: 1, 2, Britton, leader best length and style, rare pose and good quality; 3, Soper, hardly so full of nerve, silky feather; res, Lock. TKD., ETC., YELL.: 1, 2, Britton, two smart Yorkies, little to choose; 3, Lock, variegd., not quite the length, and hardly so stylish as leaders; res, vhc, Soper. BUFF: 1, 2, Britton, well away; 3, Soper, very neat and nervy; res, Lock. BORD.: 1, Rev. H. A. Soames, very pretty bird; 2, Bacon, yell., very perky, scarcely so equally moulded, rich feather. TKD., ETC.: 1, 2, 3, Bacon, the leader a sweet tkd. buff, by far the best Border staged, rare shape, pretty head and good feather, 2nd and 3rd also good. MULES: 1, Bacon.

BRIGHTON C.B.A.

A small show of cage birds was held at headquarters, Aug. 14. Owing to members being away on holiday only a few exhibits turned up. Mr. J. Roast officiated as judge. Special for best in show went to Mr. C. Pearson. YORKS.: 1, spl, 2, Pearson; 3, vhc, Dandridge; hc, c, Rev. W. Miller. NOR.: 1, 2, Dean. A.O.V. CAN.: 1, Miles. BRIT.: 1, Bickuell; 2, Miles.—Will. H. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

WESTON (Near Runcorn).

Y.B. show, held August 17, in conjunction with the Weston Horticultural Society's show. The show proved a success and attracted a nice entry of over 50 exhibits, although confined to a radius of four miles. A good number of special prizes were offered in addition to the money prizes per class on sliding scale. Yorks. were very good all through, and the novice class contained some wonderfully smart birds. Norwich were very good, also the Norwich Greens, and some very promising young Crests and C.B.. birds were put down by that old and sterling fancier, J. Guy, of Runcorn. Hyde's special was won by a very typical wing marked yellow Yorks. of good standard qualifications. A few nice Linnets were on view, and a nice variegd. Goldfinch-Canary. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged, and his awards were favourably accepted. Mr. Linaker, the Chairman, worked very hard and made all very comfortable. Mr. Nancollis, the Secretary, is a fine capable person for his post, and did his duty admirably. The birds were nicely staged in the Village Hall. Mrs. Banks, of Overhill Farm, Weston, opened the show in the presence of a large representative attendance of the villagers and gentry of the district. YORKS. YELL.: 1, sp., 2, 3, Sutton, a trio of very good typical birds; first excels in all-round merit to-day, all good type and position. BUFF: 1, 2, Sutton, very fine Cin. variegd. leading, A1 type, etc. NOR. YELL.: 1, Jones, clear, A1 type, good head and well filled neck and nice feather; 2, Guy, nice body, a variegd., good feather and condition. BUFF: 1, Sutton, eye tick, lovely type, colour, feather and condition; 2, 3, Jones, fine colour clear, good type; 3rd loses in body feather to-day; vhc, hc, Grey; hc might have won had all its tail feathers been there. NOR. GREEN (7), all very good: 1 2, 3, Guy, a rare trio of youngsters; vhc, hc, Jones; c, Guy. A.O.V. CAN.: 1, 2, 3, vhc, hc, Guy, a rare nice lot of young Crest and C.B. birds in good feather and condition, very promising. A.V. MULE: 1, Harrison, nice buff variegd. Goldfinch-Canary; 2, Norton, dark buff Goldfinch-Canary. LINNET: 1, Jones grand shape, colour and mark[illegible] nice glossy feather and condition; 2, Walk[illegible]nger, and paler colour, nice markings and cond[illegible]n; 3, Orme, bonny bird, pale colour, and gives[illegible]ay a little in condition, vhc, Lenster. NOV. W[illegible]RKS., capital stuff here: 1, Norton, A1 all through, a yellow; 2, vhc, Ratcliffe, very fine Cinn. variegd. buff, in grand feather and condition; 3, Brown, [illegible]g. long, fine drawn yell., just a shade coarser in head and beak than 1st; hc, c, Poole. NOR. (9), strong set of youngsters: 1, Roberts, a grand yell. all over; 2, Hayes, good variegd. buff, in nice feather, very cobby; 3, Jones, good head and nice body, good feather and condition; vhc, Sutton; hc, Fearnett; c, Bate.
